PLANNED EARLY TO NAME COLONEL

W. L. Ward Approached Penrose Two Weeks Before Governors Met, Philadelphians Assert.

NEW YORK 'BOSS' TOLD THEM

John Nugent Tells Clapp Committee He Saw Roosevelt Himself Before Meeting Ward.

PERKINS AN ANGRY WITNESS

Progressive Leader Loudly Denounces Those Who "Vilified" Him—Ryan Gave $450,000 to Parker Fund.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—In one of the liveliest sessions held since the investigation of campaign funds began the Clapp Committee to-day heard George W. Perkins, one of Col. Roosevelt's chief supporters, denounce repeatedly with loud voice and clinched fist the "unmitigated lies" and "absolutely false" charges made by Republican leaders concerning the financing of the Bull Moose campaign, and incidentally declare amid constant wrangles with his questioners that he knew what the committee was there for.

The committee likewise learned from Thomas F. Ryan that he gave $450,000 in 1904 to help pay the expenses of the Democratic National Committee, the amount being by far the largest yet testified to by any witness.

A third feature of the day's testimony, and in many ways the most noteworthy, was the evidence that as far back as December work was being done in Philadelphia in behalf of Col. Roosevelt as a Presidential candidate, and that at least four days before the "seven Governors" met in Chicago, (Feb. 10,) William L. Ward of New York told two men from the Quaker city that he had offered Senator Penrose a place in the ranks of those planning to bring about the ex-President's nomination.

The story of Col. Roosevelt's early plans for capturing Pennsylvania in the Presidential primary and of negotiations with William Flinn through William L. Ward was told by John H. Nugent, a Republican leader, and Robert Haight of the editorial staff of The Philadelphia Star. Mr. Nugent said that he was working for Col. Roosevelt in Pennsylvania as far back as December. On Jan. 2 he received an invitation from Col. Roosevelt to come to New York. There, in The Outlook office, Mr. Nugent says he met the Colonel, discussed matters with him briefly, and was referred to Richard Quay, son of the late Senator Quay.

The question of finances came up at once, (according to Mr. Haight the question came up with Col. Roosevelt,) and Mr. Quay told Mr. Nugent to see Mr. Ward on the subject. Mr. Nugent then returned to Philadelphia and on Feb. 5, to his surprise, received a telegram from Mr. Ward asking that Nugent meet him at the Hotel Manhattan in New York. On this trip Mr. Nugent was accompanied by Mr. Haight. Mr. Ward questioned them closely about the attitude of The Philadelphia North American, Mr. Van Valkenburg's paper, and the possibility of its switching to Col. Roosevelt.

"But before that," said Mr. Nugent, "Mr. Ward was asked how Senator Penrose stood. He said he had given Penrose an opportunity to join them and that Senator Penrose had asked for ten days to think the matter over. At the end of that period, said Mr. Ward, Penrose told him he had decided to stand by Mr. Taft. 'We are going after Penrose,' said Mr. Ward.

Told Ward About Flinn.

"I had told the Colonel that it was necessary to feed the army. My work since December had exhausted my finances and I told Ward I needed funds. He asked where they could be raised and I gave the name of a man, and that man (Mr. Flinn) has paid the tolls. He has testified it cost about $144,000."

In response to questions from Chairman Clapp, Mr. Nugent said that he had discussed his visit soon afterward with his political secretary, and that he had referred to it frequently in public speeches. The treatment given to Senator Penrose by the Roosevelt managers, he said, he had described as a raw deal, especially where they were fighting for the square deal issue.

"I felt," said Mr. Nugent, "that if Penrose had gone along with the Roosevelt people, a man by the name of William Flinn would never have been heard of. But now they are saying that Penrose will be whipped from here to Halifax. As to Mr. Flinn, when we left New York, we had the impression that the Pennsylvania campaign would be financed by friends in New York."

Mr. Haight corroborated Mr. Nugent's story of the interview with Ward.

"He asked us how much money we wanted to start the Roosevelt campaign in Philadelphia," Mr. Haight testified. "We told him we wanted $15,000. He said he thought that was not exorbitant, and that he would probably get it by the next Friday. He asked me about the newspapers in Philadelphia. He wanted to know who was close to Van Valkenburg. He asked if anybody in the steel interests was close to Van Valkenburg. I told him Bill Flinn of Pittsburgh was close to Van Valkenburgh."

Mr. Haight declared that as soon as Mr. Flinn joined the Roosevelt ranks, bringing Van Valkenburg with him, the managers had promptly dropped him and Mr. Nugent. On the promise of $15,000 to start the campaign in Pennsylvania, they rented headquarters and spent some money of their own. They never got the $15,000, and they soon ceased working in Col. Roosevelt's behalf.

"We did not change our minds," said Mr. Haight, "but Flinn and Van Valkenburg simply dealt us out."

"How soon after your interview," asked the Chairman, "did Van Valkenburg come out in his paper for Col. Roosevelt?"

"Our talk with Ward was on Friday," said Mr. Haight. "Flinn got Van Valkenburg and went to New York with him and a week afterward his paper came out for Roosevelt so strongly that John Wanamaker's 'ad' was for a time withdrawn from the paper."

A Question of Chronology.

The testimony of Mr. Nugent and Mr. Haight, if full credence be given to it, throws some interesting light on the chronology of Col. Roosevelt's early candidacy. In those days it was still a matter of doubt whether Col. Roosevelt would be a candidate or whether he would support Senator La Follette. Since then it has been said by the Colonel's friends that his abandonment of the La Follette cause came when Mr. La Follette broke down at the dinner of the Publishers' Association in Philadelphia. That dinner was on Feb. 3. It was on

CUSTOMS MEN FOR WILSON.

Test Gives Him 2,000 Votes, Roosevelt 495, and Taft 40.

Dissatisfaction among customs employes with the Taft Administration was demonstrated yesterday when a straw ballot was taken at the Custom House and the Appraiser's Stores to learn preferences for the Presidential candidates. About 3,000 men, usually Republicans, were approached, and nearly 2,000 indicated that they would vote for Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Roosevelt ranked next with 495 votes, and Mr. Taft had to his credit twoscore ballots. The balance of the men said they had not made up their minds as between Taft and Roosevelt.

Most of the employes in the New York Customs Service have voted the Republican National ticket for many years, but since the "shake-ups" which have marked the Administration of President Taft there have been threats that when Election Day dawned the disgruntled element would make its dissatisfaction shown. From the start of the administrations of William Loeb, Jr., as Collector of the Port, and Francis W. Bird, as Appraiser, many old employes have been discharged or "demoted." Among these have been many veterans of the civil war, and protests have been of no avail.

Most of the employes who balloted yesterday said they never would be found voting the Republican ticket while Franklin MacVeagh remained at the head of the Treasury Department. It was asserted by the men that Mr. MacVeagh, a Chicago merchant, had no knowledge of the Customs Service when he entered Mr. Taft's Cabinet, and had proceeded in a reckless manner in having eliminated competent men from the service, while others in certain instances had been cut in salary approximating 100 per cent.

"While we were surprised at the outcome of the ballot," declared an opener and packer, "we knew that the men resented deeply the treatment they had received under Secretary MacVeagh's conduct of the Treasury Department. I do not think the employes are bitter against Mr Taft personally, but they regard the present administration of the Treasury as incompatible with their interests."

That the men conducted the ballot with great secrecy was apparent, for none of the administrative officers had an inkling of the poll. Fred W. Higgins, Appraiser of the Port, had heard nothing of it, nor had Henry M. Clapp, Special Deputy of the Port. Deputy Collector Collins at the Custom House was likewise in ignorance that a preference had been expressed.

PANIC ON BURNING BRIDGE.

Southern Pacific Train, with Hundreds of Passengers, Crossed Safely.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE CHARLES, La., Oct. 21.—Through fire and smoke, red-eyed and half-crazed, several hundred passengers on a Southern Pacific excursion train from Franklin to Lake Charles arrived here this morning. They had had a journey with few parallels in modern railroading. How close was their escape from death is matter of conjecture, but the bridge over which they passed fell just after the heavy train had crossed it, and three coaches went into a ditch.

The derailment happened at Iowa station. The trestle there was nearly five hundred feet long. The timber was of cypress and burned furiously. Sparks from a freight train are thought to have set it afire. The train was running late, and just behind was the Texas express. There was a fog so dense that the engineer could scarcely see the track ahead, and Conductor Barnett had ordered him to reduce speed to twenty miles an hour. Near Iowa station there is a slight upgrade, and the heavily laden excursion train had hard work to negotiate it. When the glow of the burning bridge appeared through the fog it was too late to check speed. Before the engineer could have reversed his engine the train would have been in the stream below. Appreciating this, the engineer did nothing. The train was going at full speed, and he let it go. Arrived on the other side, he shut off steam and applied the air brakes. Injuries to passengers from the shaking up were of a minor nature, and not more than a dozen persons suffered scratches.

Meanwhile, back in the train, quick thinking and decisive action were needed and were in evidence. Seeing the trestle ablaze, the passengers made a rush for the doors. Leveled revolvers proved arguments more potent than the swaying coaches. Men and women went back to their seats. Two babies were born to a negress while the excitement was at its height. Passengers from the derailed cars were put into the coaches ahead and brought on here.

ARCHBOLD MUST TESTIFY.

Supreme Court Orders Him to Appear In Waters-Pierce Suit.

John D. Archbold, President of the Standard Oil Company of New York, must appear at the hearing now going on before Commissioner Jacobs at 37 Wall Street, according to an order signed by Justice Ford yesterday in the Supreme Court. The hearings are being held for the purpose of determining whether Directors elected to the Board of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company last February were legally chosen. The Standard Oil Company declares that they were not.

The order which Justice Ford signed was in answer to a petition saying that the Federal Supreme Court decree destroying the old Standard Oil combination had not been complied with and that there had been no actual dissolution of the Standard Oil Company except in theory. This petition also stated that at the hearing, it was hoped, there would be disclosed a conspiracy which was said to be afoot to get control of the Waters-Pierce Company.

Mr. Archbold must appear before the Commissioner this morning.

FEELS FINE AT 109.

Mr. Weiss Believes in Hard Work—Never Liked Schools.

Macagor Weiss, who says he is 109 years old, of Beaver Brook, Penn., is visiting his niece, Miss Mary A. Bush, 88 years old, of 73 South Street, Newark. He says he fought in the battles of Gettysburg and Chancellorsville, that he has been married four times, and is as "fine as a fiddle." Hard work and plenty of it, he says, is his recipe for long life.

"I'm still good for anything," said the centenarian. "I supervise two men on my farm, and I have a little garden patch I let no one touch but myself. I like automobiling, but I must say I don't like those air machines."

Mr. Weiss says that he was born in Portland, Penn., in 1803. He said that he spent his boyhood on his father's farm, hunting and fishing. He added that he did not like school, and would rather go twenty miles hunting deer than to the district school three miles away.

DEFENSE EVIDENCE REACTS ON BECKER

Police Blotter Leaves Unaccounted For Two Early Morning Hours Just After Murder.

MAY NOT CALL BECKER

STRONG-ARM AIDS ON STAND

They Swear Raid on Rosenthal's Gambling House Was Legal and in Good Faith.

John F. McIntyre and his associate counsel for Lieut. Charles Becker marshaled twenty-two witnesses yesterday in an assault on the earthworks of evidence which the State, for two weeks, had been throwing up in the attack on the accused Lieutenant, on trial before Justice Goff in the Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. At the end of the day just one breach had been made in the walls of the prosecution, and to compensate for this damage the attack of two witnesses had reacted heavily on Becker's forces.

It had seemed at the conclusion of the day that his lawyers must put Becker on the witness stand in his own defense. It had seemed to many who have listened to the testimony since the trial started, as though Becker's testimony was the last resort left to him to prove himself guiltless of the crime with which he is charged. Becker's lawyers were uncertain as to whether the placing of Becker on the stand would be an advantageous move, but late last night, it can now be announced, it was practically settled that the accused Lieutenant should not take the witness stand. The placing of Becker on the stand might open to District Attorney Whitman the gates which were closed to him when Justice Goff barred out all reference to the Lieutenant's bank accounts.

This is not the only reason why his lawyers feel Becker should not go on the stand. They have no desire to let Mr. Whitman pry into his private affairs, his career on the police force, and in his home, and for this reason as much as because of their fear of revelations concerning his bank accounts, Becker's lawyers have almost settled once and for all the question of his giving testimony in his own defense. The possibility still exists, but it is a slight one.

Yesterday was the least successful of any which the defense has had since the introduction of evidence was placed in its hands following the closing of the State's case. At its conclusion, persons who had listened to all the testimony were agreed that Becker's position was less advantageous than when he took his seat at the counsel table shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Mr. McIntyre and his associates started the day with a definite programme. Before Justice Goff adjourned court a little after 6:30 o'clock last night it appeared as though this programme had been abandoned, for the day closed with John W. Hart just through reading into the record some of the evidence taken by commission in Hot Springs, Ark. Whatever startling quality this evidence might have possessed had been discounted by its publication in dispatches from Hot Springs, and the value of District Attorney Whitman's presence in that city at the time the testimony was taken was revealed yesterday when Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss read into the record Mr. Whitman's cross-interrogatories in reply to those presented by the defense.

Attack State's Witnesses.

Mr. McIntyre's plan at the commencement of the day's proceedings seemed to be to introduce all the smaller ends of testimony which were at his disposal. The lawyer offered no evidence along original lines yesterday. All the testimony which was heard was aimed at contradicting and discrediting the witnesses for the prosecution, and in this one success was scored and two damaging failures out of twenty-two attempts, the remaining nineteen being in the class of failures, which while failing to assist the defense, nevertheless did nothing to aid the prosecution.

Of the twenty-two witnesses, five were ex-members of Lieut. Becker's Strong Arm Squad, four were character witnesses, and twelve of the thirteen remaining were called to contradict the stories of Sam Schepps, "Bridgey" Webber, Mrs. Lillian Rosenthal, and Max Margolies. Assistant District Attorney Moss was the remaining witness, and his examination was intended by Mr. McIntyre to reveal the methods by which the State had obtained its witnesses. Justice Goff, however, declined to allow the introduction of a letter written by Mr. Moss to Jacob Abraham Reich, the self-styled Jack Sullivan, and Mr. McIntyre was forced to excuse the assistant prosecutor with his purpose unaccomplished.

William Duggan, the former partner of Val O'Farrel when that private detective, now at work for the defense, was a detective of the Central Office, gave the only testimony of the day which seemed of value to Becker. He contradicted flatly the denial of "Bridgey" Webber that he had accused Herman Rosenthal of instigating the robbery of Harry Vallon's stuss game, and also the attack on Webber by a thug, in which his jaw was broken.

Time for Meeting Conspirators.

Lieut. Ernest L. von Diezelski and Patrolman William J. File were the witnesses whose testimony reacted on the defense. Von Diezelski was called to testify as to the hour at which Lieut. Becker reached the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station. Frederick Hawley, the ex-reporter for an evening newspaper, had testified that it was prior to 4 o'clock when Becker arrived at the station house—that it wasn't much after 3:30, in fact. Lieut. von Diezelski, bringing his station house blotter to aid his memory, read from it yesterday his entry that Becker had reached the station house at 4:25 o'clock. It was 2:27 o'clock when a telephone call was sent from the station in the Times Building to Becker's home. The prosecution has proved this, and "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose has testified that it was he who sent the message telling Becker of the murder. Thus two hours less two minutes of the Lieutenant's time on the early morning of the murder remains unaccounted for, and it is in this period that the prosecution contends he kept the engagement with Rose, Webber, Harry Vallon, and Sam Schepps in front of Webber's poker room, the engagement which Becker contends was never made and never kept.

Hawley's testimony, in so far as it won belief in the minds of the jurors, limited the time unaccounted for by Becker to an hour or a little more, a period which

HUNTINGTON BUYS $500,000 LIBRARY

FINE EARLY ENGLISH WORKS

His Latest Acquisition Gives Huntington One of the Finest Libraries in America.

The fine library of Beverly Chew, noted here and abroad for its remarkable collection of rare and valuable copies of early English authors, has been sold for $500,000 to George D. Smith, the bookseller, and by him resold en bloc to Henry E. Huntington. This news, spreading among book collectors last evening, caused much interest and great surprise because it had not been known generally that Mr. Chew had decided to part with his famous literary treasures.

Mr. Huntington declined to discuss the matter last night. He said that THE TIMES reporter had better see Mr. Chew about it. Asked if he would deny the purchase, he replied that he would not.

Smith's Bidding for Huntington.

It was George D. Smith who bought for Mr. Huntington some time ago the celebrated library of the late E. Dwight Church of Brooklyn, containing one of the most complete collections of Americana in the world. Mr. Smith also sat side by side with Mr. Huntington during the sale of the first part of the Robert Hoe library, and bought for him many of the highest priced works then dispersed. It was for Mr. Huntington that he paid $50,000 for the first edition of the Gutenberg Bible, the highest sum ever given at public auction for a book. Mr. Smith seemed to be bidding for himself at that time, and when he called out $50,000, after a spirited competition with other collectors who sought possession of the great rarity, the Gutenberg was knocked down to him in his own name. It was then, with the consent of Mr. Huntington, he announced that the latter was the real purchaser of the costly work.

Mr. Chew for a long time has been a well-known attendant at the rare book auction sales at Anderson's. Another member of his family, Phineas P. Chew, is one of the executors of the Robert Hoe estate. Beverly Chew, by purchases here and abroad, gathered together first and rare editions of nearly all the old English writers.

A Few of Its Treasures.

Included in the collection are scarce works by Drayton, Dryden, Brathwaite, Francis Bacon, Beaumont and Fletcher, "rare Ben Jonson," Congreve, Wycherly, Farquhar, Richardson, Fielding, De Foe, Lydgate, Bunyan, Robert Burton, Thomas Churchyarde, Colley Cibber, Daniel Defoe, Izaak Walton, Charles Cotton, Sir William Davenant, Thomas Durfey, Oliver Goldsmith, Dr. Johnson, and James Boswell, Sir Robert Howard, Charles Lamb, Hugh Latimer, Andrew Marvell, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Smollett, Spenser, Milton, and many others. Chief among the treasures is the Shakespeareana, including a copy of the "Poems" printed on vellum.

Arthur Swann, through whose hands as cataloguer has passed great numbers of the scarce old volumes of the early English writers, spoke last evening in high praise of Mr. Chew's collection. Walter M. Hill of Chicago, one of the best known rare book dealers in the West, who is on here attending the sale at Anderson's of the library of Charles C. Johnston of that city, said that the Chew library was highly thought of by collectors in this country and in Great Britain, and that its purchase by Mr. Smith and resale to Mr. Huntington was one of the most interesting and most important things that had happened in the world of bibliophiles in some time.

By this purchase Mr. Huntington is now the possessor of one of the finest libraries in America. In obtaining the Church library he became the owner of one of the most notable collections of Americana extant, and his purchase of the Chew library now makes him equally fortunate in his possession of rare and valuable early English literature.

ENTER BUFFET LUNCHEON.

Baltimore Society Sets Its Stamp Upon Economical Entertainments.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 21.—"Buffet luncheons will take the place of elaborate dinners and suppers in the social world this season," said William F. Lucas to-day. "Fashions in eating change the same as they do in women's dress, but I think the high cost of living is responsible for the buffet luncheon becoming popular."

Years ago old Maryland families would not give a dinner or supper unless it was prepared in their own kitchens by the family cooks, and the mistress of the house personally looked after certain entertainments. For several years the tendency has been to give fewer dishes at dinners.

Heretofore many persons have left the selection of the menu in the hands of the caterer without regard to cost. The high cost of living has changed that. People go over prices very carefully with the caterer now, and one or two dishes are selected where three and four were given a few years ago.

The steward at one of the clubs says that persons in ordering dinners this season limit themselves to a very few dishes. "The long course dinner is out of date," he says, "and a dinner with two or three good dishes has taken its place."

GREAT BATTLE DUE AROUND ADRIANOPLE

LEMNOS SEIZED BY GREEKS

Turks Shell a Bulgarian Port—Servian Regiment Said to Have Been Annihilated by Mines.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 22.—There is very little real fighting in the Balkan war to record. The armies have not yet got into touch, and what fighting is reported has been largely in the nature of skirmishes.

But signs of the imminence of a great battle multiply. The war correspondents and Military Attachés have now gone to the front with the Bulgarian Army. This is taken as an indication that the concentration of troops before the battle is now complete.

According to official news published in Sofia, the Bulgarian troops are continuing their advance along the whole line. The advance guards, having got within touch of the fortifications around Adrianople, are now directing their attention to Kirk-Kilisseh as a preliminary to a great assault on Adrianople.

It is estimated that the Bulgarians, with the Servian contingent whose presence with the main Bulgarian force has been reported, should muster at least 325,000 men, with 600 field guns. The Turks should be able to place 200,000 men in line, with 300 guns.

There is a hint in one Sofia dispatch that the Bulgarians are aiming to destroy the railway south of Adrianople, thus cutting off that town from Constantinople.

In other quarters minor Bulgarian columns are developing an attack against the Salonika-Constantinople Railway, which is only second in importance to the Adrianople-Constantinople line. Yet another column is marching down the Struma Valley, and, with the aid of the guerrilla chief, Sandansky, is said to have inflicted heavy loss on a small Turkish force south of the Servian frontier.

Turkish-Servian Battle Near.

An important battle is also imminent between the Turks and Servians. The Servian main army, pushing down the railway from Ristovatz, has outposts close to Kumanovo. A large Turkish force is marching on Kumanovo, and a decisive action in this quarter of the field cannot long be delayed.

A telegram from Vienna says it is announced from Salonika that Zekki Pasha has concentrated 100,000 men at Kumanovo, with numerous artillery and machine guns. The Servians also have probably 100,000 men.

The Greeks are reported in a telegram from Athens to have seized the Island of Lemnos, near the mouth of the Dardanelles.

The Turkish fleet in the Black Sea has bombarded the little Bulgarian port of Kavarna, and, according to a Constantinople dispatch, has sunk a Bulgarian torpedo boat off Varna.

From Constantinople also comes the information that the General Staff will not proceed to Adrianople and the front before Thursday. The war correspondents will start to-night. Hence it is gathered that the Turkish military authorities do not expect anything decisive before the end of the week.

According to The Times's Constantinople correspondent, Turkey will be able to mobilize 700,000 men in European Turkey by the end of the month.

Fears Siege of Adrianople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 21.—It is admitted here to-night that the Bulgarians are established about twelve miles from Adrianople and that a big battle is imminent.

The Governor of Adrianople has issued a proclamation warning the residents to husband their food owing to the possibility of an investment of the town. He recommends those able to depart to do so.

It is announced that an important concentration of the Bulgarian forces has taken place at Kostendil, in the southeast of Bulgaria, the objective of which is doubtless the Struma Valley, which is the easiest road to the heart of Macedonia.

Official information concerning a Bulgarian reverse says that the Bulgarians concentrated at Hanlar, in the Dospat region, were induced to advance into Ottoman territory by a feigned retreat of the Turks. A strong Turkish force then suddenly attacked the left wing of the Bulgarians, who suffered heavily.

A dispatch to a Constantinople paper says that the Turkish warships have sunk a Bulgarian torpedo boat, while another escaped by taking refuge in the harbor of Varna. The forts replied to the Turks and eventually silenced their fire.

According to information received by the Porte, Albanian volunteers under ex-Deputy Hassan Bey of Pristina have joined the advanced body of Albanians marching on Kurshumli, Servia, thirty miles south of Nish, in the neighborhood of which town severe fighting is now going on.

Several Turkish successes on the Eastern frontier of Montenegro are reported in dispatches from Salonika. Sharp fighting occurred in the districts of Grevitza, Kirchiska, and Ogra-Kimineh, where the Montenegrins retreated with a loss of six officers and fifteen men killed. The Turkish casualties were two killed. The Turks captured some ammunition and tents from the Montenegrins.

It is asserted that in the fighting around Elassona the Greeks lost 1,500 killed.

The Turkish Government to-morrow will issue a proclamation to the people of the European provinces as a reply to King Ferdinand's manifesto, enjoining the Moslems to good behavior and assur-

FEARS FOR THE PRAIRIE.

Transport With U. S. Commission and 750 Marines on Board Missing.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Oct 22, 3. A. M.—Fears are felt in the Navy Department for the United States transport Prairie, which, with 750 marines and the United States commission aboard, was last heard from Oct. 2 off the coast of Santo Domingo, whither it had been ordered to investigate the uprising there and interfere if American or foreign interests were endangered.

Acting Secretary Beekman Winthrop to-day sent urgent dispatches to all stations in Santo Domingo and Haiti, seeking for information of the vessel's whereabouts.

The Commissioners sent to Santo Domingo Brig. Gen. Frank McIntyre, Chief of Bureau of Insular Affairs, and William Tecumseh Sherman Doyle, Chief of Division of Latin-American Affairs. They sailed from Philadelphia on the Prairie on Sept. 27 last.

PAYS $33,000 DUTY ON GEMS.

Mrs. Lauder's Diamonds Had Entered Free Hitherto Without Question

When Mrs. George Lauder, wife of the former partner of Andrew Carnegie, arrived here on Saturday on the White Star liner Baltic the customs officials asked her if duty had ever been paid on the three pieces of jewelry, a diamond necklace, brooch, and lavalliere, which they knew had been brought into the United States on two previous occasions.

Mrs. Lauder said she had always worn the jewels without being questioned, and handed them over to the Acting Deputy Surveyor to be appraised. It was stated yesterday at the Custom House that the jewels were officially valued at $90,000, and that Mr. Lauder paid $33,000 duty on them the same afternoon and took them away with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Lauder returned on the Baltic with Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie, with whom they had spent the Summer at Skibo. They were accompanied by their son and daughter, William T. and Miss Elizabeth Lauder. They departed last night for Pittsburgh.

SEES A NEW COMET.

Prof. Brooks Makes His 27th Find in the Constellation Sextans.

Special to The New York Times.

GENEVA, N. Y., Oct. 21.—While searching the eastern heavens at 4 o'clock this morning with the telescope at the William Smith Observatory, Dr. William R. Brooks, Professor of Astronomy at Hobart College, discovered a new comet. This comet, Dr. Brooks declares, is his twenty-seventh find. He now lacks but one of having discovered as many comets as the French astronomer Pons, who holds the world's record.

The comet's position at discovery was right ascension 10 hours 3 minutes 20 seconds; declination south 1 degree 8 minutes. This places it in the constellation called Sextans, just under Leo.

The motion of the comet was slowly eastward. It was fairly bright and visible through a small telescope.

MOUSE TIES UP BROADWAY.

Wild Excitement Follows the Advent of a Novel Visitor to the White Way.

Broadway was treated to a genuine thrill yesterday afternoon. Persons hit by street cars and pickpockets in the hands of the law no longer attract more than a passing glance on the Great White Way, but yesterday's incident sent persons scampering from all directions to the centre of disturbance until the sidewalk at Thirty-ninth Street was blocked from the curb to the building line. Shrieks came from the centre of this crowd, and a mighty heaving to and fro marked the nucleus of the excitement.

"What is it? What's the trouble?" men on the outskirts of the throng demanded, in an agony of curiosity.

Finally the mob parted with a yell and men and boys tore across Broadway, shrieking in excitement:

"There he goes!"

Then one who had been jumping up and down in an effort to see over the heads of the mob caught a glimpse of a mouse as it dodged a truck, ran under a trolley car, and finally disappeared down a sewer trap at the corner of the street.

RUN DOWN BY HIS OWN CAR.

Patrolman Cahill Seriously Hurt While Cranking His Automobile.

Eugene Cahill, a patrolman of the East Twenty-second Street Station, owns a big touring car. It ran him down last night, and he lies at his home, 745 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, in a precarious condition, with his leg broken, countless bruises, and internal injuries.

With his wife and sister-in-law, Cahill went out for a drive last evening, and was returning along Brooklyn Avenue, when, at St. John's Place, the engine stalled and Cahill had to crank up. He had cranked twice, when away the car started, bowling him down in its path. He clung to the front axle and was dragged bumping along the street. A passer-by boarded the driverless machine, and, after experimenting with the brakes and levers and following the directions of the hysterical women in the tonneau, he brought the car to a halt at Sterling Place, one block further on.

This is the second time within a week that an automobile accident has been recorded in Brooklyn which has brought to light a patrolman as a motor car owner.

GEN. SICKLES IN 88TH YEAR.

Didn't Invite Son or Wife to His Home on His Birthday Sunday.

Major Gen. Daniel Edgar Sickles, U. S. A., retired, celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday Sunday in his home, at 23 Fifth Avenue. Gen. Sickles spent the day alone with his servants, and did not hold any celebration of any kind.

Several friends of the Sickles family had hoped that Gen. Sickles would seize upon the occasion of his birthday to invite to his home his son and his wife, as a means of terminating the long estrangement. But Gen. Sickles remained obdurate and invited no one. Gen. Sickles was born Oct. 20, 1825, in this city, and has spent most of his time here since retiring from active business and military life.

YONKERS OUT OF STOVE COAL

Scarce as a Gold Mine There and Hospital Needs It.

There is no stove coal for sale in Yonkers. The Board of Contract was to let bids yesterday for 100 tons for the new Tuberculosis Hospital. No proposals were received.

Secretary James Mahoney said he had called on every dealer in the city and they told him he could not buy a bucket of stove coal for a gold mine.

ROOSEVELT HOLDS STRENGTH ON TRIP

Due Here This Morning and Will Be Rushed to Oyster Bay for Rest.

TO SPEAK HERE ON OCT. 30

Dr. Lambert Consents to Half-Hour Address if Patient Has No Relapse.

CROWDS PAY SILENT TRIBUTE

Watch Roosevelt Car, but Obey Injunction Not to Cheer—Bullet Located Anew by Physicians.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE ROOSEVELT TRAIN, PITTSBURGH, Penn., Oct. 21.—Col. Roosevelt showed no ill-effects to-night from his all-day ride from Chicago on his way home to recover from the bullet wound in his chest. He is expected to reach Oyster Bay to-morrow morning in as good condition as he left Mercy Hospital this morning.

Despite the Colonel's joviality and his consideration of the whole thing as more or less of a joke, his fellow-citizens along the line of his progress to-day did not regard it that way. No such campaign gatherings have ever been seen as the crowds that got around the Colonel's car. "The Old Guard," as the Colonel calls the newspaper men with him, have got pretty well used to the average rear-platform crowd, the mob that surges around the car when it stops and clamors for a speech, but never was seen anything like the crowds to-day. They came with the air of people going to church. The Colonel, lying wounded and sick in his stateroom, was not able to go out and meet them, and they didn't expect it or want it. All they wanted was a chance to stand silently around the rear platform with bared heads and wait a moment while the train stopped and then pulled out.

It was amazing to see how these rugged farmers and their wives and children would come out, at the cost of much personal inconvenience to themselves, just to do that. This sort of thing was especially noticeable at Plymouth and Fort Wayne, Ind., but it could be discerned all along the route.

The Colonel was informed of it, and it was the hardest job Mrs. Roosevelt ever had to keep him from getting up and going out to say something to them, but she finally succeeded. It was a severe strain for the Colonel as he looked wistfully out of the car window and saw several hundred plain farmer folks trudging to the back platform, not with any idea of seeing him, but just so that they could render their tribute of respect to the car he was riding in by standing there with their heads bared. Again and again the Colonel started to bolt out of bed to speak to them, and again and again he was held down by the firm hand of Mrs. Roosevelt.

"I must speak to them," Col. Roosevelt would say. "These people have paid me a compliment by coming out, and I must recognize it."

Mrs. Roosevelt would protest, and the Colonel would give it up and go reluctantly back to bed.

At Lima, Ohio, there was the only suggestion of a cheer during the day. A large crowd had gathered at the station, and some one started a cheer. Col. Cecil Lyon of Texas, the ex-President's traveling companion, who was standing on the platform, raised his hand. The people understood and the cheer died away on the lips of the man who had begun it.

Col. Roosevelt refused to be carried to the ambulance that took him from the Mercy Hospital to the railroad. He walked to his ambulance with a firm step. As soon as he got aboard the train he called for a magazine in which he had read half a story and wanted to find what happened to the hero.

Stands the Journey Well.

The Colonel was in fine shape all day, and the doctors said he could not have been better if he had stayed in bed in the hospital. The train ran smoothly and the Colonel spent most of the time in reading. Dr. Alexander Lambert, his physician, was delighted.

"I am going to let him talk half an hour at Madison Square on Oct. 30," he said.

"Then he'll talk longer," some one said.

"That is all right," said Dr. Lambert grimly. "I will be there, and I'll ring the bell on him."

Dr. Lambert, who, with Dr. Scurry Terrell of Dallas, Texas, is caring for Col. Roosevelt, said that the wound had bled some during the day, but that the bleeding was merely the result of the draining and was an indication of the healing process. Bulletins were issued by the physicians from time to time during the day, but they merely reported that the Colonel was resting easily and that his condition was unchanged.

Aided by the X-ray examination made yesterday Dr. Lambert was able to determine the position of the bullet by an external examination to-day. He placed a finger on the precise spot, and Col. Roosevelt showed him that he was right, for he said: "That's mighty sore there."

"The bullet is imbedded in the major pectoral muscle," said Dr. Lambert, "and as the X-ray photograph showed, is close to the fourth rib on the right side."

The doctor said it would not be extracted for the present, but that later on the Colonel would have a chance to decide whether he wanted to carry it "in his vest pocket or his chest."

Issues a Statement To Ohioans.

The only person who saw Col. Roosevelt after he boarded the train, aside from the physicians and members of his family, was Walter Brown, Ohio Progressive leader, who spent an hour on the train during the trip across Ohio, and talked with the Colonel for a few minutes. After his departure Col. Roosevelt dictated this statement:

"Col. Roosevelt expresses his regret that while passing through Ohio on the day on which he was to have spoken here, he is unable to meet the sympathetic friends who gather at different stops to greet him. He would like to take advantage of his opportunity to ask his friends throughout the State to give their support heartily to the Progressive ticket, and particularly to Mr. Garford, the Progressive candidate for Governor, whom Col. Roosevelt esteems as exactly the type of man whom all good citizens should most heartily welcome to leadership in this great fight for high ideals."

Col. Roosevelt is traveling to Oyster Bay on the private car Ideal, the car on which President Taft made his two months' tour last year. He is guarded by two private detectives. He is due in New York at 8:00 o'clock to-morrow morning.

His car will be taken on directly to Oyster Bay, and before 10 o'clock the Colonel probably will be in bed at Sagamore Hill.

Until he has rallied from the effects of the trip, Col. Roosevelt will be required to rest absolutely. He is eager to plunge into the work of the campaign, and one of the chief concerns of those about him will be to prevent him from undertaking too much. He expects to see Senator Dixon, his campaign manager, to-morrow, but their talk probably will be a brief one.

AVOIDS CROWDS IN CHICAGO.

Mother Superior Turns Away in Tears as He Leaves Hospital.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—With every precaution taken to avoid crowds that might have a disturbing effect, Col. Roosevelt left Chicago at 8:30 o'clock this morning on the way to his Oyster Bay home. A great throng had gathered at the Union Station with the expectation of seeing him take the Pennsylvania trainn there, and to avoid them the patient was taken to the railroad yards at Twelfth Street, half a mile from the Mercy Hospital, and there boarded the train, which was then backed into the terminal where the Colonel's baggage was received.

The Colonel's last night at the hospital was rather a restless one. He slept only about four hours in all from the time he first fell asleep at 11:15 P. M. He awoke frequently and seemed nervous. It was said by the night nurse, Miss Fitzgerald, that this was chiefly due to the excitement of his coming departure, and not to any untoward symptoms that had developed during the night.

He awoke just before 6 o'clock and had his morning sponge bath and rub down. Then he had the usual breakfast of bacon, three soft-boiled eggs, buttered toast, and a pot of tea. Mrs. Roosevelt, who had been called before the Colonel awoke, took breakfast with her husband.

The Colonel said at this time that he was feeling well, but because of his restlessness during the night he was somewhat sleepy, and hoped he would be able to get some rest after he reached his berth on the train. He was cheerful, and expressed pleasure that he was soon to be on the way to his home at Oyster Bay.

The Colonel's temperature on waking was 98, pulse 76, and respiration 18. This was a slight decrease in temperature since the official bulletin of last night and an increase in his pulse of four beats.

Dr. John B. Murphy, who has been in charge of the Colonel's case since he reached Chicago, arrived at the hospital at 6:30 o'clock, and, with Dr. William B. McCauley, the house surgeon, dressed the Colonel's wound for the last time before his departure. At the same time a consultation was held, at which Dr. Scurry Terrell, Dr. Arthur D. Bevan, Dr. Alexander Lambert, the Roosevelt family physician, and Dr. John B. Golden, Dr. Murphy's assistant, were present. This consultation was for the purpose of establishing the Colonel's actual physical condition, after a thorough examination, at which all the physicians were present, with a view to taking such precautions as might be necessary to make the journey to the East as comfortable and as safe as possible.

Following the consultation this bulletin was issued:

> Pulse, temperature and respiration normal. Wound stil ldischarges a little serum. There is less inflammation. Point bullet location is sensitive to pressure, and bullet can now be distinctly located. General condition good. Rested well.

Preparations for his departure had been carefully made, and Col. Roosevelt was ready long before it was time to leave. He was fully dressed, and over his street clothes he wore the heavy army overcoat he had on the evening he was shot. The hole in the right breast was distinguishable by those who were near him.

The Colonel walked from his room to the wheel chair in the corridor. The trip from his apartment on the west side of the building through the long corridor to the entrance of the Twenty-sixth Street side was made in a few minutes. He was accompanied by Dr. Murphy and Mrs. Roosevelt.

On the way through the hospital doors of the various rooms were open, and the patients who were able called a greeting to him and wished him a safe journey. In the street there was a large crowd of curious spectators who shouted a greeting as the Colonel appeared in his wheel chair.

Before rising from his chair at the hospital door Col. Roosevelt bade good-bye to the two nurses who had taken care of him. The night nurse, Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, was the first to shake his hand, and she was followed by the day nurse, Miss Blanche Welter.

The last thing that Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt did was to shake hands with and thank Mother Mary Raphael, the Mother Superior in charge of the hospital. The farewell was brief, but affecting. The eyes of the Mother Superior filled with tears and she quickly turned her head and then hurried into the building.

Then leaning on the arm of Dr. Lambert, the family physician, Mr. Roosevelt took the few steps that were necessary to bring him to the ambulance in which had been placed a cot on which he at once reclined.

The start was made immediately. In front of the ambulance was a detail of motor cycle police, a squad of whom immediately followed the ambulance. Then came the motor cars in which were Col. Cecil Lyon, Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the family. In other motor cars were many newspaper men and photographers.

The trip to the train was made quickly and easily. The Colonel's car had been provided with a large easy chair which he expected to occupy until he became tired. No discomfort was felt by the injured man as the train was backed over cross-tracks into the Union Station.

The party that accompanied him on the car were: Mrs. Roosevelt, Ethel Roosevelt, Theodore, Jr., Col. Lyon and Drs. Lambert and Terrell.

Philip Roosevelt, the ex-President's cousin, who had missed the train at the Twelfth Street yards, hurried to Englewood Station, several miles out from the Union Station, and boarded the train there.

TO GUARD ROOSEVELT HERE.

No Demonstration to be Permitted as He Passes Through the City.

Col. Roosevelt will have a very quiet reception when he arrives in the city from Chicago this morning, if the plans of the Bull Moose leaders here are carried out. Senator Joseph M. Dixon, on behalf of the National Committee, and William H. Hotchkiss, representing the State Committee, conferred with other leaders yesterday regarding the best way to get the Colonel through the city and out to Sagamore Hill with the greatest amount of comfort.

Senator Dixon and Chairman Hotchkiss arranged with the railroad men to have the Colonel's train, which is due at the Pennsylvania station at 8:08 o'clock, switched to the Long Island Railroad tracks and the Colonel in his private car carried right through to Oyster Bay without change. Secretary O. K. Davis, who is traveling with the Colonel, sent word to Senator Dixon that the attending physicians insist that their patient be kept free from all excitement.

Senator Dixon got word that the citizens of Oyster Bay were planning to give the Colonel a rousing reception and plans were immediately made to balk it. If necessary the Colonel's train will be stopped at Locust Valley, the nearest station to Oyster Bay, and the Colonel transferred to his automobile there.

HEARST CABLES TO COLONEL.

Hopes Nothing Will Stop His "Effective and Essential Work."

William R. Hearst yesterday sent this message by cable from London to Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay:

"I learn with sincerest regret of your injury. Every thoughtful American realizes how great a force you exercise throughout our country in support of popular rights and political liberties. All must hope, as I do, that neither this regrettable accident nor any other occurrence will ever interfere with your effective and essential work along these progressive and patriotic lines."

GREEKS OFF TO WAR DESERT HOTEL JOBS

ELEVATOR BOY GOES, TOO

The Wolcott Management Learns the Reality of the War Against the Turks, as Employes Depart.

From the moment that the war broke out on the Balkan frontier, Angelo Vasilatz kept his eyes on the newsstand at the Wolcott. Angelo was an elevator boy. The moment his car would touch the ground floor Angelo would shoot the door open and look over to see if an "extra" had come in. He would run over, whenever traffic was slack, to ask for the latest news. Then he would get back to his station and whisper to his brother Petros:

"Not yet. To-morrow—perhaps in an hour."

When the news came that Greece had aligned itself with the Balkan States Angelo thrilled with excitement. Whenever a Greek ship sailed with reservists or volunteers, if Angelo could get another to "take his watch," he would go to the dock to cheer. Then he would come back to the hotel and work the lever of his elevator as if it were a machine gun. Most of last week Angelo was in a state which approached exaltation. He had handed in his name to the proper agent as one ready to go back and fight the Turk.

Yesterday morning Angelo handed in his resignation and quit. The ship was not ready to sail, but Angelo wanted to prepare to become a fighting man. When he left the management of the hotel suddenly realized that since the war broke out seven Greeks had quit, with the avowed intention of joining the ten thousand already on their way across the ocean, and that more had given notice.

For instance, there was Nicholas, one of the captains in the restaurant. Nobody ever suspected Nicholas of being warlike until hostilities began. After that he used to go about humming something under his breath. He was careful to stop when he came within range of a patron's ear, but he didn't mind chanting within sound of his fellow-waiters while they were laying the tables. It was not a disagreeable sound, but those who heard say it made them think of fierce looking men clad in union suits and long shirts, belted at the waist, with fierce moustaches and with curved swords in their mouths, and long pistols in their hands. Two other Greek waiters in the restaurant kept near Nicholas when their duties would permit, and the three conversed much in a tongue that the German and Italian waiters could not understand, but which they knew was modern Hellenic.

On Saturday the management had a surprise. Nicholas and the two others had given notice during the week, so it was expected that they would leave on Saturday. But they had the news that the Greek force was investing Elassona, at the foot of Mount Olympus, and while they were getting the tables ready for lunch they hummed something that Nicholas explained was a paean. He knew, he added, that the Greeks were going to take Elassona. When he took his leave Nicholas explained that he was more than Nicholas, a dining-room captain. He was Captain Nicholas Skokas, of the Greek reserves.

It was the victory of the Greeks at Elassona, reported in Sunday's dispatches and confirmed yesterday, that hurried Angelo's decision. He read yesterday that another decisive battle was imminent. Then he made up his mind. His brother Peter wanted to quit, too. Peter said, when seen later yesterday, that he was going to go this week.

A census taken at the hotel showed that besides Captain Nicholas Skokas and the other two waiters, and Angelo, up to date the man in charge of the yard down stairs, the man who looks after the lace curtains and two other employes had left to go to the war.

Reports of defections at other hotels were not numerous yesterday. Few Greeks are now in these establishments, it was said. It is explained that while it is the habit of many Greeks to take menial positions when they first come here, owing to the fact that their unfamiliarity with the language makes it difficult for them to get better jobs, they seek something else as soon as they have acquired a fair vocabulary.

A Greek waiter was found still on the job at the Imperial. He said three of his compatriots who had been working there had left to go home to fight, but as for himself, his stomach was not for war, or words to that effect.

"You see," he explained, "there are many Greeks now over here who left home before they had done their military service. Not all Greeks want to fight. There probably will be some left in New York."

SAY RUSSIA PAYS FARES.

Montenegrin Reservists Looking to Consul Here for Transportation.

Four hundred Montenegrin reservists, who had arrived in this city from all parts of the country during the past few days, were provided with temporary quarters yesterday in tenements in Eleventh Avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-fifth Streets. Throughout the afternoon and evening they discussed excitedly the prospects of their speedy journey to the seat of war in the Balkans.

In the course of interviews with a score of those who spoke English a TIMES reporter was assured again and again that the reservists would sail on Wednesday in a Russian ship and that the cost of their passage would be defrayed by the Russian Consul. Later the editor of a Serb paper, who is hostile to Prof. M. I. Pupin, the Servian Consul to the Port of New York, imparted the information that Mr. Pupin was referring Servian reservists to the same source to secure passage.

When Prof. Pupin was seen last night at the University Club he denied indignantly and emphatically that he had referred any Servian to the Russian Consulate for advice or assistance.

Prof. Pupin declared that all the Servian reservists were defraying the cost of their own passage, except in a few instances, where the amount necessary was advanced—by personal friends and fellow-countrymen. He was absolutely certain that the same conditions existed also as far as the Montenegrins were concerned.

Witnesses Gone to the War.

Because so many of his witnesses had gone to the Balkan war, A. C. Vandiver of 82 Nassau Street, counsel for Demetiues Vlasti, a Greek, who brought a suit in the Supreme Court against Paukellenic and Socrates, a society which publishes a Grecian newspaper, asked Justice Hendrick to adjourn the trial. The lawyer requested that the case be held over three months, so that he could use the testimony of several Greeks who, he said, had gone home to take up arms for their country against Turkey. The Justice said the case must remain on the calendar.

ing the Christians that they have nothing to fear provided they remain loyal.

Bombardment of Kavarna.

SOFIA, Oct. 21.—There are renewed reports here to-night that Kirk-Kilisseh, near Adrianople, has been captured by the Bulgarians.

Turkish warships to-day bombarded the Bulgarian fort of Kavarna. The custom house was destroyed, and several shops and dwellings were damaged. Kavarna is on the Black Sea, twenty-eight miles northeast of Varna.

After the bombardment of Kavarna one of the Turkish warships sailed in the direction of Baltjik. Four others cruised along the coast, between Kavarna and Kalikola, bombarding the villages.

According to advices received late this evening, Turkish warships also bombarded the barracks and monastery at Euxinograd, near Varna, which port they bombarded several days ago. The Custom House and two warehouses were also damaged.

The Turks attempted a landing, but two boats launched encountered a heavy fire from the Bulgarian soldiers, and returned to the ships.

The Bulgarian Government has entered a protest against the bombardment of Kavarna as a violation of the principles of international law laid down by The Hague Conference. The town is a trading port only, and is not defended. No warning was given of the attack.

The newspapers to-night report the bombardment and capture of Losengrad by the Bulgarians, after several hours' desperate fighting, and also the capture of Tchirmen, an important point six miles to the west of Adrianople.

The advance posts of the Bulgarian Army, besides penetrating to the immediate vicinity of the important strategical point of Kirk-Kilisseh, which is the headquarters of the Turkish Third Army Corps, are also in touch with the line of outer forts surrounding Adrianople, where another Turkish army corps is stationed. They to-day occupied the village of Vakoruda, in the District of Razlog.

A semi-official statement dealing with the progress of the campaign says:

"The Bulgarian troops are advancing in all directions, while the Turkish troops are stricken with panic and are retiring in disorder, abandoning their rifles, howitzers, ammunition, and provisions.

"The Turkish peasants are leaving their homes, and in certain villages small Turkish children whose parents have disappeared have been found wandering, and are now being cared for by the Bulgarian soldiers.

"At Mustapha-Pasha the Bulgarian troops seized 100 tons of grain.

"Up to the present not a single Bulgarian soldier has been made prisoner by the Turks. The Ottoman prisoners taken by the Bulgarians are being well treated."

In order to preserve secrecy as to the movements of the army, the most positive orders have been issued to the Bulgarian officers and men that matters connected with the war and with the military operations must not be referred to even in private letters.

The Military Attachés, including Lieut. Sherman Miles, the American Attaché at Bucharest, together with the war correspondents, proceeded to-day to the Bulgarian headquarters, at Starazagora.

Greeks Occupy Dissikata.

ATHENS, Oct. 21.—The Greeks by a flank movement to-day occupied the Turkish trenches at Dissikata with trifling losses. The Turks stubbornly resisted, but eventually retired to the town of Servia, twenty miles to the northeast.

The Aegean squadron, under command of Admiral Countouriotis, arrived yesterday at Kastro, capital of the island of Lemnos, and demanded that the authorities surrender. The squadron to-day anchored at Port Mydros and landed troops, which advanced to occupy the town.

Admiral Countouriotis has proclaimed a blockade of all the ports of Lemnos. A blockade is also effective on the coast of Epirus.

King George of Greece has received telegraphic replies from his three sovereign allies to a message informing them that the Greek Army had crossed the frontier. King Ferdinand of Bulgaria said:

> Filled with a sentiment of sublime, reciprocal, and mutual confidence, our peoples, brothers in the faith, unite in a sacred agreement and ask the Almighty Defender of the rights of the weak and protector of the oppressed to grant the fervent prayers that ascend to His Throne from the four allied nations to the God of Battles to crown with success the joint efforts of our arms for the triumph of the doubly righteous cause of faith and liberty.

King Nicholas of Montenegro telegraphed:

> Our cordial greetings and most sincere wishes for the victory of the worthy descendants of Themistocles and Miltiades. May God bless our efforts for our sacred cause.

King Peter of Servia sent the following message:

> Trusting in God that the forces of the Balkan States, united in religion and led by the traditional sentiment of their peoples, will triumph in their generous work, I hail with confidence the commencement of our joint action and wish complete success for the valiant Greek army.

The Bank of Athens has taken advantage of the suspension law passed by the Chamber of Deputies, permitting banks to suspend payment after due notice during the war.

The bank has many branches in the Turkish Empire. None of the other banks in Greece is exercising the privilege granted by Parliament.

Servian Successes.

BELGRADE, Oct. 21.—The important Turkish position of Sultantape, on Mount Osigova, has been taken by the Second Servian Army, commanded by Gen. Stephanovitch. This column is now marching toward Egri-Palanka, fifty miles to the east of Uskub, the headquarters of the Turkish Seventh Army Corps.

The First Servian Army is operating successfully on the road to Kumanova, which is only ten miles northeast of Uskub, while the Third Servian Army is approaching the town of Prishtina, which lies about forty miles to the north of Uskub, on the railroad.

A Servian column last night captured the Turkish entrenchments at the village of Podujevo, near Mitrovitza, on the road to Prishtina. The Servians were commanded by Gen. Jaukovitch. The Turks, with their Arnaut auxiliaries, retired toward the south, leaving their colors, several cases of ammunition, eighty oxen, and a large quantity of forage.

Turkish prisoners taken by the Servians declare that no regular Turkish troops were engaged, the Ottoman force at Pedujevo consisting of two provisional regiments of reserves and six companies of Arnaut tribesmen, besides three batteries of artillery.

No details are given as to the casualties.

Good progress is being made by the Servian Army, commanded by Gen. Zsovkovitch, operating in the Novi-Bazar district, according to dispatches from Raska, on the frontier. The Servian troops have already taken the small town of Novovarosh, five miles from the Servian frontier. The population, consisting mostly of Servians, greeted the troops with enthusiasm when they marched in.

The headquarters of the Servian Army, commanded by the Crown Prince, have been transferred from Vranya, Servia, to the Turkish town of Zibeftch, recently captured by the Servian troops.

A number of wounded Servian soldiers have been brought back from the front to Nish, where they were decorated by the King.

VRANYA, Servia, Oct. 21.—The transfer of the Servian headquarters from Nish to Vranya has been completed.

King Peter arrived here to-day.

Big Bulgar Victory Rumored.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 22.—The Sofia correspondent of The Daily Telegraph sends a report that the Bulgarians have captured Kirk-Kilisseh, that 20,000 Turks surrendered there, and that communication with Constantinople was cut. It is added, however, that there is no official confirmation of this.

The fighting at Plava, which was captured on Sunday by the Montenegrins, was very severe. According to a Cettinje dispatch to The Standard, the Albanian population fought desperately and retired only when the whole place was in flames. Nine hundred Albanians were killed, including many women and children, who were found dead with arms in their hands.

The Seventh Regiment of Servian Infantry is reported to have been virtually exterminated by the explosion of Turkish land mines after crossing the frontier into the district of Novi-Bazar, according to a news agency dispatch from Belgrade.

A column of Greek troops was repulsed yesterday when it attacked the Kemiadis Pass, which is held by the Turks, according to a news-agency dispatch from Constantinople. Kemiadis Pass is in the mountains on the Albanian frontier.

"The bombardment of St. Constantine Monastery at Euxinograd, by the Turkish warships," says a Sofia dispatch to The Times, "and the destruction of this venerable and interesting building were an act of gross vandalism which nothing can justify. It may be taken as an omen of the barbarous character of the struggle which civilized Europe has failed to prevent."

The monastery was formerly the residence of Prince Alexander, and subsequently of King Ferdinand.

The Bulgarian Army will, it is thought, be the first to strike a heavy blow, for at the Bulgarians' objective point, the fortress of Adrianople, the main Turkish army is rapidly growing in strength and with time will outgrow that of the invaders. According to a Constantinople report an important battle at Adrianople is imminent.

Rumors were current yesterday that two of the outer forts of Adrianople had fallen into the Bulgarians' hands, but these must be taken with reserve in the same way as the report of the capture of the town of Kirk-Kilisseh, of which there is no confirmation.

Guerrilla Warfare in Hills.

The grimmest fighting of the war is likely to occur out of sight of the main armies, as some 4,000 Albanians are arming and Greek and Bulgarian bands have taken to the hills, where they will engage in guerrilla warfare.

A well-known American business man and former Government official who has just returned from Cettinje gives some interesting information regarding the sudden aggressive tactics of Montenegro in the present war. In an interview yesterday he said:

"The plan of war disclosed to me by King Nicholas has thus far been invariably successful. The capture of Scutari within a fortnight is inevitable. The Montenegrins know the country as well as their own dooryards, and stand in no danger of having their communications cut.

"Although the Montenegrins had been planning the war for three years, the outbreak was premature—not a deliberate part of the plan of the Balkan League. The Montenegrins were concentrated on the border. Each soldier had three days' rations. At the end of that time even King Nicholas was powerless to hold them in leash.

"The Montenegrin soldiers are well armed and equipped. They are splendid fighters. The only question is how well they can stand discipline, having been accustomed only to guerrilla warfare.

"On leaving Cettinje I visited the northern division of the Montenegrin Army, whose General told me that he expected to form a junction with a Servian column. The combined armies would then proceed to fight their way through Macedonia and form a junction with the Greeks between Uskub and Monastir. They expected by this movement to hold large bodies of Turkish troops from going to the relief of Adrianople, where a big battle is planned.

"I found every evidence that the Balkan League was working in perfect harmony, but the Montenegrin and Servian officials believe that the powers will permit only one or two important battles before they intervene, and they are already figuring on a convention similar to that at Berlin. Balkan diplomats have confessed that the arrangement of peace between Italy and Turkey was such a blow to their plans that, had the note of the powers been presented a week before the concentration on the Montenegrin border, war very likely would have been averted.

"The Balkan League, which surprises even its founders by its solidarity, was formed so secretly that no European diplomat had an inkling of its purpose."

The Greek Consul at Cardiff, acting under instructions from his Government, is laying claim to all the Greek tonnage entering that port. Every vessel so commandeered becomes the property of the Greek Government and the Captain an officer of the Greek Navy. Shipowners have requested the British Foreign Office to protest against this procedure.

The Turkish Government was ready to agree to the annexation of Crete to Greece if Greece would withdraw from the Balkan alliance before the formal declaration of war. It has just been made known that this was intimated to Greece, and also that Turkey was ready to assent to the junction of the Greek and Turkish railway systems, a project which had until then been strongly objected to by Turkey. Greece refused point blank to accept the proposition.

The British Government yesterday issued a proclamation of neutrality in the Balkan war.

POWERS STILL UNITED.

Mediation to End the War May Come After Battle at Adrianople.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The fears expressed in Constantinople of possible aggression by Russia in the Caucasus while Turkey's hands are fully occupied in the Balkans are not shared by the French Foreign Office. This was officially reiterated to-night.

All the powers of both the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente remain united in their determination to localize the fighting and to end the war at the earliest moment.

Mediation at the first opportunity has been decided upon, and in the opinion of the diplomats this may come after a great battle, which will doubtless be fought around Adrianople. It is expected that this battle will be so far-reaching as to leave both sides weakened to such an extent that European intervention would be welcomed.

PISA, Oct. 21.—Count von Berchtold, the Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, arrived here this evening for a conference with the Italian Foreign Minister, the Marquis di San Giuliano, on the international political situation. The presence here also of the Austrian Ambassador to Italy and the Italian Ambassador to Austria emphasizes the importance of the meetings, which will be largely concerned with plans for the further cementing of the accord between the powers.

The exchange of views will, it is expected, result in an understanding to allay the jealousies of Austria and Italy over their respective interests in the Balkans. It is thought that a frank discussion will remove the danger of clashes during the war and strengthen the authority of the European Concert when the time for intervention arrives.

The naval situation in the Mediterranean as affected by France's concentration of her fleets there will be discussed, and the renewal of the Triple Alliance in 1914 will be reviewed. This subject, however, is likely to be studied more closely at Berlin in November, when the Italian Foreign Minister will visit Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg.

AMERICAN AIRMEN FOR GREECE.

Two Men Leave Chicago to Enlist at the Greek Legation.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Two aviators, John Schaefer of New Orleans and Robert Elliott of Brooklyn, N. Y., left here today for Washington, where they will enlist at the Greek Legation for service in the Greek army.

The arrangement was made through the Greek Consulate here. The men are to fly in two of the aeroplanes shipped to Greece several weeks ago.

PUBLICITY LAW OPERATIVE.

Fifteen-Day Period for Showing Campaign Gifts Has Now Begun.

Perry Belmont, who has for several years been an advocate of greater publicity concerning campaign contributions, explained in a talk to the Woodrow Wilson College Men's League at the Hotel Imperial yesterday afternoon just how the recently passed act of Congress would affect the present Presidential candidates.

The new law went into operation yesterday morning, he said, under a clause requiring the first publication of contributions to be made not earlier than fifteen days or later than ten days before election. The fifteen-day period, Mr. Belmont said, commenced yesterday, and the final date for the first publication will expire on Friday. Subsequent publications must be made every sixth day before election, and once again within thirty days after election.

"In case any party fails to publish its contributions," said Mr. Belmont, "or any group of voters feel that a full statement has not been made, then an application to a Supreme Court Justice will bring about a summary inquest into the status of the offending party's funds. Any candidate may petition for such an inquest, or any five voters may petition for it jointly. This condition is brought about not through the Federal statute, which sadly needs such a provision, but through the New York State law under which all committees, whether National or State, operating in New York State, are compelled to give an accounting of their funds."

Mr. Belmont said he was now hard at work to secure the enactment of a clause in the Federal statute similar to that of the New York State statute. Mr. Belmont left for Illinois last night on a speaking tour in support of Gov. Wilson's candidacy.

Feb. 2, according to Mr. Nugent, that Col. Roosevelt referred him to Mr. Quay and Mr. Ward for the practical purposes of the campaign. On Feb. 6, four days before the Governors met in Chicago, according to the Philadelphia leader, he met Ward in New York and was there told that Penrose after ten days' consideration had declined to work with Roosevelt's friends. This would seem to show that Penrose was approached at least two weeks before the meeting of Governors.

Several witnesses were brought before the committee by Senator Oliver to attack the testimony of William Flinn and sustain the charges of his colleague, Senator Penrose. To offset Mr. Flinn's statement that the contract dividing political power in Western Pennsylvania between himself and Senator Quay was never intended to be signed, Hugh B. Nesbitt, a Pittsburgh newspaper man, submitted a copy of a statement, issued by Mr. Flinn the day after the contract was published in 1896, in which the Pittsburgh contractor declared his proposed contract a routine affair, very similar to one he, Senator Quay, and others had signed previously, which continued in effect for four years.

With excited gestures Mr. Perkins told the committee that Senator Penrose's charge that he had underwritten the Roosevelt campaign to the extent of $3,000,000 should be "placed at the top of a long list of unmitigated lies." The statement of Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Chairman, that the Harvester and Steel Trusts were heavily backing Col. Roosevelt, he said, was an "absolute falsehood without any foundation." The President's use of the Roosevelt correspondence in regard to stopping the prosecution of the Harvester Trust, Mr. Perkins characterized as "despicable." He asserted that any other course would have made President Roosevelt a "cowardly Executive."

Perkins "Retired Workingman."

When Mr. Perkins took the stand, he described himself as a "retired workingman, toiling eighteen hours a day in violation of the eight-hour law." Much of his testimony consisted of the reading of letters and documents pertaining to the campaign of 1904. Then he told the committee that he contributed $122,500 to Col. Roosevelt's campaign for nomination. This money, he said, was divided as follows: New York State, $15,000; National Progressive Committee, $22,500; Washington Headquarters, $32,500; polls in New York and Brooklyn, $16,000; contributions to various States, $19,500, and to E. W. Sims in Chicago, $17,500.

In presenting his formal statement Mr. Perkins said that many "indestructible lies" had been told about his part in the campaign of 1904. He declared that even then he favored publicity of campaign contributions.

"The trouble about contributions," said Mr. Perkins, "does not lie in the fact of contributions; it lies in their mystery. I never could see why people should not know about them. In 1904 I felt that the method of raising campaign funds was crude. I wanted a large number of people to contribute, instead of a few people contributing largely. I got that plan somewhat in operation through Treasurer Sheldon in 1908, and the Bull Moose Party is practicing it now."

"You say you have contributed about $123,000 to the Bull Moose pre-convention campaign?" asked Senator Oliver.

Mr. Perkins admitted that he had.

"Then Mr. Hanna gave $177,000, Mr. Flinn $144,000, Mr. Munsey $118,000, and Mr. Lawson spent in advertising $100,000. That makes $662,000 from five men. Do you call that an illustration of your rule of small contributions from many people?"

"No, Sir," said Mr. Perkins emphatically, "but I hope that never again will come a time when we need to follow such tactics to accomplish the popular will. At every stage we were opposed by the power and patronage of the Government. We had no time to perfect an organization that could collect contributions from the whole people. But we have already published our receipts and expenditures. President Taft hasn't published his contributions, and the Democrats haven't even published their expenditures."

"I object to this statement as irrelevant," interposed Senator Oliver.

"I just mentioned it as I ran along," said Mr. Perkins, turning to the crowd and winking.

Denounces Penrose's Charges.

The Chairman asked Mr. Perkins about Senator Penrose's charge that he had underwritten the Roosevelt campaign for $3,000,000.

"In a long list of unmitigated lies," said Mr. Perkins, "that one should stand at the top. I had thought Mr. Penrose would be here to-day. If the Senator made such a charge, he should be made to prove it, or, as a gentleman, he should take it back. I have been brought up to respect the Senate, but where does it stand when charges like this are made without foundation against me. I insist that Senator Penrose be brought here and be made to substantiate or retract his charges."

The Chairman told Mr. Perkins that there was no way by which the committee or a court of the United States could force a retraction. The Chairman then asked him as to Mr. Hilles's charge that the Harvester and Steel Trusts were supporting Col. Roosevelt.

"There is not one word or an iota of truth in Mr. Hilles's statement," said Mr. Perkins. "It is an absolute falsehood out of whole cloth. If Mr. Hilles has any foundations for his charge he should be made to show them."

"But Mr. Hilles has already admitted that he did not know anything about his charges," said the Chairman, with a laugh.

"No one in any big trust, so far as I know," said Mr. Perkins, "has contributed or asked to contribute. But I have been pilloried as a man stepping into the back doors of these trusts and putting my hand in the till to get money for Col. Roosevelt's campaign. Yet the committee has heard that Cyrus H. McCormick of the Harvester Trust is for Gov. Wilson and Harold McCormick is not for Roosevelt.

"There are no subterranean channels in our campaign. I have largely retired from business because I am fighting for principles. It is time our men did the same thing. I want men who make such charges to prove them or to shut up."

Would Remove Hilles from Office.

"If I were President of the United States, with a campaign manager like Mr. Hilles, I would remove him from office," said Mr. Perkins.

"Why don't you call Mr. Penrose here to substantiate his charges? I insist that he be called."

Mr. Perkins said that he thought the list of contributors kept by Cornelius N. Bliss, a copy of which was given the committee by Elmer Dover, was far from accurate. The large amounts attributed to him, he said, he did remember having contributed personally or having collected. He thought that what Mr. Bliss meant was simply that contributions came from men suggested by Mr. Perkins.

Mr. Perkins said that he talked over contributions often with Mr. Munsey, and perhaps twice with Dan R. Hanna. He denied, however, that he had any understanding with the two men about sharing the burdens of the campaign.

Mr. Pomerene insisted that Mr. Perkins tell exactly whether he had a memorandum of his contributions to the Progressive cause in various States. Mr. Perkins seemed not to understand the question, but after it had been repeated several times he leaned over toward Mr. Pomerene and asked: "Why didn't you ask Mr. Ryan, a member of your own party, for his memorandum?"

"I'm not here to be lectured," said Mr. Pomerene.

"I know what you are here for as well as you know what I'm here for," retorted Mr. Perkins. "It is one of the most unfair things done by this committee and there are many unfair things that have been done."

Mr. Perkins remembered correspondence with Senator Beveridge, in which the Senator, after the campaign, returned a check for $10,000, saying he had been able to raise the money himself by his writings, and had not needed assistance.

"I will remember that letter to my dying day," said Mr. Perkins. "When I got that check I almost fell dead. It was the only time I ever heard of a public man returning a single dollar he got his hands on."

Mr. Perkins said he knew nothing of the auxiliary committee which Mr. Cortelyou had asked Mr. Harriman to join. He knew little about the Harriman fund, and said he had no books showing a record of his political contributions.

"Ordinarily," observed Senator Pomerene, "bankers have books."

"What has banking to do with this?" snapped Mr. Perkins. "I was not doing this as a banker. I could no more tell you what I gave for campaign purposes than I could what I gave to any other enterprise."

What He Meant by Fighting.

A reference to the Harvester Trust investigation brought from Mr. Perkins the statement that Mr. Taft's use of President Roosevelt's correspondence was "most despicable." He explained that his statement to Herbert Knox Smith that if suit was begun "we would fight" meant nothing more than the Morgans would oppose the prosecution in court. He denied that he meant to imply the Morgan interests would oppose the Administration.

"If Smith says I said I would fight, I did say it," said Mr. Perkins. "It was just like me. Anybody with blood in his veins would have said the same thing."

"Is your present support of Col. Roosevelt," asked Senator Pomerene, "because of his failure to bring suit against your company or because of your general interest in the situation?"

"There is the contemptible nature of this attack," said Mr. Perkins, shaking his fist at the questioner.

"On account of the fees you received for organizing the Harvester Trust, might not the public think you had a personal interest in contributing?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"Yes," snapped Mr. Perkins, "if the public judges by the yellow press or the Stanley committee's report."

Senator Pomerene again questioned Mr. Perkins as to the suit brought against him for paying out the insurance company's money in support of Col. Roosevelt's campaign in 1904. Mr. Pomerene cited the decision in the New York Court from memory to have been substantially that, while Mr. Perkins's act was not criminal, a civil suit would lie against him.

"Now you are trying to misrepresent me," almost shouted Mr. Perkins, "and I know why you are trying to do it. You are trying to get in the headlines of to-morrow morning's papers."

Senator Oliver's eyes snapped as he moved that this remark be stricken out. The motion was put by the Chairman. The three committee members answered, "Aye," while Mr. Perkins, with a grin to the crowd, loudly exclaimed, "No," covering his face with his hands and shaking with amusement.

"That is another impertinence," said Senator Oliver.

"I know it is, Senator," said Mr. Perkins, "and I apologize. I should not have said it."

In concluding Mr. Perkins made a statement, declaring that he had never asked a favor of any President, Cabinet officer or Executive.

"And I am not in this movement now for any favors. When this campaign is over, if on the 5th of November Mr. Roosevelt is elected, on Nov. 6 our accounts will be all square."

Ryan Tells of Huge Gift.

Thomas F. Ryan, the first witness of the day, told the story of his huge contribution to the Democratic fund in 1904 in a very matter-of-fact way. He said he was a delegate to the National Convention at St. Louis and favored the cause of Senator Gorman of Maryland.

"After the nomination," said Mr. Ryan, "I did contribute $50,000 to the National Committee, and I thought that that was all that they could expect from me. But as the campaign progressed I contributed small amounts up to a total of $100,000. Then my friends told me that the campaign had collapsed, and that no election was possible without further money. So in the interests of the Democratic Party and through the party of the American people, I decided to give $350,000 to pay the debts of the National Committee. This was a few days before the election, and I saw that every debt was paid. It was not a question of electing Judge Parker. It was simply a question of saving the Democratic organization. I had no hope of reward and never hoped for anything from my contributions to the Democratic Party. I concluded that Judge Parker could not be elected before he was nominated."

Mr. Ryan said that every penny he contributed in 1904 was his personal gift. He was then Vice President of the Morton Trust Company, but the company had nothing to do with his political gifts.

Mr. Ryan confirmed the statements that he contributed about $75,000 in the pre-convention campaign to Gov. Harmon, and about $30,000 to Representative Underwood's canvass. He would have contributed likewise, he said, to Gov. Wilson or Speaker Clark, but their managers did not ask him.

Mr. Ryan added that during the Winter he was abroad, and when he returned to this country he felt that it was a good Democratic year. Any Democrat, he said, appeared capable of reaching the White House, and as he had no choice of his own, he contributed to every Democratic candidate who asked him for support.

RYAN GIFTS NEWS TO PARKER.

Candidate Thinks Financier Gave from Pure Motives.

Alton B. Parker, who was the Democratic candidate for President in 1904, was asked last night to comment upon the testimony of Thomas F. Ryan before the Clapp committee in Washington. He read a newspaper account of Mr. Ryan's testimony, and then said that he knew very little about the financial end of the campaign.

"In August, 1904," said Mr. Parker, "I asked the gentlemen who had charge of the campaign not to accept any corporate money, and I have every reason to believe that my request prevailed. It apppears from this account that Mr. Ryan's contributions were purely personal and that the $350,000 was given to free the party from debts that had been incurred in the ordinary and necessary work of a National campaign."

Mr. Parker thought it extraordinary that any man could have been as generous as Mr. Ryan and he accepted it as proof that Mr. Ryan loved the Democratic Party and was only trying to preserve its integrity.

"I rarely saw anybody actively concerned in managing the campaign," said Mr. Parker, "except De Lancey Nicoll and William F. Sheehan. Those two I saw frequently and discussed the campaign with them. But I never went into financial questions, although I had a general idea that money was scarce."

"Do you see any difference between this contribution of Mr. Ryan and the money contributed to the Republican campaign fund by the Standard Oil Company?" was asked.

"I do not wish to characterize either one of those matters in any way," replied Mr. Parker, "and I will not do so. I took the trouble of ascertaining certain facts before I made the charge that the big trusts were contributing to the Republican fund. As soon as I was in possession of the facts I made them public. My purpose was to raise a storm in order that some good would come out of it. In this I was successful, for a Corrupt Practices Act was afterward enacted in this State."

Mr. Parker said that other States had followed the example of this State, and in time every State in the Union, he thought, would have a corrupt practices act.

"I was greatly in hopes," said Mr. Parker, "that the Federal Government would enact a good law along the same lines. A law was enacted, but it provided only for a fine, which was a ridiculous thing, because some of the money contributed could be set aside to pay this fine. The Federal law served no good purpose and can only be regarded as a beginning."

Then Mr. Parker said much of his information about the trust contributions to the Republican fund came from Col. Daniel S. Lamont, and so he was certain of his facts before he gave his information to the public. When asked if Col. Roosevelt did not deny the statements he had made, Mr. Parker replied:

"He did not. The Sunday before election a long statement was printed in the newspapers in which Col. Roosevelt discussed the subject from his own point of view, but he never actually denied the truth of anything I said. There was a general impression that a denial was made by Col. Roosevelt, but that was a wrong impression."

Mr. Parker said that Mr. Ryan's statement that $350,000 of the $450,000 was contributed after it was fairly certain that the Democrats would lose the fight was sufficient proof that the contribution was made to preserve the party and for no other reason. Then he said:

"I see no particular use in discussing the matter any further. That campaign was fought and lost by the Democrats. At 8 o'clock on election night I knew I was beaten, and I immediately turned my face toward new work. During that entire campaign I paid no attention to any of the details. I knew so little about the details that when I was asked, as I often was, what I thought of the vote of certain counties in this State or the vote in other States I had to confess that I did not know what the vote was. So far as I know, the Democratic campaign was run on clean lines. If this had not been the case, I would probably have known of it. But the gentlemen in charge of the campaign were all of one opinion as to what money should be accepted for campaign purposes. I am sure no corporation money was contributed to the Democratic campaign that year."

GERICKE KILLED IN FALL FROM BALLOON

German Lieutenant Was Winner of International Race in This Country.

A DROP OF THREE MILES

Balloon Caught a Mile from the Earth in an Unmanageable Eddy of Air.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—It is learned to-day that one of the victims of yesterday's balloon accident at Grossenhain was Lieut. Hans Gericke, winner of last year's international balloon race in the United States. He was to head the team of German defenders in the race to be held from Stuttgart next Saturday. His death has created a profound sensation. He was thrown from his balloon at a height of three miles by the explosion of the gas bag, which is believed to have been struck by lightning. His aid, Lieut. Steler, was also killed.

Gericke and Steler were making a trial flight to test the new balloon which they expected to use in the international races. Just above the town of Grossenhain they met with a thunderstorm, which they attempted to avoid by rising above the disturbance. When a mile in the air, their craft was caught in an eddy and became unmanageable. After a terrific plunge straight upward, the bag burst with a loud explosion. Both men dropped three miles to the ground and were dead when picked up.

The shattered instruments which the balloonists carried on their flight were examined to-day. The recording apparatus showed that they were riding at a height of 6,000 feet when they were suddenly hit with a vertical gust of wind which pushed them straight up with the violence of a hurricane to a height of over 15,000 feet. At that altitude the bag burst.

The balloon embodied all the latest ideas in gas-bag construction, and was regarded as the probable winner of the International Cup in next Saturday's contest.

FOR EQUALITY IN DIVORCES.

English Commission Will Recommend Same Rule for Both Sexes.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 22.—The Times, in a forecast of the reports of the Divorce Commission which for many months has been considering the amendment of the English divorce laws, says:

"It is understood that both the majority and minority reports of the commission will recommend that the sexes should be equal before the law in the matter of divorce. That is to say, both reports hold that it should no longer be incumbent on a wife to prove more against an unfaithful husband than a husband must prove against an unfaithful wife in order to secure a divorce."

At present a wife must prove cruelty or desertion as well as unfaithfulness.

TOLD THE GRANDMOTHER FIB.

Soldier Gets Six Months for Falsely Reporting Her Death.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—The dead grandmother fib which has helped so many office boys to attend baseball games has had a disastrous result for a musketeer of the Seventy-eighth German Infantry.

At Osnabrück a soldier recently invented the death of his maternal grandmother in order to obtain four days' leave of absence. As it subsequently came to light that the old lady was still enjoying good health the musketeer was court-martialed and sentenced to six months' imprisonment for swindling his superior officers. He was also degraded to the rank of a second-class soldier.

Justice Clark Decides That Care Tielenius Was Not Slandered.

The $200,000 slander suit brought by Carl Tielenius against Frederick Hollender was dismissed last evening in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, by Justice Clark after Mr. Hollender had given his testimony. The plaintiff was a former proprietor of the brewing company at 123 Lafayette Street, Manhattan, of which the defendant is the present head.

Tielenius accused Hollender of having told such slanderous things about him to his wife that he became separated from his family and lost his business.

THE TIMES'S WIRELESS DISPATCHES

DIAZ DENIES SHARE IN NEPHEW'S REVOLT

In the Dark as to Its Progress, Says Mexican ex-President—Not to Return.

WASHINGTON ON THE ALERT

No Danger to Americans Yet—Opposing Forces Inactive at Vera Cruz, Where All Is Quiet.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—In a further interview with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day, Gen. Diaz stated that he had so far received no direct communication whatever from Mexico, although he was following events there with the greatest interest. He said he could not make any forecast as to their outcome nor obtain any adequate appreciation of the real situation, as reports in the press were too scanty and contradictory.

Asked as to his plans, the deposed Mexican President said he intended to remain here for the present.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Gen. Porfirio Diaz, ex-President of Mexico, declared to-day that his intention of not returning to Mexico was unchanged. He is staying at a hotel here, and shows great interest in the news concerning his nephew, Felix Diaz, and the taking of the Port of Vera Cruz. He said, however, that he was totally without private advices from Mexico, and continued:

"Under the circumstances, I prefer not to express any opinion relative to my nephew's intentions and chances."

Naturally, he said, he was not connected in any way with the present movement, as had been reported. His only interest in the country, as he had on many occasions declared, was to see a peaceable Mexico, which would have a chance to develop and thrive.

Gen. Diaz is greatly disturbed in regard to several interviews, purporting to be from him, which have been published in Paris, and in which he has been quoted as attacking President Madero. He said these statements were untrue and that he had been so misquoted that he would prefer to say nothing more.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Ambassador Wilson, who arrived in Washington last night to consult Secretary Knox on the Mexican situation and make a report to him of the aspect of affairs in Mexico, did not see Mr. Knox to-day on the Secretary's arrival from Chicago after his trip to Japan. It is doubtful if he will have an opportunity of having a conference with the Secretary of State for a week or more, as Mr. Knox intends to leave Washington to-morrow morning for Beverly, to join President Taft, and it is not certain when he will return. Both Mr. Knox and Ambassador Wilson declined to comment on the Mexican situation.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent is able to say, without disclosing the source of his authority, that, in spite of general conditions in Mexico, which appear to be growing worse, the United States Government will not intervene unless a strong public sentiment demands such a course. It was pointed out that a continuance of outrages on the persons and property of Americans residing in Mexico might give rise to a fierce feeling of resentment among the people of the United States, and that this Government had not overlooked that danger, and was doing everything to bring about an abatement of the troubles with which Americans are beset, and to obtain the punishment of the persons responsible for the attacks.

The Government has information of many outrages not chronicled in the newspapers. It has called repeatedly on the Mexican Government to punish the offending citizens of that republic, and while there has been some response to these demands, the activity of the Mexican authorities has not been of a character to satisfy the United States that every effort was being made to bring the offenders to justice.

Considerable pressure is being brought to bear on the Taft Administration to adopt drastic measures to put an end to revolutionary troubles in Mexico. Many communications to this effect have come from capitalists and big business concerns having large investments in the republic. The Administration, however, it is declared, has not been influenced by these demands. It is the opinion of the Administration that intervention by the United States in Mexico would be greatly to Mexico's advantage, but would be extremely detrimental to the United States.

Official news was received at the State Department to-day that the City of Vera Cruz was not to be bombarded in the fighting expected between the revolutionists under Felix Diaz and the Federals besieging the city. The two commanders agreed last Saturday to that arrangement when a committee of the foreign Consular Corps laid the matter before the Federal commander, Gen. Beltram.

A dispatch received to-day at the Navy Department from Capt. Charles F. Hughes, commanding the cruiser Des Moines, now at Vera Cruz, states that the senior officer in command of the Federal gunboats has declared the port of Vera Cruz closed. The dispatch, which is somewhat confused by transmission, does not explain by what authority this action is taken.

The dispatch also says that the New York and Cuban steamship Seguranca will discharge her cargo, though this may be opposed. The expectation is that a large consignment of arms and ammunition intended for the Federals will be unloaded from the Seguranca and that an attempt will be made by the Diaz forces to seize them.

The State Department authorities to-day express confidence that the Diaz situation does not immediately portend any violence or distress to Americans in the City of Mexico or at other points in the southern part of the country. The representations of this Government to the Mexican Government that protection be afforded Americans are relied on to safeguard citizens in Vera Cruz.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 21.—Rebels, supposed to be a part of Salazar's army, who were seen last night opposite the El Paso smelter, had disappeared this morning, and Juarez people, after an anxious night, are less apprehensive of an attack.

DEMAND TAMPICO'S SURRENDER

Rebels' Request to Federals Holding City Is Refused.

TAMPICO, Mexico, Oct. 21.—The revolutionists to-day demanded the surrender of the City of Tampico, but the Federal forces refused to comply. The rebels numbered under 300 men.

It is reported that the country between Tampico and Ozoluama, fifty miles to the southward in the State of Vera Cruz, is in the possession of revolutionists commanded by Manuel Bravo, an ex-army engineer. The garrison here, commanded by Col. Gonzales, consists of 300 men.

In equipping a portion of his men Bravo is supposed to have used 80 rifles and 5,000 cartridges stolen from the stores of the Pearson syndicate

PICTURE TAKEN IN THE ACT

Picture Published—Taxicab Blocked by Admirers—Actual Bridging of That Social Gulf He Writes About.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 22.—Frederick Townsend Martin, who has adopted the motto of the Boy Scouts, "One good turn a day," paid a visit to the East End of London yesterday afternoon for the purpose of fulfilling his daily task.

After luncheon at the Bachelors' Club with the Duke and Duchess of Teck, Prince Alexander of Battenberg, the Marquis and Marchioness of Dufferin, the Marquis of Tullibardine, Countess Annesley, the Countess of Limerick, Lord Camoys, Lady Newborough, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, and other well-known persons, Mr. Martin hurried off to the East End slums in order to relieve a case of distress which had been brought to his notice. He visited a pawnshop and redeemed blankets and underclothing on behalf of a woman who was a victim of misfortune, and then posed with the woman before the pawnshop while a photographer took a snapshot, which is published this morning.

When the news spread that a philanthropist was about a large crowd quickly gathered, and it was with difficulty that Mr. Martin's taxicab forced a passage through and took him back to the Berkeley Hotel.

When a reporter found him there later Mr. Martin explained that his excursion was due to his desire to do one good turn daily, and not from eccentricity, of which he had frequently been accused since the publication of his book, "The Idle Rich." Mr. Martin said he found he could more often do a good turn daily among society people than among the very poor, adding:

"Society people have different sorts of trouble that money won't cure, but that a sympathetic word or a new ambition in life frequently will cure."

Mr. Martin will sail for America to-morrow. He has undertaken to do active work among the New York poor and will be busy among them while superintending the production of the melodrama he has written, showing the great gulf existing between the wealthy classes and the very poor.

SENT IMPROPER BOOKS HERE.

Bruno Schultz Convicted in Germany and Gets Five Months in Jail.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—The circulation in American of pernicious books and improper pictures resulted in a sentence of five months' imprisonment to-day on Bruno Schultz, who is said to have lived formerly in New Jersey.

Schultz was also known under the aliases of "Baron von Schoenwitz," "Baron von Ungerwerth," and "Baron von Adlersleben." His arrest in Germany was brought about by a report from Washington that the United States was being flooded with advertisements of indecent literature and photographs, and that these reached America with the postmark of Berlin.

When arrested Schultz displayed a forged United States passport bearing the name Forbach. He has been residing for some months in a beautiful country residence near Dresden.

WE MAY AID STANDARD OIL.

State Department Will See If German Bill Violates Treaties.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Beyond calling on John G. A. Leishman, the American Ambassador at Berlin, for a statement concerning the proposed creation of a German Government monopoly in petroleum, the State Department has taken no action in regard to the matter.

No formal request or protest in connection with the subject has come to this Government from the Standard Oil Company, although one of the attorneys for the company has suggested orally to State Department officials that he would like to be informed if the department should receive any information bearing on the matter.

Mr. Leishman sent a brief cablegram in response to the department's inquiry. He said merely that it was understood that a bill would be introduced at the forthcoming session of the Reichstag to create a company which would have a monopoly of the retail sale of petroleum in the German Empire.

According to what was said to-day, the department probably will make no move until this bill has been introduced. It will then be Ambassador Leishman's business to send a copy of it to the department, and when it is received in Washington the text of the bill will be submitted to the Counsellor and the Solicitor of the department for examination. This examination will be with particular reference to whether the bill contains anything inconsistent with the treaty arrangements between Germany and the United States, and what further action this Government may take will be dependent upon the findings of the Counsellor and the Solicitor.

WALDO RETIRES O'BRIEN.

Hughes Takes 16th Inspection District—Faurot Made an Inspector.

Inspector Michael Stephen O'Brien was retired yesterday by Police Commissioner Waldo and Capt. Faurot, who has been an acting Inspector and head of the Detective Bureau, has been made an Inspector and placed in charge of the bureau. Inspector Edward Hughes, who is succeeded by Inspector Faurot as head of the detectives, was sent to the Sixteenth Inspection District by Commissioner Waldo.

In making the retirement Commissioner Waldo acted under Section 361 of the Greater New York Charter, which gives the Police Commissioner power to retire any member of the uniformed force who has reached the age of 60, and who is not a veteran. The Sixteenth Inspection District, of which Inspector O'Brien was the head, takes in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn.

Inspector O'Brien reported for duty yesterday after an absence of seventeen days on his vacation and he was at once retired by the Commissioner. It was said that hints had been dropped to the Inspector that his application for retirement would be acted upon at once, but Inspector O'Brien did not wish to leave the force at the present time.

VACHRIS WINS RETIREMENT.

Court Grants Request of Detective, Which Waldo Refused.

Through an order of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, Police Lieut. Anthony Vachris, who was at the head of the Italian Detective Bureau before that branch of the service was abolished by Commissioner Waldo, was retired yesterday from the department on a pension of $1,125. The order was signed by Justice Kelby. After the disbandment of the Italian Bureau Vachris was transferred to City Island. He applied for retirement, but it was refused by the Commissioner. He then applied to the courts and the order retiring him was granted on the grounds that he had served the required number of years and for physical disability.

Lieut. Vachris was appointed in March, 1892. After the murder of Lieut. Joseph Petrosino in Italy in 1909, Vachris, with Detective John Crowley, was sent to that country by Commissioner Bingham. It was on the report that they submitted that the present agreement with Italy in police affairs was made.

NEGRO TO AID WICKERSHAM.

Assistant Attorney General Lewis Admitted to Practice in Supreme Court.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—William H. Lewis, one of the Assistant Attorneys General of the United States, whose application for admission to the American Bar Association was opposed on the ground that he was a negro, was admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court to-day on motion of Solicitor General Bullitt.

It is expected that he will assist Attorney General Wickersham, who was his foremost advocate, before the American Bar Association, in the argument of some of the Government cases pending in the Supreme Court.

Julian Hawthorne Pleads Not Guilty.

Julian Hawthorne, Albert Freeman, Josiah Quincy, and William J. Morton appeared yesterday before Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court to enter pleas of not guilty to a superseding indictment in the case brought against them, alleging the use of the mails to defraud investors in the Hawthorne mines in Canada. John McKinnon was also mentioned in the indictment, and has yet to plead. The trial of Hawthorne and his associates has been set for Nov. 18 before Judge Hough.

WOMAN KILLED AT SEA.

A Passenger on La Savoie Is Knocked Down by a Wave.

When the French liner La Savoie arrived at Quarantine from Havre Saturday, her commander reported that when the liner was bucking a westerly gale and head sea last Thursday Marie Faur, a Frenchwoman, 46 years old, was knocked down by a wave and received a concussion of the brain from which she died in a few hours. Her husband, who was traveling with her, requested that the body of his wife should be embalmed and brought to land instead of being buried at sea.

The body was sent to the city morgue at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street, last night, with her effects, which had been sealed up after her death by the purser of La Savoie. They will be opened to-day by the Coroner. Coroner's Physician Weston, it was said at the morgue last night, had been ordered to perform an autopsy to-day.

During the last week all incoming Atlantic liners have reported heavy westerly gales and head seas. The Anchor liner Columbia and the Holland-America liner Potsdam are twenty-four hours late, owing to the weather this side of the Grand Banks.

Col. Roosevelt Indorses Plan for a "Tuberculosis Day."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—In a letter received to-day by the National Anti-Tuberculosis Association, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who is an honorary Vice President, indorses the plan to observe Sunday as "Tuberculosis Day." Col. Roosevelt says in part:

"It is peculiarly fitting that clergymen, churches, and church organizations should impress upon their members and attendants the duty of actively supporting in every practical way their local agencies, hospitals, dispensaries, and the like, engaged in the suppression of tuberculosis. The amount of suffering, misery, orphanage, bitter poverty, and economic loss that would be obviated by the application of our present knowledge as to the causes and prevention of tuberculosis is simply incalculable."

MURPHY A PARADE LEADER.

He'll Head 2,000 Tammany Braves in the Line for Wilson.

More details regarding the big Wilson parade, which is to be held in this city on Wilson Day, Nov. 2, were given out yesterday by the Democratic National Committee. More than 2,000 Tammany braves will be in line, well up to the front, and Leader Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall will lead them.

In compliment to Mrs. Wilson, who is a Georgian, a special feature of the parade will be 250 Georgians in line, with Commissioner David Robinson as Marshal. Georgians, either living in New York or visiting here, are requested to forward their names to Room 432, Hotel Imperial, if they wish to join.

New Yorkers usually insist upon the best. It needs no persuasion at all to make them wear.

A Six Cylinder Argument

¶ A hack costs one dollar fifty per hour, a taxicab ten cents per look, and a six cylinder car any old thing per road house.

¶ Now, if uniform rates obtained for all of these methods of locomotion, nobody who is now content to ride in a taxi or a hack would ride in anything but a six cylinder car.

¶ For, it stands to reason that in order to get the fullest measure of satisfaction out of the money we spend we must spend it to the fullest advantage.

¶ We will say, for the matter of argument, that all ready-for-service clothes, including Saks clothes, cost the same, as, in fact, speaking solely in dollars and cents, they do.

¶ But there the similarity ends and the real difference begins, for although Saks clothes are priced as low as any other clothes they are made on a much higher plane.

¶ There is more actual thought and time and nervous energy expended on the tailoring of Saks clothes than on any other garments made, and there is more actual money expended in the tailoring of Saks clothes, because time and thought and nervous energy cost money.

¶ But it is that additional cost, which by eliminating the middleman we are enabled to bear, that makes a Saks garment what it is—a model of workmanship and the crystallized embodiment of Style.

PEOPLE who come to New York for the first time are surprised at the preponderance of paper money.

And it applies equally to New York clothes, which have the flexible spirit of Manhattan, plus the substance which any clothes may possess.

WILSON TO ADDRESS REPUBLICAN LEAGUE

At Rally in Philadelphia of Progressive Republicans Who Are Supporting a Democrat.

GREAT DEMAND FOR TICKETS

Governor Expected to Tell Why the Election of a Democrat Would Be a Step Forward for Progress.

Unless Col. Roosevelt suffers a relapse, Gov. Wilson will be the chief speaker and central figure at an independent Republican mass meeting in Philadelphia on Monday, Oct. 28. The meeting will be under the auspices of the Wilson National Progressive Republican League, of which Rudolph Spreckels is President, and will be in charge of the Pennsylvania branch of the league. The other speakers will be notable Progressive Republicans who are supporting Gov. Wilson in this campaign.

The meeting was arranged prior to the attempt on Col. Roosevelt's life. Announcement that it would be held was delayed by Gov. Wilson's decision to abandon his speaking engagements while Col. Roosevelt was incapacitated. Gov. Wilson on Saturday, however, informed Mr. Spreckels that he would speak on the date set unless the condition of the Progressive Party leader should change for the worse. The meeting will be held in the Academy of Music, and tickets will be issued this week.

Already more than 8,000 requests have been made for invitations, many coming from New York, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, and towns in Pennsylvania.

"The rally will be one of the most remarkable of the present campaign," said an official of the league yesterday. "It was arranged because of the insistent demands from all parts of the Keystone State that the New Jersey Governor deliver a campaign message directly to independent Progressive Republicans, telling them why the election of the Democratic Presidential ticket would mean a step forward in the Progressive cause. The league leaders expect through it to influence Republican votes in Gov. Wilson's favor and turn Pennsylvania from its Republican leanings into the Democratic colmun on Nov. 5."

The other speakers include Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Gilbert E. Roe, New York lawyer and former supporter of Senator La Follette; Rudolph Spreckels, and Henry C. Niles, Chairman of the Keystone Party of Pennsylvania. Powell Evans, President of the Pennsylvania branch of the league, will be Temporary Chairman, and Mr. Niles Permanent Chairman. The Vice Presidents of the meeting will be Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Louis D. Brandeis, Senator John J. Blaine of Wisconsin, and Guy Morrison Walker, New York lawyer and author.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 21.—Gov. Wilson has come to no final decision concerning his plans for the remainder of the campaign. With election two weeks off, the Governor said to-night that "things were still up in the air," and he has steadfastly refused to make any definite promises to deliver speeches before the votes are cast. It seems to be practically settled that he will review the big parade to be held in New York on Nov. 2, but that is all.

The Governor is anxiously awaiting dispatches which will tell to-morrow how Col. Theodore Roosevelt stands the long journey from Chicago to Oyster Bay, for that will go far to determine the course he will follow. If Col. Roosevelt is able soon to take active charge of his campaign, the Governor will then appear again on the stump.

He is very anxious to speak at least in Madison Square Garden on Oct. 31, and also at Philadelphia on Oct. 28.

There will be a meeting at Alexander Hall Thursday night under the auspices of the Woodrow Wilson Club of Princeton, at which ex-Gov. Hoke Smith of Georgia will speak. Gov. Wilson has been invited, and said to-night that it was not unlikely he would attend if he did not have to make a speech or take a part that would make him conspicuous.

The Governor will go to Trenton to spend a few hours at the State House tomorrow. He said that he did not expect any political visitors, and that as far as he knew now he would remain quietly at Princeton for several days.

Gov. Wilson made the discovery to-day that for a Presidential candidate to take a few hours off and forget politics was attempting the impossible. After dinner he grabbed a hat and headed for the football field to watch the practice. He was just becoming enthusiastic over a particularly effective play when K. L. Ames of the class of '90, one o the graduate coaches, joined him on the side lines. He immediately entered upon a debate about the tariff, mentioning Schedule K for an opening.

"I think his offense was almost criminal," said the Governor later. "I went to the field for diversion, but found to my chagrin that I could not get away from politics."

PRESIDENT REPEATS PROSPERITY PLEAS

In Letter to John Wanamaker He Thanks Him for His Support of Republican Cause.

DANGER IN TARIFF CHANGE

Says Third Party Followers Will Throw Away Votes and Democrats Are Playing with Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Oct. 21.—President Taft in a letter which he sent to-night to John Wanamaker, former Postmaster General, thanked him for the great help he had been to the Republican Party, and for the work he was doing to assure the party's success in the coming election. The letter says in part:

"I want to thank you for the splendid work you are doing for the success of the Republican Party in the approaching election. I thank you not for myself alone but for the people at large, who have so much to lose, so little to gain, from a change of Administration, who will indeed suffer if a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress secure the opportunity to make good their platform pledges, and an extra session of Congress is called next March to change the tariff from a protective to a revenue basis.

"Wholly apart from the respective merits of the 'protective' and 'the tariff for revenue' policies, it must be obvious to thinking men that so radical a change cannot be effected without a period of readjustment, the wiping out of numerous industries which prosper because they are protected, and which pay good wages to thousands of employes.

"As a protectionist, I can see no benefit to be gained from such a change, even when the readjustment is completed. For sixty years under the protective policy our industries have grown at a pace which has astounded the world. Our wage-earners have established and maintained a standard of living which is unknown in the Old World. Even during the period of high cost of living which has prevailed throughout the civilized world for a few years our people have suffered no such hardships as those of the Old World, notably free-trade England, where not only has the cost of foodstuffs been extarordinarily high but where the wages of the working people have by no means kept pace with the increased cost of living.

"We have experimented in the past with the tariff theories of our Democratic friends. You will recall as clearly as I do the distress which followed the passage of the Wilson bill. Is there not a certain significance in the fact that it is another Wilson who would again subject us to such an experiment? Wilson and prosperity are words that refuse to go together in our American history.

"You recall the report of Mayor Gilroy on conditions in New York when he and his Democratic administration conducted an investigation into the hardship and suffering which prevailed in 1894, and found that 185,000 persons were dependent on charity, because 52,000 men and nearly 15,000 women, who under normal conditions experienced no difficulty in securing employment, were out of work.

"You can recall the days when, as the result of just such tariff 'readjustment' as our Democratic friends now propose, there were soup kitchens in every large city, when able-bodied men were compelled to beg from door to door, while women and their little children died of starvation or were stunted in their development from the privation they were compelled to undergo.

"There are certain facts which stand out so prominently in this campaign that I cannot conceive how a majority of our vothers can fail to apprehend them. They are that a vote cast for the third party is a vote cast for the Democratic ticket, and that a vote cast for the Democratic ticket is a vote cast for economic experimentation, which under the most favorable circumstances, would mean lack of business confidence, the calling of loans, a stringency of the money market, the suspension of manufacturing, the destruction of the market for farm products, because the people would have no money to buy, and untold suffering for the wage earner and his family.

"I cannot understand how any American voter can fail to see that by throwing away his vote on the third party, or by voting to put the Democrats in power in the White House and in Congress, he is as surely courting disaster as is the small child playing with matches. And so, Mr. Wanamaker, far above my personal consideration, I am grateful to you and ta all who like you are helping the Republican cause this year."

President Taft may end his Beverly stay on Friday, when he returns from his Maine trip. He leaves Beverly on Wednesday for a visit to Portsmouth, N. H., and from there will motor on to Portland and to Poland Springs, where he will spend Wednesday and Thursday nights, coming back to Beverly on Friday morning. Secretary of State P. C. Knox will make the trip by motor to Poland Springs and will talk over several matters with the President.

The President leaves here on Friday afternoon, motoring to Boston, and will be at Cambridge Springs, Penn., Saturday, where he will attend the opening of the National Polish Home. He will also go over to Meadeville to spend an hour at the home of Representative Bates.

The President to-night found in his mail a six-leaf clover from a little Boston girl. "Here are four leaves for luck, and the other two to beat the Bull Moose," is what the little girl wrote.

TAFT SEES HIMSELF SPEAK.

And Mayor of Boston Sings While President Views Moving Pictures.

BEVERLY, Mass., Oct. 21.—With the President of the United States, Mrs. Taft, Miss Helen Taft, and fourteen Mayors from live Massachusetts cities among his audience, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston sang "Sweet Adeline," from the stage at the Dreamland Theatre, late this afternoon, in a way which made a decided hit with the big audience, and even the President joined in the refrain as the "Little General" carried along the song to the last lines.

Then the audience broke into applause, but the bashful Mayor bowed his acknowledgments, walked off the stage and took his seat. The President congratulated him on his voice and the way he had sung the song.

Mayors of fifteen Massachusetts cities which the President had visited this Summer were guests of the President and Mrs. Taft at Parramarta this afternoon. Those who sat around the President's table were Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston, Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge, Mayor R. G. Gleason of Marlboro, Mayor Isaac F. Patch of Gloucester, Mayor Frederick Dodge of Beverly, Mayor M. A. Scanlon of Lawrence, Mayor D. T. O'Connell of Worcester, Mayor Wm. P. Connery of Lynn, Mayor H. R. Howard of Brockton, Mayor Robert H. Burke of Newburyport, Mayor G. H. Farrell of Malden, Mayor R. B. Adams of Salem, Mayor E. H. Moulton of Haverhill, Mayor G. H. Malone of Chelsea, and Mayor Charles Hatfield of Newton.

The theatre was prettily decorated with flags and bunting, and when the President, Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen Taft came in, the audience stood and the orchestra played the "Star Spangled Banner."

The President saw pictures of himself and Mrs. Taft, taken when they made the first visit to Beverly on the Fourth of July, and heard the audience applaud as the pictures showed the great receptions at Worcester and at Altoona, Penn.

Mayor Fitzgerald was presented, and in a short speech which preceded his singing he conveyed the thanks of the Mayors for the delightful luncheon at Parramatta.

"While we may differ with the President in politics," said the Boston Mayor, "we all love him and we all respect him. We love the President, Mrs. Taft and every member of his family, and we have been pleased to have them with us for four years."

The President and Mrs. Taft occupied seats in the front of the theatre, and as they left the audience stood and cheered.

NOT A KNIGHT OF COLUMBUS.

Gov. Wilson Not Eligible to Membership in the Order.

In reference to the dispatch from Atlanta, Ga., in THE TIMES yesterday, which said that Thomas E. Watson, who was the running mate of Bryan on the Populist branch of the Fusion ticket in 1896, had announced himself against Gov. Wilson because the latter had joined the Knights of Columbus, William P. Larkin, Chairman of the New York Chapter of that organization, made the following statement to THE TIMES yesterday:

"The report that Gov. Wilson has joined the Knights of Columbus is erroneous. As a matter of fact, he is not eligible for membership, as he is not a Catholic."

It was said by mistake that Gov. Wilson was made an honorary member of the order on the occasion of the dinner of the Knights of Columbus in this city on Oct. 12, when Gov. Wilson was a speaker. At this dinner Mr. Larkin classed Gov. Wilson with Newman and Manning as a champion of the Catholics. Watson, who is hostile to the Catholic Church, announced in his magazine that after reading the report of the Knights of Columbus dinner he would support Wilson no longer.

THIS VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT.

Wallabout Market Men for Him, but Against Straus.

In a straw vote taken yesterday at the Wallabout Market, Brooklyn, Roosevelt received a plurality of 111 votes over Wilson and 1,437 over Taft. Sulzer led Straus by a plurality of 345 and Hedges by 1,440.

The votes were cast by Long Island farmers, who came to the market to dispose of their goods, and grocers, butchers, delicatessen storekeepers, and wholesale dealers in the market.

The vote was conducted by the Wallabout Market Merchants' Association, of which George Dressler is President.

JOHNSON BEGINS TOUR FOR COLONEL

Aided by Cockran, Clapp, and Beveridge, He Will Fill Roosevelt's Eastern Engagements.

SAYS HIS PLACE IS SAFE

Resolution Recalling Him Suspended —Madison Square Meeting to be Like Chicago Convention.

Gov. Hiram W. Johnson of California, the Bull Moose candidate for Vice President, who came to New York yesterday in order to fill so far as he could the Eastern speaking engagements of Col. Roosevelt, conferred with the Bull Moose leaders here and then departed for Camden, N. J. From now until Oct. 30 Gov. Johnson will tour the States which Col. Roosevelt had planned to visit before he was shot. These include New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, and Vermont. W. Bourke Cockran, Senator Moses E. Clapp, and Senator Beveridge will fill in other dates elsewhere. The Vice Presidential candidate will be back in New York in time to take part in the big Bull Moose meeting in Madison Square Garden on the night of Oct. 30, at which Col. Roosevelt hopes to be present.

Gov. Johnson said yesterday that he did not expect to be deposed as Governor because he had stayed outside the boundaries of California beyond the time allowed by law.

"I don't think my office is in jeopardy," he said with a smile. "I think I am all right legally. I have been in communication with the Attorney General of California and there seems to be no likelihood of any action against me."

"When the announcement was first made that you would forfeit your office by taking up Col. Roosevelt's campaign work, did you believe that you would be deposed?" Gov. Johnson was asked.

"There has been too much printed about that already," he replied. "I do not care to say anything more than that the legality of the matter has been settled in my favor."

Senator Joseph M. Dixon, who had talked with the Governor earlier in the day, said he was positive he stood in no danger so far as his place was concerned.

"The resolution of the State Legislature allowing the Governor to leave the State and engage in campaign work was suspended altogether," he declared.

Asked about the political situation in the States in which he had been speaking, Gov. Johnson said:

"The fight now is entirely between the Progressive and the Democratic candidates. It is a waste of time to discuss Mr. Taft's chances. He will be hopelessly third in every State which I have visited. He will even share the chances for third place with Debs. The openinion seems to be general wherever I have been that Mr. Wilson is simply marking time and does not present either a definite programme or take a stand on any issue that might arouse opposition. That feeling is working against him, and his strength is waning. It is generally accepted that Mr. Wilson makes beautiful speeches and charming metaphors, but that he gets nowhere on Governmental problems.

"Everywhere I have been there is a strong sentiment for the Progressive Party. The enthusiasm for Col. Roosevelt and the Progressive Party is greater than the enthusiasm for all the other candidates combined. Working in his cause are citizens who have never taken an active interest in politics before, but who are fighting unselfishly and with their whole souls for us. This is due in part to the remarkable affection these people hold for Col. Roosevelt. The contest so far has been delightful because of the character of those who have engaged in it."

Asked about Col. Roosevelt's condition, Gov. Johnson said that he had left the Colonel last Saturday in good spirits. It was necessary for him to husband his strength, though, Gov. Johnson declared.

"There is very little appreciation of the extraordinary shock he suffered and the immense amount of nervous energy he expended by making that hour and a half speech in Milwaukee with a bullet in him," the Governor said. "I cannot conceive of any other man doing the same thing.

"I have been drafted to fill in some of his dates which have been canceled owing to the shooting. It is simply up to me, as the next candidate under him on the ticket, to do the best I can, and I am delighted to be able to do that best, although I understand that I cannot begin to fill the Colonel's shoes."

From Camden Gov. Johnson will go to Elizabeth and speak there at noon to-day. He will speak in Trenton to-night, and for the following two days he will tour Pennsylvania, speaking at Scranton and Harrisburg. From there he will go to Connecticut and the other Eastern States. W. Bourke Cockran, candidate for Congress on the Bull Moose ticket from the First Congressional District, will substitute for Col. Roosevelt at Rochester on Oct. 31. Senator Clapp has been asked to fill the Colonel's engagement in Brooklyn on Oct. 29, and Senator Beveridge will speak in Philadelphia and elsewhere. Mr. Cockran will also speak at Providence on Oct. 28 and at Boston on Oct. 29.

But it is the great meeting at Madison Square Garden on the night of Oct. 30 that the Bull Moose leaders expect to be the crowning achievement of the campaign. There is every indication that the meeting will be one of the most remarkable ever held in the city. It has been definitely decided that the Colonel will speak there if his physical condition permits. If not, he will at least be present. It is planned to make the meeting a duplicate in certain ways of the Chicago Bull Moose National Convention, where a strong religious note was introduced. Hymns will be sung, and a clergyman, whose name has not yet been announced, will open the meeting with prayer.

GOV. JOHNSON'S JOB SAFE.

Can Campaign in East as Long as He Likes, Says Attorney General.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—Replying to your telegram relative to the announced intention of Gov. Johnson not to return to California within sixty days I have to say:

The Constitution of this State contains no provision limiting the period of absence of the Governor. A section of the political code provides that no officer shall absent himself from the State for more than sixty days without the consent of the Legislature. At the last regular session of the Legislature, by joint resolution, the period of absence was extended without limit to various officers, the Governor included. Therefore, if the consent of the Legislature were required, that consent has been given and no vacancy can result from the absence of the Governor for a period longer than sixty days.

There is another consideration which may be of interest. The office of Governor is created by the Constitution of California, and the conditions which will result in a vacancy are specified in that instrument. Absence from the State is not one of them. It does not lie within the power of the Legislature to prescribe causes of vacancy in addition to those mentioned in the Constitution. Hence the sixty-day period mentioned in the provision of the political code referred to does not apply to the Governor. Even without the consent of the Legislature the absence of the Governor may be prolonged beyond the sixty days without resulting in a vacancy.

Attorney General.

La Follette Sticks to Local Issues.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 21.—Senator Robert La Follette asked for the re-election of Francis E. McGovern as Governor of Wisconsin and criticised the legislative record of John C. Karel, the Democratic Gubernatorial nominee, in a speech today. Senator La Follette did not touch upon National issues.

Paul Rundel

BY

Author of "Dixie Hart," "Abner Daniel," "Jane Dawson," "M'am Linda," Etc.

THIS new story of Southern life stirs all the deepest emotions of the human heart. The story revolves about Paul Rundel, the son of a semi-invalid father and a vain, pleasure-loving mother who shamelessly accepts the attentions of another man. The action is swift and spirited as Paul, driven to desperation by the slanderous remarks about his mother, attempts to murder her lover and then flees the country.

Paul's subsequent return, his struggle upward toward higher ideals, his unflinching courage in the face of peril, and the awakening of his love for a pure-hearted young girl, who teaches him the meaning of faith and loyalty, all combine to form a plot that sweeps the reader along in a whirling current of conflicting emotions.

BIG SILENT VOTE IN ORANGE COUNTY

While Republican Poll Shows Taft Majority, Many Refuse to Commit Themselves.

DEMOCRATS COUNT ON SPLIT

Bull Moose Party Claims Large Part of Unexpressed Vote—Hedges Expected to Run Well.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, Oct. 21.—On the strength of a secret poll which has just been completed the Republican campaign managers here declare to-night that Orange County, which two years ago came within an ace of going Democratic, will roll up a comfortable majority for President Taft this year. The poll indicates that Col. Roosevelt will run third in the county.

Though it has not been established by any test that can be translated into figures, the Republican managers also declare that Job E. Hedges, the Republican nominee for Governor, will carry the county, though it is not claimed that the vote for Hedges will be as big as the vote for Taft.

What is known as the "silent vote," however, the Republicans admit, injects an element of uncertainty which must not be overlooked. Every one familiar with the careful manner in which the poll has been taken is ready to vouch that it is honest, and that it is accurate as far as it goes. But the trouble is that it does not go far enough.

When the poll was started it was with a view of ascertaining, among other things, the sentiment among the industrial workers in this city and vicinity. The men engaged in taking the poll have visited every industrial establishment of any importance in the City of Newburg and vicinity. They invited the workmen to express their preference for the Presidency, and assured them that their votes would be kept a secret. Under the circumstances they expected to get something like an adequate expression of prevailing sentiment. To their amazement they encountered hundreds of workers who were unwilling to state, even under a pledge of secrecy, how they would vote in the coming election.

The poll covered 1,005 voters. This is more than one-sixth of the number that will be qualified to vote. Of the number 509 declared that they would vote for President Taft, 258 indicated that they would vote for Woodrow Wilson, and 238 that they would cast their votes for Theodore Roosevelt.

On the strength of these retruns, if the same average holds good throughout the city, President Taft, it is claimed, would poll 2,800 votes in the city, and each of his two rivals just half that number. That estimate is undoubtedly correct, but the poll is not representative of the various voting elements in this locality.

In industrial establishments where from 300 to 400 workmen are employed, in most instances only from fifty to sixty ballots have been returned, the rest refusing to go on record, and in some instances the number of votes polled in an establishment does not represent 10 per cent. of those employed there.

No figures can be obtained here from any of the campaign managers. The Democrats point to the result in Orange two years ago, when this county, until recently a Republican stronghold, came within 264 votes of going Democratic, Chairman F. Ketcham of the Democratic County Committee told THE TIMES correspondent to-day that he expected to do as well, or nearly as well this year, and that, with the Republican Party split, Orange could be put down as a Democratic county in the coming election.

This Democratic forecast is undoubtedly too optimistic by far. In 1908 President Taft received a majority of almost 5,000 in Orange. Two years ago, when the Republican majority was only 264 votes, the Republican organization was in the throes of bitter factional strife. The followers of former Gov. Benjamin B. Odell were out for the scalps of those who followed the Progressive fortunes of Senator John B. Rose. Odell and Rose have buried the hatchet since. To-day both of them appeared together at the various meetings addressed by Job E. Hedges in various parts of Orange County. There is not the slightest friction, and, except for the percentage of Republicans who have deserted to cast in their fortunes with the Bull Moose Party, no Republican defection is looked for at the polls.

The strength of the Bull Moose Party is an unknown quantity. On the surface its organization does not show any indication of strength, but it is admitted that there may be behind it a sentiment somewhat in proportion to the silent vote, which is unusually large this year. It has placed a full ticket in the field, and a great many of the local Bull Moose candidates are men held in great respect in this country who may get a personal vote far beyond the intrinsic strength of the movement itself.

All of the three candidates for Governor have visited Orange. Job E. Hedges addressed several meetings here to-day. In this city he spoke in the open air, in front of the City Hall, during the noon hour. He had an audience of about 2.000 and was well received. Sulzer held a meeting here last week in a hall which holds about 1,000 persons and filled it. Oscar S. Straus spoke in the same hall to a crowd that filled it to capacity. Both the Sulzer and Straus meetings are declared to have been fully as enthusiastic as the meeting addressed by Hedges at noon to-day.

These three meetings are about the only indications Newburg has had that a campaign is in progress All ordinary signs are lacking. Not a campaign banner has been flung to the wind. In the general apathy that prevails in Orange County this year the registration figures fell below not only the figures of the last Presidential year but below the registration figures in the State election two years ago.

EVEN UP-STATE REGISTRATION

Decline in Some Localities Is Leveled by Gains Elsewhere.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 21.—Scattering returns of the four days' registration in up-State communities to hand to-day indicate that the smaller registration in some localities is balanced by gains elsewhere. For instance, Rochester's total is 1,836 greater than in 1908 and 6,449 larger than in 1910, while Troy's is 1,042 less than in 1908 and 219 larger than in 1910. GIVES WILSON PENNSYLVANIA

Gov. Emmet O'Neal, Who Has Been Campaigning There, Sure of Outcome.

Gov. Emmet O'Neal of Alabama, who spent last week campaigning for Wilson in Pennsylvania, said yesterday before leaving the Waldorf for Wilmington, Del., where he was to speak last night, that the Democratic candidate would get the Keystone State.

"I spoke in St. Mary's, Bellefont, Shamokin, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, and Quakertown," said Gov. O'Neal. "The audiences were large and enthusiastic, and on Saturday night at the open-air meeting at Quakertown there were about 3,000 in the crowd. There is no doubt that Wilson will carry the State. He will probably not get a majority, but with the division in the Republican Party, a plurality is assured."

ABANDON TAG-DAY PLAN.

Gaynor Firm in His Refusal to Allow Women to Sell Badges.

The Founders' Day planned by the women of the Bull Moose Party to raise money here for the campaign on the eve of the birthday of Col. Roosevelt, Oct. 26, is not to come off. Mrs. Amos Pinchot, National Chairman of the Woman's Finance Committee, interviewed Mayor Gaynor yesterday, and permission for the celebration was politely but firmly refused.

"The Mayor was most courteous," said Mrs. Pinchot, "and said that he would be very glad to oblige us, but that Founders' Day, as we had planned it, would be illegal. He also said that it was against public policy, because such a plan once carried into effect the city would be continually overrun with people and organizations wishing to raise money for different purposes."

The women are not discouraged, however, though they expected to raise as much in New York as Mrs. Medill McCormack is planning to do in Chicago—$500,000—and they consider themselves that much out of pocket by the Mayor's decision. There is a talk of the women bombarding neighboring towns, of their taking Madison Square Garden and getting subscriptions, and giving out Founder's badges there, and they will hold a meeting to-day at the Manhattan to make a definite decision. Founders' Day will be celebrated as planned in other parts of the country.

Mary Donnelly has decided to have a little quiet celebration of Founders' Day on her own account, notwithstanding the Mayor's decision.

"Just a nice, quiet little parade," she said. "We won't try to get rid of badges, but a few Irish boys and girls will march, wearing placards, reading: 'Are You Looking for Me?' While others will reply: 'Yes, You Are.'"

Then tambourines muffled in bandanas will be extended to inquiring crowds, who will drop in their contributions. There may be a push cart, also muffled in bandanas, to carry home the bulk of the contributions.

WILSON WOMEN AT HOME.

Receptions Held Daily at Headquarters—Mrs. Harriman Recovering.

The Borden Harriman headquarters of Wilson and Marshall reception days were begun yesterday with Mrs. Jessie L. Higginson in command. Room 1,064 in the Fifth Avenue Building is reserved for the visitors, and every one interested in the politics of the establishment or wishing to be will be welcome every afternoon from 2 to 5. Other women who will be on the Reception Committee different afternoons are Mrs. James B. Eustis, Mrs. David Kirk, Mrs. John O'Leary, Mrs. Frank L. Polk, Mrs. Mortimer Fox, Mrs. MacDonald Sheridan, and Mrs. Jesse Drew Beale. The Misses Wilson, daughters of the Democratic nominee, will be present from time to time.

Work for the big National rally on Nov. 2 is going on all the time. This was the women's idea, Mrs. Cohn Johnson suggesting it, and it has been taken up by the men. A delegation of the women will be on the reviewing stand for the monster parade in New York and on the committee receiving at the reception at the Hotel Imperial later. The women are organizing the city by districts to have meetings that day where the special message from Gov. Wilson will be read. Other meetings, picnics, and lawn parties will be held all over the country for the same purpose.

Mrs. Frank Woodruff of the National Woman's Organization has flourishing branches in Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Alabama, recently organized, and other Southern States where the women have been working longer. There are now thirty States regularly organized by the women for Wilson, with scattered members in others.

Mrs. Borden Harriman at St. Luke's Hospital is rapidly improving, and directing the work from her bedside.

STRAUS IS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY HERE

Sure That Roosevelt and Progressive State Ticket Will Carry New York.

BIG RECEPTION IN CHICAGO

Thousands Turned Away from Meeting in the Loop District—More Than 5,000 at Night Rally.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Oscar S. Straus, Progressive candidate for Governor of New York, was the recipient of a remarkable ovation in the chief city of Illinois to-day. At the Garrick Theatre, in the centre of the great "loop" district, thousands who desired to hear Mr. Straus discuss the issues of the campaign were turned away. People shouted and clamorded in an attempt to hear what New York's Progressive candidate had to say, but without avail. So great was the crowd in Randolph Street that emergency calls had to be sent to headquarters for additional policemen to preserve order.

A similar condition prevailed on the West Side to-night, where, at a meeting addressed by Mr. Straus, more than 5,000 people were unable to get admission.

Mr. Straus has no fear as to the result of the election in Illinois or in his home State. "Certainly the Progressives are going to carry New York," he declared.

"Do you mean that both you and Roosevelt will win?" Mr. Straus was asked.

"Both 'Teddy' and myself; certainly," replied Mr. Straus.

"Do you think the shooting of Col. Roosevelt is having any effect on the campaign?" was asked.

"You may say this: People may criticise Roosevelt as they will, but all must recognize that he has vitalized the moral issues of our commercial age, and it should not have required the bullet of an assassin to convince the American people of his unselfish devotion to the public welfare and his profound sincerity in the advocacy of the Progressive cause."

Mr. Straus is accompanied on his visit to Chicago by Mrs. Straus and C. W. Farnham, his campaign manager. While he was enthusiastically received by the adherents of the Progressive Party, Mrs. Straus was entertained by women prominent in the social and philanthropic life of Chicago.

Mrs. Straus said that she had only one interest in the campaign, and that was the conservation of Mr. Straus. "It is job enough," she said. "I have been with him on every trip he has made since his nomination, and I shall not leave his side till the election is over. I probably can help the cause more by guarding his health than in any other way."

Mrs. Straus says she is taking no hand in the women's work for the new party beyond aiding her husband. "My daughters are helping in the collection of funds and the like," she said. "My part will be to watch our candidate for Governor and help him all I can."

MISS WILSON TO AID TAFT.

Secretary's Daughter Will Sing and Speak on Father's Western Tour.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Flora Wilson, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, will sing at all political rallies where her father will speak on his Western trip for President Taft.

Secretary Wilson and his daughter will campaign through Michigan, Indiana, and Iowa, opening their tour in Marquette, Mich., to-morrow evening. Miss Wilson, who is an ardent suffragist, will speak in the course of her father's itinerary.

SULZER TOURS UP-STATE.

He and Glynn on the Stump Between Troy and Plattsburg.

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Beginning a two weeks' tour that will carry them into almost every section of the State, William Sulzer and Martin H. Glynn, Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, left here at 9 o'clock this morning for a day's campaigning that ended to-night at Plattsburg. Congressman Sulzer arrived here early this morning from New York, and was joined later by Mr. Glynn, who spent Sunday at his home in Albany.

To-day's itinerary included speeches at Mechanicville, Saratoga Springs, Glens Falls, Hudson Falls, Fort Edward, Whitehall, Crown Point, Port Henry, and Westport.

At Mechanicville Mr. Sulzer expressed confidence in his election, and declared that if elected he would take orders only from his own conscience. He said that legitimate business, big or little, need have no fear of him, but that he would prosecute all wrong doers.

"Equal rights for all, special privilege to none," was the keynote of the address Mr. Sulzer delivered at the Empire Theatre, Glens Falls. Both he and Martin H. Glynn received a hearty reception.

"If elected Governor, and I shall be," he said, "I shall be Governor of all the people. The latch string of the Executive chamber will hang on the outside, and the poor man will have as much influence with me as will the rich man. My sympathies are with the poor, but I shall be fair with the rich."

Mr. Sulzer was greeted by large crowds at Fort Edward and Hudson Falls. He spoke from the car platform of his special train, urging the conservation of human life and rights. He said that he desired to protect the children upon whom the future of the commonwealth depended.

The party continued their trip north to Plattsburg, where they spent the night. Stops were made at points along Lake Champlain.

FIGHT FOR MORE SENATORS.

Democratic National Committee Now Figures on Majority.

Satisfied with the progress made in the interest of the Democratic Presidential candidate, the Democratic National Committee turned its attention yesterday to the Senatorial situation. Special work will be devoted to the Senatorial fights in various States where the Democrats have a chance to win new members. It was learned yesterday that the real reason for Chairman William F. McCombs's trip to Chicago last week was to go over the Senatorial ground with the Western leaders.

The Democrats have forty-three Senators now. They need forty-nine for a majority, and they are sanguine of electing the necessary six to get that majority. The death last week of Senator W. B. Hepburn of Idaho left a vacancy that the Idaho Legislature must fill. Senator Hepburn was a Republican, but the Democrats believe they have sufficient strength in the Legislature to have the next Senator a Democrat. Chairman McCombs and Senator J. A. Reed of Missouri, who is in charge of the Senatorial campaign, will send a corps of speakers into Idaho at once to make a vigorous campaign.

SIXTH COLUMN FOR MOOSE.

Attorney General Carmody Upholds Lazansky's Decision.

ALBANY, Oct. 21. — Attorney General Carmody, in an opinion to-day, upheld the action of Secretary of State Lazansky in placing the Progressive Party nominations in the sixth column on the election ballot.

Nominations by the Progressive Party and the Socialist Labor Party were made by petition, and the Secretary of State ruled that in the matter of independent nominations the ones filed first should follow the regular nominations on the ballot. The Progressive nominations were filed first, and, accordingly, were placed in the sixth column, following the nominations of the Democratic, Republican, Socialist, Independence League, and Prohibition Parties. Subsequently Progressive Party leaders requested that the names of its candidates be placed in the seventh column, next to the "blank" column on the ballot, and that the nominations of the Socialist Labor Party should be placed in the sixth column. Secretary of State Lazansky declined to do this.

every price is marked in plain figures.

We understand that many so-called "private shops" never have the same price for any two people—if Mrs. Smith or Miss Jones comes in she is asked a price according to how much it is thought she will pay. Many saleswomen receive excessive salaries because it is expected that they can sell at exorbitant prices to customers whose patronage they are supposed to control!

This establishment pays good salaries to competent salespeople, who are instructed to render their best service to each and every customer they wait upon—and sell every garment at its plainly marked price.

MEN'S SUITS at $27.50

Worthy of a Moment of Your Time

Of all the various groups in this collection of Gimbel clothing none has met with more favor than the showing of Suits at $27.50.

The price has something to do with it. $27.50 is a good average sum that may be expected to buy a satisfactory suit.

But the suits themselves furnish the most powerful incentive, because they actually better your expectations at their price.

There are seven distinct models, including a double-breasted style and the new Gimbel "Squadron" single- or double-breasted model which has proved such a favorite. Some of the Suits are made with the new "ARM-FREE" vest—another Gimbel idea—and the first actual improvement in men's clothing that has been made in a long time.

Materials are beautiful, and constitute one of the chief merits of the Suits. Among them you will find a rich navy blue herringbone cheviot or soft worsted cheviot, also in navy blue; a widewale serge and many fine unfinished worsteds. There are browns, grays, striped and interwoven effects, and a handsome plain black.

Linings are of fine alpaca, or serge; and sizes include shorts, stouts and long, as well as regulars. Every Suit is strictly hand-tailored. Thoroughly satisfactory Suits, in short, at their price, $27.50.

See them, by all means. Fourth Floor

These Shirts Make a Strong Bid for YOUR $1.50

They simply HAVE to be better than the average run of Shirts at the price, to make you stop and look at them. And they are better. We have been in the shirt business for some time, and have acquired a pretty clear understanding of what men want, in the shirts they buy.

One of these things is COMFORT. And these $1.50 Shirts are chock-full of it—across the shoulders, under the arms, in the lengths of the sleeves and the body—dimensions that are sometimes skimped. Then, the matters of neat finish, fineness of materials, well-chosen patterns—all taken care of in these Shirts. SIZES FOR BIG MEN, TOO—16 to 20, with all measurements in proportion. Plaited or plain bosoms, coat style, with attached cuffs. We should like to have you see them. Main Floor might have been consumed by Becker in getting downtown from his Washington Heights apartment. Von Diezelski, called to corroborate and strengthen Hawley's statement, left the defense with another hour to account for, and an hour coming just around the time of daybreak, the time when Becker was supposed to have given to his fellow conspirators assurances of his protection and their safety.

File's testimony was not so damaging, since he left the stand with no other admissions than such as made his testimony, drawn out by Mr. McIntyre, entirely valueless. He was called to contradict the testimony of Louis Krause, the waiter who said he had seen Jack Sullivan at the scene of the shooting, and had seen him lean over the dead Rosenthal and arise smiling. File contradicted this readily enough, but an instant later Mr. Moss made him admit that he had no eyes for any one other than the murderers, and that he couldn't remember whom he had seen and whom he had not seen in the crowd.

There was no discrediting of File in these admissions, for his answers to Mr. McIntyre were as true as his answers to Mr. Moss. His testimony lost value simply in proportion as it became evident that it was because File had not looked, and not because the men might not have been there, that he failed to see Krause and Sullivan.

Strong-Arm Men Testify.

These were the witnesses in which the biggest interest of the day centred, although the cross-examination of Joseph B. Shephard and the complete examinations of James C. White and Charles C. Steinert, all ex-members of Becker's squad, held the audience breathless with interest. John D. O'Connor and Arthur Carmick, other ex-members of the same squad, also testified, and when the last man had been excused from the stand there remained no whole shred of the testimony of Max Margolies or of Mrs. Lillian Rosenthal, provided the testimony of the five policemen is believed by the jurors.

Becker's former aids testified that the raid on Rosenthal's gambling house was an honest raid, made on evidence honestly obtained. None of them had seen Margolies in Becker's office when they received instructions to make the raid, and none of them had received from the Lieutenant a description of the inside of Rosenthal's place. Neither had any one of them heard Becker explain to Mrs. Rosenthal that "it was Herman or me," though some had heard the gambler's wife try to lead Becker aside to talk and had heard him, with just indignation, declare, "If you have anything to say to me, say it here!"

It was certainly a bad day for Mrs. Rosenthal and Max Margolies, and it was a bad day, too, for James E. Hallon, the convict-lawyer, according to the weight with the jury of the testimony of four witnesses, three of them inmates of the Tombs and two of these awaiting trial for murder. When the four left the stand, however, they were excused by Mr. Whitman or Mr. Moss with an airy wave of the hand and a sarcastic smile which seemed to indicate the belief of the prosecutors that the testimony of these men had been shot full of holes.

Hallon had testified that on last Aug. 23 he heard Detective James C. White, in conversation with Becker while the latter was in the bathroom of the Tombs, tell the Lieutenant that he "had it straight from one of Whitman's men" that "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg had been arrested and had "squealed," and that he had heard Becker reply that it was only another crook arraigned against him whom no jury would believe, and that when the excitement blew over the public would give him a pension for killing Rosenthal.

White testified that no such conversation had taken place. Hugo Newgebauer and Thomas Gannon, now awaiting trial in the Tombs, swore that no such conversation had taken place, while Michael Conway, a trusty serving a short sentence for disorderly conduct, testified that he had taken a note from Hallon to Becker. The convict-lawyer had denied this emphatically. Conway was not permitted by Justice Goff, however, to identify the note which Hallon had repudiated, and what benefit his testimony might have been to the defense was lost.

C. William Jones, Treasurer of Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, took the stand to discredit the story of Morris Luban that he had attended that theatre on the evening of last July 15. He testified that the theatre had been closed then, though the roof garden was open. Inasmuch as Luban had naively suggested, when this was called to his attention, that he must have visited the roof garden, Mr. Jones threw no new light on the situation.

Much Testimony Excluded.

Inspector Edward C. Hughes tried to tell how he, and not Becker, had ordered White and Steinert to arrest "Big Jack" Zelig, but Justice Goff wouldn't let him, so Hughes left the stand without having aided the accused Lieutenant. Justice Goff also prevented George W. McClosker, Clerk of the County Court of Kings County, from aiding the defense by introducing the official documents in the indictment and conviction of Morris Luban for a felony committed in Brooklyn, nor would he let Grant Crabtree, a clerk at Police Headquarters, submit the records of Becker's work as head of the Strong-Arm Squad. Two other pieces of testimony were barred out also by the Justice when he would not admit to evidence Mr Moss's letter to Jack Sullivan nor permit William A. Cannon, a keeper in the Tombs, to tell of conferences between Rose, Webber, and Vallon.

The remaining witnesses of the day were the four character witnesses and Benjamin Walker, proprietor of an employment agency. What he meant to tell probably never will be learned, for Mr. McIntyre excused him hurriedly and disgustedly when Walker, speaking with a heavy accent, declared that there were so many Krauses in the world he couldn't tell without seeing the man whether he knew Louis Krause, the waiter, or not. Apparently, could he have identified the man, Walker was to have discredited Krause in some way, so Krause had a narrow escape.

Lieut. Becker, looking as cheerful as he looked on Friday when things went well for him, seemed not to be aware that the trend of his luck had turned and that yesterday's witnesses were doing anything but helping him. He smiled frequently at his wife and she at him. Apparently it did the Lieutenant good simply to see his former comrades on the witness stand, rallying to his support, and in so far as lay in the power of each doing his best to smash down, as they had smashed the doors of so many gambling houses, the wall of evidence which gradually had been inclosing Becker.

Mrs. Becker, seeming cheerful, too, sat in her usual seat. She wore the gray striped gown which has been her usual costume on the days when she has not appeared entirely in blue, and as the little woman took notes of the testimony of the various witnesses one wondered whether it were possible that she grasped the import of all that was being said and all that she was so busily transferring to paper. If she did, and if she realized that all was not going well for her husband, she gave no intimation of her knowledge by any change of expression or manner.

The courtroom was thronged yesterday, for there seemed to be a general belief that Becker himself would take the stand. As early as 9 o'clock the crowd of curious began to gather in the halls of the Criminal Court Building, and it kept Capt. Tierney and Lieut. Brady, with a squad of men, busy to keep this throng moving and to bar from the courtroom all but those having actual business there.

It was 10:15 o'clock when the jurors, in a big sightseeing automobile, arrived from the Murray Hill Hotel, and it was twelve minutes later when Justice Goff took his seat on the bench and commanded: "Call the first witness."

DEFEND THE GAMBLING RAID.

Witnesses for Becker Swear It Was No Fake—Damaging Police Record.

Joseph B. Shephard, dressed in civilian clothes, was called to the stand at once. He had undergone a direct examination at the hands of Mr. McIntyre on Saturday, and had been on the witness stand with Mr. Moss about to begin his cross-examination when Justice Goff adjourned court to let the jurors register. Mr. Moss lost no time in beginning his work, and asked policeman named Shepherd had a slight Rosenthal raid in his own automobile. A policeman named Shephard had a slight accident in Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, the other day, and Mr. Moss seemed to think it was the ex-detective. Shephard answered that he had not gone in his own automobile, and Mr. Moss asked:

"Do you own an automobile?"

"No, Sir," replied the witness, whom the jury had been observing with considerable interest while they believed he was the owner of a motor car. "But you went in an automobile," suggested Mr. Moss, and Shephard admitted that he had traveled thus part of the way.

"I don't know whose car it was," he admitted in answer to another question.

Mr. Moss produced an affidavit then and demanded to know whether Shephard had signed it before Chief Justice McAdoo. It seemed as if the former Strong Arm man had little desire to answer this line of questioning, but finally he conceded that it was his signature on the document. Mr. Moss, over the objection of Mr. McIntyre, introduced the affidavit into evidence. It showed that Herbert Hull, a nephew of Rosenthal, had been described as "John Wheelman No. 2."

Wheelman No. 2 proved to have been described as a man 6 feet in height, weighing 175 pounds, and having dark hair tinged with gray. Hull happens to be a youth of 19 or 20. Mr. Moss read the affidavit to the jury, the document telling how Shephard, Steinert, and White had lost $50 each at the roulette table, and then, with Mr. Moss putting the questions, the examination ran:

Q.—Where in your affidavit do you find any man to answer the description of Hull? A.—John Wheelman No. 1.

Q.—Do you not recall that men at the wheel were both dark, and one was called "Barney" and the other "Herman"? A.—I do not.

Q.—Do you not recall that "John Wheelman No. 2" came to the table? A.—Yes, about half an hour after I entered.

Q.—Was he at the table when you were playing? A.—Yes. He came there as I started to play.

Q.—Didn't you see him? A.—I saw his body. I could not see his face, as he had a green celluloid shade over the upper part of his face.

Q.—Isn't it your duty to secure accurate descriptions on which to procure warrants? A.—I could do no better.

Q.—Did you go to Pabst's in Columbus Circle before you made the raid? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you see Lieut. Becker there? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you have any warrant for Rosenthal? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any warrant for a man of his description? (Mr. McIntyre objected but was overruled.) A.—Not that I know of; I never saw the man.

Q.—Were you ever at the Elks' Club? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long were you working on the Strong Arm Squad? A.—From April to August.

Q.—Did you ever obtain evidence against any other gambling house? A.—Yes, one, Freeman's.

Contradict Margolies.

Mr. Moss gave up the cross-examination at that point, and Mr. McIntyre tried on redirect examination to give Shephard a chance to say that he had never engaged in a "fake raid." Justice Goff sustained Mr. Moss's objection, however, and James C. White was called by Mr. McIntyre.

White, like Shephard, had been in the raiding party which descended on Rosenthal's on April 11, and said he had gone there two days before to get evidence. He said he was accompanied by Steinert and Shephard and a man named Smith whom he met at the Cadillac Hotel, and who took them into the place. Mr. McIntyre led the examination along thus:

Q.—Where did you get instructions to go to Rosenthal's premises? Q.—I received instructions in the afternoon in Room 105 in Headquarters.

Q.—Was Max Margolies there? A.—I did not see him.

Q.—At any time you received instructions from Becker in reference to the raid on Rosenthal's, did you see Margolies? A.—I did not.

White told of having entered through the basement door, and of having been escorted to a room on the second floor, where he saw nine or ten men. He said he and his companions bought $50 worth of chips apiece, and that he played roulette. He saw another table, at which some men were playing faro, but he said he did not pay much attention to this.

"When I got upstairs," he testified, "I gave a man behind a table $50 for some chips. Herbert Hull called out the numbers. I stayed there about an hour and then went down stairs and out. I did not see Rosenthal there."

The next day, said White, he received instructions from Lieut. Becker to get warrants for the men he had seen in the place. He said that he did so, and at 11 o'clock at night, on April 17, he met some of the raiding party, including Becker at Columbus Circle, and they proceeded to Rosenthal's place by auto, and made the raid.

Denies Reported Conversation.

Mr. McIntyre conducted him over a description of the raid, by asking:

Q.—What did you do there? A.—When we got there I went to tho basement and I heard glass crash and someone said: "Come up this way," and I went upstairs. When I got in I made a list of the gambling paraphernalia in the room where I had gambled. By this time Steinert arrived and joined Shephard and myself.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Rosenthal? A.—I saw a woman at the parlor door.

Q.—Did you see Lieut. Becker there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where was he? A.—He was running all over the house.

Q.—Did you see him talk to Mrs. Rosenthal? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you see him down in the basement with her? A.—No. I was pretty busy with the gambling paraphernalia. It was a pretty big job.

Q.—Did you hear Mrs. Rosenthal or the woman say to him take her nephew? A.—I did not.

Q.—Before you went into the premises either on the night of the raid or two nights before, did Becker give you a description of the interior of the house to enable you to get in? A.—He did not.

Q.—On Friday, Aug. 23, were you in the city prison? A.—I was.

Q.—On that occasion did you say to Becker: "Chief, I have been looking for you. I have it from Whitman's man that they've got Lefty Louie and he is going to tell everything," and did Becker then say to you, "Oh hell, they have no one to testify against me but crooks, and when this blows over we will get a pension for killing that damned crook Rosenthal," or words to that effect? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did he say to you: "Lay low, Jimmy, and sit fast and there will be no trouble? A.—He did not.

Q.—Was that raid you made and the affidavit of evidence honest and genuine? A.—Yes.

Mr. Moss started at White savagely on cross-examination. He made him admit that previous to becoming a policeman he had been a salesman, a bartender, a peddler, and a waiter, in fact, anything he could get to do in any line of work. Mr. Moss started by asking:

Q.—Were you ever at the Elks' Club? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever meet Mr. Becker there? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you meet him there? A.—New Year's Eve.

Q.—Was there any other police officer with you at the Elks' Club? A.—Yes, five or six members of the Strong Arm Squad.

Q.—What was the occasion of your being there? A.—To see that there was no disorder. We went there when the waiters' strike was on.

Q.—Did you see Herman Rosenthal? A.—I did not know him then. I met him in March.

Q.—What were the occasions for being at the Elks Club after that? A.—On times that I dropped in there.

Q.—Didn't you sit at the long table at the Elks' Club on New Year's Eve? A.—No.

Asked About Zelig Charge.

Mr. Moss shifted his line of attack to the matter of the arrest of "Big Jack" Zelig for carrying a revolver, for which arrest White and Steinert, too, are under indictment for perjury. White admitted readily enough that he had arrested Zelig for carrying a revolver and that he had appeared in the Magistrates' Court against him.

"Did you not, on the occasion of Zelig's arrest, find that he had no revolver in his pocket?" demanded Mr. Moss, and White insisted that the reverse was true and that he had found a revolver.

"Did you not falsely charge him with having a revolver?" persisted the Assistant Prosecutor.

"I did not," declared White indignantly.

And then Mr. Moss had Herbert Hull brought into court so that he might confront White. The ex-detective identified him as the man for whom he had got a warrant. Mr. Moss was through and Mr. McIntyre took White in hand for redirect examination to bring out that Becker had not authorized the arrest of Zelig. He began:

Q.—At the time you arrested Zelig, were you connected with the Strong Arm Squad? A.—I was not.

Q.—Were you under command of Lieut. Becker? A.—No.

Q.—Under whom were you? A.—Inspector Hughes.

Q.—Who gave you instructions to go after Zelig? A.—Inspector Hughes.

White's answers persuaded Mr. Moss to resume his cross-examination for a moment with the question:

Q.—Were you afterward made a member of the Strong Arm Squad? A.—I was.

Q.—Was Officer Steinert also appointed to the Strong Arm Squad? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long after Zelig's arrest? A.—About two weeks.

That was all the admission Mr. Moss wanted, and Charles C. Steinert was called to take White's place on the stand. Mr. Hart drew from him that he had not seen Max Margolies when Lieut. Becker instructed him and the others to get evidence against Rosenthal, and he repeated practically letter perfect the story of obtaining the evidence which White had told. On the night of the raid, however, Steinert had not reached the house until the others had broken into the place, gaining admission when he did enter by showing his shield to a woman who answered his ring at the bell. He said he thought it was Mrs. Rosenthal.

"Did you see this woman and Lieut. Becker have any conversation?" asked Mr. McIntyre, going directly to the refutation of Mrs. Rosenthal's testimony.

"I did not," replied Steinert.

Mr. McIntyre hurried Steinert along then to his visit to the Tombs with White on Aug. 23. He said he had heard White and Becker talking, but they had not been near the bathroom, where Hallon had testified he overheard them speaking, so Justice Goff ruled out Steinert's evidence on this point.

Mr. Moss began on Steinert as strongly as he had on White. He first asked:

Q.—Did you ever do work with Becker? A.—Not until I got on the Strong Arm Squad.

Q.—Do you know how you came to get on the squad. A.—Yes. I had been on the Bicycle Squad for five years and was then sent to patrol duty. I asked several friends to try and help me to get an assignment to a position where I could be home with my wife and family nights. I was referred to Lieut. Becker, and made an application to him, and he told me he would look me up and see what he could do for me. Then I was appointed to the squad.

Q.—Were you frequently on expeditions to look up information against gambling? A.—I was.

Q.—What has been your work? A.—I have looked for gunmen, "frisked" those thought to be gunmen, worked on excise cases, on disorderly resort cases, and in fact all kinds of police work.

Steinert Repeats White.

Mr. Moss seemed to think Steinert's testimony was strikingly like that of Shephard and White, and he demanded to know whether Steinert had not talked to them after they left the witness stand. Steinert admitted that he had. He admitted that he was a good friend of White and had worked considerably with him. Then Mr. Moss got down to the discrepancy between Hull's appearance and the description given of him in the affidavits, and Steinert, like White, found that Hull fitted the description of Wheelman 1 instead of Wheelman 2.

"Do you also mean to say that this is a clerical error?" demanded Mr. Moss, but Steinert did not answer directly, and Mr. Moss asked: "Did you in your affidavit have any description similar to Hubert Hull?"

"I did," said Steinert, "Wheelman No. 1."

"Did Shepard tell you to say that there was a clerical error concerning that John Wheelman?" persisted Mr. Moss, and when Mr. McIntyre objected, Justice Goff told him to stop his attack on the witness.

"Did you hear what Mr. McIntyre said to Shepard?" then asked Mr. Moss. Mr. McIntyre caused a ripple of laughter through the room by remarking ruefully: "No one pays any attention to me."

Steinert told of arresting Zelig and in describing it said he found a weapon. Then Mr. Moss handed him back to Mr. McIntyre, who tried in half a dozen ways to get Steinert to say that Becker had not ordered the arrest of Zelig, but Mr. Moss objected and was sustained each time. Steinert told Mr. Moss on recross-examination that Inspector Hughes had sent him to assign him to the Strong Arm Squad the second time, and then he was excused.

George W. McCloskey, Clerk of the County Court of Kings, had brought several documents dealing with the indictment and arrest of Morris Luban to court, but Justice Goff would not countenance this means of discrediting the witness, who said he had seen the killing of Rosenthal, and he was excused.

Patrolman John D. O'Conor, also an ex-member of Becker's squad, a big, burly man with golden hair and mustache and the appearance of a Viking, told of having been in the Rosenthal raid and of having seen Becker and Mrs. Rosenthal together, but he had heard no conversation between them.

Patrolman Arthur Carmick, also a former strong arm man, corroborated O'Conor's story, and Mr. Moss got nothing from him on cross-examination largely because he hadn't told anything of importance on his direct questioning.

Grant Crabtree, the Headquarters clerk, armed with Becker's record, was the next to be ruled off the stand by Justice Goff, though Mr. McIntyre made a hard fight to introduce Crabtree's documents, and then Mr. Jones was called. The Victoria Theatre Treasurer simply said his theatre was closed on the night Morris Luban said he took the girl there. Mr. Moss, on cross-examination, had him say that the roof garden was open, Luban having decided at the last minute that perhaps it had been the roof garden that he went to.

Police Blotter in Evidence.

And then came Lieut. von Diezelski, the man who was to aid the defense and who instead put it in a panic. After the blotter kept by the Lieutenant in the early morning of last July 16 had been produced, Mr. McIntyre asked:

Q.—Did you see Lieut. Becker that night? A.—Yes, in the station house.

Q.—What time did he come in? A.—Four twenty-five A. M.

Q.—Do you know if he was outside in the street at that time? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Do you know what time an automobile was examined outside the station? A.—No.

Q.—Was Coroner Feinberg there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did District Attorney Whitman visit the station house? A.—Yes, he and the Coroner were there at 3:25 A. M.

Q.—How many people were there at that time? A.—Forty or fifty.

Q.—Did you make entry as to those people in the blotter? A.—No.

Q.—Do you remember seeing District Attorney Whitman? A.—He visited the station at 3:20.

Von Diezelski's reply that Becker had entered the station at 4:25 o'clock so thoroughly upset the defense that Justice Goff looked with a quizzical smile, while Mr. McIntyre hurriedly consulted with his assistants. Usually the Justice has cut short these conferences with the declaration that if another question was not forthcoming he would discharge the witness. Yesterday he seemed to realize that the defense had dealt itself a body blow.

Mr. Whitman, almost laughing aloud at the discomfiture of the defense, asked Von Diezelski only the question as to whether he had made the entry in the blotter and whether it had been made on the morning of July 16. Von Diezelski said he had made the entry at that time, and Mr. Whitman, still smiling, announced, "That's all."

Quick Change of Witnesses.

The Lieutenant's testimony closed the morning session, and in the afternoon Inspector Hughes took the stand. Justice Goff stopped his testimony as to who had ordered Steinert and White to arrest Zelig, and the Inspector was excused. Then came another witness who provided the prosecution with a smile at the expense of the defense. He was Benjamin Walker, who has been an employment agent for sixteen years.

"Do you know Louis Krause, a waiter?" asked Mr. McIntyre, and then he stood in very evident amazement as Walker rattled off:

"I know a Krause. Sure I know a Krause, but there are so many Krauses in this world I can't be sure whether I know your Krause unless I see him."

Mr. McIntyre wasted just time enough to tell Walker he would not need him any more, and Mr. Moss smilingly said he had nothing to ask.

"Before I call the next witness will you please take the stand yourself, Mr. Moss?" was Mr. McIntyre's next remark, and once Mr. Moss was seated he tried to get into evidence Mr. Moss's letter to Sullivan. Mr. Moss identified it, but when Mr. McIntyre offered it in evidence Mr. Whitman objected, and Justice Goff sustaining Mr. Whitman, Mr. Moss was excused from the stand.

Then came Detective William W. Duggan, the witness who did more for the defense than all the other witnesses of yesterday put together. He flatly contradicted some of "Bridgey" Webber's statements and thus cast discredit on his whole story. Duggan, too, gave every appearance of telling the exact truth, and made a better impression on the jury than had any of the ex-Strong Arm men. Mr. Hart opened his examination by asking:

Q.—Do you know "Bridgey" or Louis Webber? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you talk to Louis or "Bridgey" Webber about three years ago? A.—Yes, I cannot remember the exact date.

Q.—Where did you talk to Webber at that time? (Mr. Moss objected and was sustained.)

Q.—Did Webber say at that time that his place had been robbed by "Tough Tony" and "Spanish Louie" at the instigation of Rosenthal? A.—Not in those words.

Q.—Did he say so in substance? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Webber say to you that a place was robbed by "Tough Tony" and "Spanish Louie" at Rosenthal's suggestion? (An objection by Moss was sustained.)

Q.—Did Webber say that Vallon's place had been robbed at the instigation of Rosenthal? A.—He did.

Webber Blamed Rosenthal.

Q.—Will you state the whole of the conversation you had with Webber on that occasion?

(By Justice Goff)—What is that question for?

(By Mr. Hart)—For the purpose of showing hostility toward Herman Rosenthal three years ago. (Justice Goff allowed the witness to answer.) A.—The first time was in the early part of 1909, outside of Police Headquarters. He, Webber, said that Harry Vallon's place at Fourteenth Street and Third Avenue, had been "stuck up," and robbed of $300 or thereabouts, and we asked who did it. He said: "Sheeney Johnnie, Boob Walker, and Tough Tony."

Q.—Did you have a further conversation with Becker? A.—After we arrested the men we went to Magistrate's court and identification was made of one man. Webber then said that Rosenthal was responsible for the robbery.

Q.—Did you have further conversations with Webber? A.—Yes, one at Webber's home, and at Police Headquarters.

Q.—What was said at Webber's home? A.—He said his jaw had been broken, and that it had been done with a pair of brass knuckles. He described the man and we arrested a man named Ferracci, known as "Tough Tony." He identified him as his assailant, and said that Rosenthal was back of the assault.

Q.—Have you had any talk with Webber about Rosenthal? A.—Yes, several.

Q.—Where were they held? A.—I cannot tell.

Q.—What did he say? Q.—I can't remember exactly.

Q.—What did he say in substance? A.—That Rosenthal was responsible for having his jaw broken.

Q.—What was the date of the last conversation? A.—About twelve months ago.

Mr. Moss could not shake Duggan on cross-examination. The detective said he worked with Val O'Farrell when O'Farrell was in the Police Department, and that O'Farrell had come to him Saturday and asked him if he recalled the conversations he had just related. He insisted that he had not gone over the conversations with O'Farrell. Mr. Moss was for letting Duggan go when Mr. Whitman suggested the only line of questions which could throw the least doubt on Duggan's narrative. The testimony ran thus:

Q.—Did you report to Police Headquarters the conversations with Webber. A.—I did not.

Q.—Why didn't you. A.—I didn't think it necessary.

Q.—Did you know Lieut. Becker? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know Lieut. Becker had been put under arrest charged with murder? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell any one representing him of the conversations with Webberr? A.—Only Mr. Stryker.

Q.—So this knowledge has been locked up within you all this time? (Objected to and sustained.)

A call was made for File, but as he did not appear Hugo Newgebauer was called from the Tombs. A short, slender youth, he looked at the jury and at Mr. McIntyre with a shifty eye, and answered questions as though he was well used to the procedure of courts. Later it developed he had been convicted twice, and was now awaiting trial.

He told Mr. Hart he had seen White and Becker together at the bath, but had not heard the conversation Hallon reported. Mr. Whitman cross-examined him himself, asking:

Q.—Did you tell Becker about this conversation? A.—No.

Q.—Whom did you tell? A.—I was working outside and told Hallon.

Q.—How did you happen to be here to-day? A.—Mr. Becker asked me to come.

Q.—Did you speak to him two weeks ago? A.—I sent him around a note to tell him that Hallon was a squealer and was trying to put it over him.

Q.—Why did you think something was going to happen? A.—I knew Hallon was going to say something?

Character Good, They Say.

Newgebauer recalled the day of the conversation—Aug. 23—because his mother visited him that day. Mr. Whitman proceeded to make him admit instantly that his mother had visited him some sixteen times since he had been to the Tombs, and smiled his satisfaction when Newgebauer made the admission.

Then Charles T. Olip, a manufacturing jeweler and the first of the character witnesses, was called. He gave Becker a fine character, and was getting along swimmingly till Mr. Moss made him admit that he had a brother who had retired from the force only a year ago. Then he excused him.

File came on the stand then and gave his testimony, which Mr. Moss easily shook, and next came William A. Cannon, a keeper in the Tombs, who would have told of the meetings there of Rose, Webber and Vallon, had not Justice Goff stopped him.

Next the pen door swung open again and Thomas Gannon, a prisoner, entered from the Tombs. Like Newgebauer, he had heard Becker and White talk, but had not heard anything like what Hallon reported. Mr. Whitman made the youth admit he had been convicted in the Catholic Protectory and in Elmira, and now was awaiting trial for the murder of Chris Larsen. That was enough for the District Attorney.

Michael Conway, a trusty, came in from the Tombs next and told of having delivered a note from Hallon to Becker, the sending of which the convict-lawyer had denied. He was not allowed to identify a note which Hallon had repudiated, and he was excused without having accomplished much.

Joseph Krennich, Martin Wallace, and Guy W. Culgin were character witnesses who had heard nothing bad of Becker, but who could not testify that they had ever heard discussed his reputation for peace and quietness.

Mr. Culgin was called only when it was learned that it would be inconvenient for him to appear to-day. To let him testify Mr. Hart stopped the reading of the report of the Hot Springs commission, and he resumed it when Mr. Culgin had left the stand. He read into the record the testimony of Thomas Pettit, the Acting Mayor of Hot Springs; of Douglas Hotchkiss, of Postmaster Frederick E. Johnston, of Gilbert Hoagaboom, a bathhouse keeper, and of Michael Bergholtz, whom Schepps on the stand characterized the other day as a pickpocket of twenty years' standing in New York.

Most of this testimony was reported from Hot Springs when it was taken, and was introduced yesterday to show that Schepps had made statements and admissions there which showed a very considerable knowledge of the Rosenthal murder, even if not knowledge enough to make him an accomplice.

Hot Springs Evidence.

Pettit's testimony stated that Schepps had spoken of Jack Rose as a very dear friend and "Schepps seemed to love Rose's children." The story of how Schepps said he had something to sell which Mr. Whitman wanted to buy and that he must make for himself the best bargain he could was also contained in Pettit's evidence.

Schepps told Hotchkiss that he was the keynote of the whole situation in New York and said:

"I don't want you to think that I was killed a man who was worth anything. That man was a bum. I'll tell you the kind of a fellow he was. He'd steal another fellow's chip in a bank roll. He'd declare a chap in if they were winning. I don't want you to think that I'm a common murderer, but I'm here, and I never expected to be in this position."

He told Johnston that his testimony would send Becker to the electric chair, and told the Postmaster that Becker had said in his presence after the murder that he would have killed Rosenthal if the gunmen had not. The testimony of Hoagaboom and Bergholtz was similar. Mr. Hart announced that this was all the defense cared to introduce. Mr. Moss said he had concluded reading it, and Justice Goff adjourned the trial until this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The Oriental Store

Oriental Rugs in Carpet Sizes

ONE of the difficulties of modern housekeeping is to secure suitable Oriental rugs in large carpet sizes at prices which are not well nigh prohibitive. The character of the rug must be there, or it is not reasonable at any price.

If you have a dining-room, or drawing-room, or foyer, approximating twelve by fifteen feet, here are some large, selected Orientals we would like you to examine. First, they are Vantine rugs. They are here as the result of experience in selecting. That the prices are in most instances from $50 to $125 lower than most widely advertised sale prices is, however, the interesting circumstance.

Unusually Rich Saruk Rugs in Beautiful Compositions, $195 to $300

There are over sixty from which to make your selection, the usual prices of which would be from $250 to $450. Mellow rose reds, Persian blues and tans in artistic combinations, with peeps of ivory in the borders and medallions. Sizes run from 8 feet to 9.3 feet wide, and from 11 feet to 12.9 feet long. Big, handsome rugs, good for a lifetime—to prize more as their value is increased rapidly from year to year.

Also a splendid collection of Kermanshahs and Serapis at about the same prices.

75 Selected Orientals, $62.50

Including Saruks, Sennas, Kermanshahs and Bokharas—best Vantine selections; 4 to 4½ ft. wide and 5 to 7 ft. long. Every one a combination of desirable colorings.

90 Unusual Small Pieces, $20

In Mosouls, Kurds and Daghestans, running from 3½ to 4 ft. wide and from 6 to 7 ft. long.

50 Large Kazak Rugs, $45

Two of them together will furnish the floor of a large room. Average 4½ to 5½ ft. wide and 6 to 8 ft. long. Rich, distinctive colorings.

35 Cashmere Rugs, $75 to $95

In the dark blue, white, rose and yellow colorings, in sharp contrast—rugs with fine long fringes. An assortment which cannot be duplicated in this city. 7½ to 9 ft. wide and 9½ to 10½ ft. long.

Carpet Size Mahals, $100 to $175

In blue, brown and old red grounds, with typical Persian designs—and some unusual blue and brown combinations. Rich pile, 8½ to 10 ft. wide and 11 to 13 ft. long.

FALL WITH SIDEWALK INTO A BLIND CELLAR

Six Persons Hurt When Flagging Gives Way Under Hurrying Throngs in Canal Street.

DROP 12 FEET INTO DARK PIT

Excavation Supposed to Have Once Been Used by Gamblers as Hiding Place for Paraphernalia.

The throngs hurrying down Canal Street were thrown into a panic at 6 o'clock last evening when, without warning, fifteen feet of the sidewalk in front of the building at 191 fell into a cellar twelve feet deep. Some twenty persons were on the strip of sidewalk when it began to cave in, but all but six succeeded in getting to firm ground before the stones gave way. Here is a list of those who fell into the cellar, all of whom were injured:

FONTALLI, FRANK, 20 years old, of 117 Mott Street; cuts on the head and sprained arms.

GOTTLIED, BENJAMIN, 23 years old, of 231 East Thirteenth Street; contusions on legs and sprained ankles.

RENANT, ARMANDA, of 250 East Eighty-third Street; cuts about head and body.

SCHWARTZ, SAMUEL, of 42 Avenue D; bruises and cuts about the body.

SIEGEL, ESTHER, of 64 Cannon Street; back injured.

SNYDER, ELIZABETH, of 3 Sophia Street; abrasions on chest and back.

It was dark when the accident occurred, and the hundreds on both sides of the pit became greatly alarmed when, without being able to see the cause, they heard the crash of falling stones and the cries of the injured. Those who did approach the hole saw only a dark cellar with heavy flagstones dangling above it, supported by pipes, which ran underneath the pavement. The danger that these flagstones might fall kept men from descending to aid those who were calling for help from the darkness below.

Patrolman Fischell of the Elizabeth Street Station heard the crash of the falling sidewalk as he came from the Canal Street Subway station, and with Police Sergeant McLaughlin and Patrolmen McConegy and Pollak, ran to the hole. With lanterns taken from the guard rail of a near-by excavation, Fischell and James Otto, a driver of 111 Mulberry Street, were lowered into the pit and lifted the cellar débris from the injured. As those who had fallen into the pit were freed from the litter of stone and timbers that held them down, they were drawn to the street with ropes and carried into a store in the neighborhood. Ambulances then took them to the Hudson Street Hospital. A fire alarm was turned in, but before the apparatus arrived every one had been rescued.

At the hospital, all the injured, after they had been attended by surgeons, requested to be sent to their homes. They were all allowed to depart in carriages sent by their relatives, with the exception of Benjamin Gottlied, who, the physicians said, was too dangerously injured to be moved.

When the police examined the cave-in they found that the only support for the pavement had been some timbers encased in cement. The building in front of which the accident occurred was untenanted. The police said it belonged to the estate of Martin Grossman of 1,108 Jackson Avenue, the Bronx. The cellar into which the sidewalk fell seemingly had no connection with any building. The only way the police could explain its existence was that it had been used as a hiding place for their paraphernalia by gamblers when Canal Street was infested by resorts, and that the entrance to it had been walled up. There was a fire in a building near the pit a few months ago, and the water used to fight it is thought to have weakened the walls of the pit so that it gave way under the weight of the crowd.

If it had not been for the frail support of the pipes which ran underneath the pavement and prevented the large flagstones from falling into the pit the police declared that all of those who fell with the sidewalk would have been crushed to death. Workmen sent from the Department of Buildings discovered underneath the cellar exposed by the cave-in a second cellar, which also had no opening. Canal Street is honeycombed with such unused cellars, and it was said that there was danger of other cave-ins at many places.

CLUB THIEVES GET $3,140.

Celtic Park Manager Loses $1,000 and Sunday's Receipts Are Gone.

Thieves visited the clubhouse in Celtic Park, on the outskirts of Long Island City some time before sunrise yesterday morning, and, besides a liberal sampling of the refreshments at the bar, they took $3,140 in cash that was in the safe. Of this $1,000 belonged to Thomas Lynch, manager of the park, and the rest belonged to the Irish-American Athletic Club, and represented the receipts of the annual Fall games attended on Sunday afternoon by 6,000 loyal patrons.

Until recently it has been the custom of the club's President, P. J. Conway, to carry the gate receipts with him, but for the past few weeks he has left them at the park till next day. The thieves may not have felt sure that he would keep to the new arrangement. There was an attempt to get him to leave the park hurriedly on Sunday afternoon, when a telephone message came in the middle of the games that his house in Manhattan was on fire, but, instead of hurrying home, Mr. Conway went to the telephone and learned that it was a hoax.

The work of the thieves in the club suggested expertness in the game. The safe was forced neatly and the three watchdogs silenced with poison. The invasion of the bar showed that they took their time, while the night watchman and Manager Lynch slept peacefully in another part of the building.

Much of the stolen money was in small change. There was $200 in nickels and $300 in dimes, all packed in cigar boxes, which were found later discarded in the grass not far from the club.

RAIN AFFECTS EMIGRATION.

Weather Determines Number of Newcomers, Says Dr. Edward Bruckner.

Dr. Edward Bruckner of the Imperial and Royal Geographical Society of Vienna lectured yesterday afternoon at Columbia University on "Settlements in the United States as Controlled by Climate and Climatic Conditions." He showed that there was a well-defined parallel in rise and fall, not only in rainfall and crops, but also in the tide of emigration to this country. In the years of comparative dryness there is little if any emigration from the countries of Western Europe, because under those conditions crops thrive, while in years of wet weather the crops are poor and there is much emigration to America because here, when there is much rain, the crops are abundant, due chiefly to the warmness of the climate. In Eastern Europe conditions parallel those of America and good crops in this country are counteracted by good crops in the home countries of those living to the east of Germany and Austria.

Every thirty-five years, according to Dr. Bruckner, there is an almost perfect oscillation of humid and dry periods. In the last century, for example, there was a maximum of humid weather in the forties and a minimum in the middle sixties, with recurring maximum in the eighties with another fall. Just now we are passing into a period of much rain, and by 1920 this period should reach its maximum.

FIGHT OVER SUBWAY ROUTE.

William Street Property Owners in Two Rival Camps.

Property owners and business men in the neighborhood of William Street have divided into two camps over the construction along William Street of the Interborough's new subway. A meeting has been called at the Drug and Chemical Club at 100 William Street, for 4 o'clock this afternoon, by William J. Schieffelin, both as a property owner and a representative of one of the oldest firms in the vicinity, to organize a resistance to the attempt of the property owners headed by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company to prevent the construction of this particular subway.

Mr. Schieffelin has the support, among others, of F. W. Woolworth, who is building the Woolworth Building; William R. Grace & Co., who are erecting a banking establishment near Hanover Square; Lehn & Fink, wholesale dealers in perfumes, the Humphreys Medicine Company, Ammin & Co., and the Berlin & Jones Envelope Company. He has invited Alexander Gilbert, H. W. Black, Herbert B. Harding, Albert Plaut, Major F. T. Lee, William H. Heller, Albert H. Frankel, Charles A. Schieren, and F. A. M. Burrelle to act as a committee to promote the construction of the William Street subway.

The opposition to the subway was organized by a meeting last July at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, at which it was said a number of the most important property owners along the thoroughfare would refuse their assent to its construction.

POLITICS IN BANK TROUBLE.

Mr. Williams Complains of Interference in One of the Robin Cases.

Interference by a prominent politician in the affairs of the Northern Bank was alleged yesterday by ex-Deputy State Superintendent of Banks J. D. Williams in the Robin bankruptcy proceedings before Commissioner Gilchrist. Mr. Williams said that the Northern Bank had a claim for $30,000 against John T. Wood, who was connected with the Bankers' Realty Company and other Robin enterprises.

A politician, said Mr. Williams, came to the office of Supt. Van Tuyl and suggested that this claim should be held out till the statute of limitations had had time to run. Mr. Williams declared that he could not remember the name of the politician, but he understood that Supt. Van Tuyl ordered him out of his office.

The hearing will be continued to-morrow.

GET INSANE THIEF IN THE VANDERBILT

Former Nurse, Escaped Asylum Inmate, Found Working as Maid at Hotel.

Y. W. C. A. LETTER HELPED

Woman Convicted of Larceny After Long and Excellent Record in Many Hospitals.

Several days ago a neatly dressed, spectacled woman, about 28 years old, applied at the Hotel Vanderbilt for a position as maid. She came equipped with a letter of recommendation as to her character from the Young Women's Christian Association, and was accepted and immediately put to work. Yesterday evening Detective Sergts. Boyle and O'Hara of the West Thirtieth Street Station arrested this woman as a fugitive from justice, she having escaped from the Massachusetts State Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Worcester, where she was confined on a conviction for larceny.

All that the young woman would say when she was brought to the station house was that her name was Mrs. Amelia Leonard. The Lieutenant, the detectives, and the matron plied her with questions in vain. She will therefore be held here until the authorities from Worcester who were notified last night of her capture, can send an officer for her return.

According to a statement issued by Dr. E. V. Scribner, the Superintendent of the State Hospital at Worcester, Mrs. Leonard, also known as Mrs. William Bayne Phillips and as Mrs. Emily Burton, had a long and good record as a trained nurse, in which capacity she served in many hospitals of the United States and Canada.

In February, however, although her past record had been unimpeachable, she was arrested on the charge of larceny. Upon her conviction she was sentenced to the Sherborn Reformatory, in Massachusetts. Later on she was adjudged insane by the prison authorities, and on Sept. 28 she was transferred to the hospital at Worcester. Four days later she escaped, and the efforts of the police in determining her whereabouts were fruitless until last night.

At the Hotel Vanderbilt the management expressed great surprise at the discovery that they had been employing an insane woman with a criminal record. They were not certain whether the letter of recommendation which the woman had presented had come from the local branch of the Y. W. C. A. or from Massachusetts. No occasion had been found, however, for doubting the good character of the young woman because of either her manner or her actions.

HEDGES ON POLICE EVILS.

Says as Governor He'd Oust Commissioner if Life Here Was Menaced.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Job E. Hedges, Republican candidate for Governor, addressing a large and friendly audience at the theatre here to-day, attacked Tammany Hall and the Progressive Party. The Progressives could not win, he said, but if they united with the Democrats they might be able to elect a Democratic Legislature which would be controlled by Tammany.

"Do you want such a condition," he asked. "Be as mad as you want to, but don't be silly. Don't be like the man who gave up religion because he once saw a minister who had become drunk through accident."

Mr. Hedges said that in common with the other candidates he had been asked what he would do with the New York police if he were elected Governor and continued:

"Mr. Straus has said that he did not know what he would do. Mr. Sulzer said that he would take up the matter when he got to it. I said that if, when I take office, human life in New York is in danger, I will remove the Police Commissioner, no matter who he is." He added that he did not believe in a State Constabulary.

Mr. Hedges was accompanied by ex-Gov. Odell, Congressman Bradley and others. The party came here from Newburg by automobile and later proceeded by special train for Walton, where a night meeting was held. On the way brief stops were made at Summitville, Luzon, Livingston Manor and Roscoe.

HEARS JURIST OWNS HOUSE USED FOR VICE

MINISTER AN OWNER, TOO

As Well as Chamber of Commerce Official and ex-City Controller, Says F. H. Whiting.

Frederick H. Whiting, Secretary of the Citizens' Committee of Fourteen, declared yesterday at a hearing before the Committee on Laws and Legislation of the Board of Aldermen on the so-called "tin-plate" ordinance that among the owners of houses used as disorderly resorts in this city were a Supreme Court Justice, an official of the Chamber of Commerce, an ex-Controller of the city, and a minister from Connecticut.

This ordinance has been proposed by Alderman Stapleton, and provides that the names of owners of property and the holders of mortgages of more than 80 per cent. of the assessed valuation shall be displayed on the front of all buildings in New York City in letters at least one and one-half inches high.

The idea behind the ordinance is that many houses used for various illegal purposes are owned by persons in good standing in society, and that if their ownership of or interest in property is thus boldly displayed, they will realize a good deal more keenly their responsibility for the uses to which their buildings are put.

Alderman Nicoll presided at the hearing, and among those who appeared in favor of the resolution were the Rev. Father J. Curry of St. James's Church, Owen R. Lovejoy, General Secretary of the Child Labor Commission; the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Jacob A. Riis, Dr. James G. Walsh, Dean of the Medical School of Fordham University; John Lovejoy Elliott of the Hudson Guild, and the Rev. Dr. Thomas Hall of the Union Theological Seminary.

Father Curry declared that the little tin plate bill had brought consternation to the lawbreakers of the city, and asserted that there were more disorderly resorts on the west than on the east side.

The opponents to the proposed ordinance dwelt principally on the hardship of its requirements as regards placarding of the names of mortgagees. They stigmatized this as outrageous and a violation of personal privacy, and declared that it would make the holding of property very much less desirable. One speaker even expressed the opinion that with such an ordinance it would be impossible to give New York property away.

The committee made no intimation as to its probable action

RUNS OFF WITH HIS BABY.

Tarrytown Man in Close Pursuit of His Sister-in-Law to Ireland.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 21.—James Doorley, a letter carrier connected with the branch office at Grand Central Station, will sail on a fast steamer Wednesday in pursuit of his sister-in-law, Miss Jennie Rooney, who on Thursday last kidnapped his eight-months-old boy and sailed for Ireland. Doorley is distracted and at his request the police have cabled to have Miss Rooney arrested and held when she reaches the other side. She sailed on a slow steamer and Doorley expects to reach Queenstown on the same day or a few hours after her arrival.

Miss Rooney, who had been living in New York at the Doorley house when Doorley's wife died last March, seven weeks after her child was born, returned to North Tarrytown with him when he decided to come back here to live with his mother and sister. It was said by the family that while Miss Rooney was cross and often ill tempered they never thought of her doing violence to the baby. On Thursday, Oct. 3, she said she was going to New York to visit her aunt and she asked Doorley if she might take the baby with her. He consented.

She left a letter in New York for Doorley telling him she was going back to Ireland with the baby. Doorley found that she had engaged passage in her own name.

TWO ENGINEERS KILLED.

One in Pennsylvania Collision, the Other in N. & W. Wreck.

WILLIAMSPORT, Penn., Oct. 21.—The Pennsylvania Railroad's Buffalo flyer, due in this city at 1:30 o'clock this morning, crashed into a box car, which in switching at Newberry had been shunted upon the main track.

The flyer's engineer, David Getkin, of Harrisburg, Penn., was instantly killed. Others of the train crew escaped, and none of the passengers was seriously hurt, as the only damage done in the collision was to the engine.

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 21.—Norfolk & Western passenger train No. 15, from Norfolk to Columbus, was derailed yesterday near Cooper, West Va., by an unknown obstruction on the track. Engineer W. P. Cowling of Bluefield, West Va., was killed almost instantly. Postal Clerks C. H Hughes, G P. Shuler, and A. D. Shuler were injured, not seriously. None of the passenger coaches was derailed.

Fire in Old Gambling House.

The four-story brownstone building at 818 Broadway, a flourishing gambling house in its day, was visited early last evening by fire that did $1,000 damage to the second floor quarters of a clothing firm. A big vault, roomy enough to shelter roulette wheels and racing sheets, is guarded in the cellar of the building by a secret door that concealed it perfectly from the raids of other days.

INCIDENTS OF THE TRIP

Casual Conversations by the Wayside Amuse the Duke—He Helps the Boy Scout Movement.

Special to The New York Times.

PETERBORO, Ontario, Oct. 21.—Western Canadians are improving their acquaintance with the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, who are making an eight weeks' tour of the prairie provinces. The Duchess shows no trace of her recent illness, and bears the ordeals of traveling without fatigue.

The Governor General's habit of entering into casual conversation with all sorts and conditions of people has been productive of many incidents. Most persons to whom he talked were unaware of his identity.

When near Winnipeg the Duke asked a man what a certain building was, and received this reply:

"How the devil should I know? I've only been here a few days." The Duke laughingly related the incident when he returned to the train.

On the occasion of the Duke's visit to the British Columbian Government's model farm near New Westminster a fussy photographer was stationed near the entrance gate to snapshot the Duke as he motored in. Several cars were in the procession, and to the occupants of one of these he gruffly shouted:

"Hurry on there, will yer! I don't want your dust. It was the Duke's car. I want to get a picture of the Dook!"

One morning at Victoria the Duke stopped a boy on his way to school and asked him whether he was a member of the Boy Scouts.

"No fear," was the reply. "I hear they ain't no blooming good."

The Duke expressed astonishment at his misconception and explained the object of the movement to the youngster, who finally remarked:

"I didn't know scouts was like that. I think I'll join."

While inspecting the Boy Scouts at Medicine Hat, Alberta, the Duke said to one of them:

"Well, my boy, and what good action did you do yesterday?"

"I tickled my grandfather, Sir," promptly replied the boy.

"You don't mean to tell me that your grandfather likes being tickled?"

"Oh, yes, he does, Sir."

"Then your grandfather must be an Irishman," commented the Duke.

Among those presented to the Duke at Nanaimo, on Vancouver Island, was an old Crimean veteran named Lewis, a Welshman. In his two minutes' talk with the Duke the old man calmly chewed a wisp of straw, and wound up with: "Well, Sir, I'm glad to meet you, and I wish you would let me see more of you."

What was perhaps the most comical incident of the whole tour occurred at Halcyon Hot Springs Hotel, on the Upper Arrow Lake in British Columbia, where the antics of a lively and sturdy pet bear afforded great amusement to the viceregal party, several of whom took snapshots of the boisterous beast.

Major Scott Worthington, the Duke's medical officer, ventured too near the post to which the bear was tethered, with the result that when he leveled his camera bruin bounded at him, bowled him over, and nipped the bulb of the camera with his teeth. Major Worthington subsequently discovered that the bear had actually succeeded in snapshotting himself.

FINDS TURTLE MARKED '1840.'

Jerseyman's Grandfather Cut Initials on Shell 72 Years Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTA, N. J., Oct. 21.—Many years ago Edward Lanterman of this place was told by his grandfather, John Lanterman, that in 1840 he came across a turtle on the under shell of which he carved his initials and the date. The elder Lanterman told his grandson that he never saw the turtle again, much as he wanted to, in order to test the stories he had heard of the age to which turtles grow.

Lanterman all but forgot the story until to-day, when he chanced upon a turtle making its way across one of the farm lots. He picked it up and found faintly marked on its under side were the initials "J. L." and the date 1840. The turtle was full grown at the time the grandfather carved its shell.

AUTOIST NEARLY BEHEADED.

Rope Across Road in Washington Navy Yard Catches Him Under Chin.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Nearly decapitated as the result of an automobile accident, Alexander O'Shea, a civil engineer, lies to-day at a local hospital between life and death.

Mr. O'Shea, who is connected with the Government gun-proving grounds at Indian Head, was driving his car through the Navy Yard last night when he dashed into a rope stretched across the road. The rope caught him beneath the chin.

That his head was not torn from his shoulders was due to the slackness of the rope and to the quick action of a friend in the tonneau, who sprang forward and reversed the engine.

O'Shea was hurried to the hospital, where seventeen stitches were taken in his throat. Later he recovered consciousness, but his vocal chords appeared paralyzed.

AID AFTER EIGHT YEARS.

City Puts Disabled Inspector Back on Its Payroll.

William Bennett, for many years an Inspector in the Brooklyn office of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, bedridden in his home, 254 Berry Street, Williamsburg, is expecting death and worrying over the welfare of his wife and three children. Yesterday, after formalities made by a special act of the Legislature, his name was placed again on the pay roll of his old department, but his relatives fear to tell him lest the shock might cause his death.

Eight years ago Mr. Bennett through accidents while at work lost the use of both his eyes. He started no suit against the city, and his superiors made efforts to secure him a pension, but the Corporation Counsel decided that it would be impossible without a special act of the Legislature. This was introduced at the last session of the Legislature and was passed.

Bennett has a daughter, who is employed as a stenographer. His savings are nearly gone and the family has depended for support on the daughter. Should Mr. Bennett be able to survive the shock of the good news, his family believe the replacing of his name on the pay roll would prolong his life, but his wife is afraid to tell him lest the heart trouble with which he is troubled might cause his death.

CAPTAINS AT WINTER GARDEN

Men of Transatlantic Lines in Boxes—National Airs Played.

Captains and officers of the various transatlantic lines in New York occupied the boxes at the Winter Garden last night at the first Marine Night to be given there. The theatre was decorated with National flags and the flags of the different lines, and just before the performance began the orchestra played the National airs of the different countries represented. During the intermission a reception was held in the white room and the band from the Kaiser Wilhelm II furnished music.

Among those present were Joseph J. O'Connell, Health Officer of the Port, and his staff; Capt. Cueppers of the Kaiser Wilhelm II., Capt. Mills of the Philadelphia, Capt. Rostron of the Carpathia, Capt. Hayes of the Orotava, Capt. Tourette of La Savoie, Capt. Caussin of La Touraine, Capt. Domoniconi of the Principe di Piemonte, Capt. Stulpis of the Birma, Capt. Hempel of the Oscar II., Capt. Meyerdierks of the President Grant, and the officers of the Mauretania.

Burlesque of a high order was offered at the Columbia Theatre yesterday by the Behman Show, in which Lew Kelly and the Watson sisters are the featured members of the company. The entertainment consisted of a one-act burlesque, called "A Mix-Up at Newport," and a musical skit, entitled "A Rube in Chinatown," both written by Lew Kelly, Fred Wyckoff, and Lon Hascall, with music by Paul Rubens. Mr. Kelly's dry comedy is given a better opportunity than usual in this new show, and Mr. Hascall and Mr. Wyckoff have rôles in which they can bring out the greatest fun. Both pieces are well staged and costumed, and there are plenty of attractive song numbers.

MRS. JOHNSON'S GEMS ASTRAY IN WALDORF

ROOM CLERK PICKED IT UP

Didn't Think It Valuable, but Turned It In as a Matter of Form—Glad Now He Did.

Whoever spread the report that Mrs. Hiram Johnson, wife of the Vice Presidential nominee on the Progressive ticket, had lost a Bull Moose emblem in the Waldorf the other day, it turned out yesterday, was mistaken. What Mrs. Johnson lost was a duck, and one peculiarity about the incident was that the duck stayed lost in the hotel for almost three hours.

The ordinary duck, once lost in the Waldorf, might find its way eventually to the dining room, though even a wild duck has been known to get into the Waldorf without ever finding its way out. Mrs. Johnson's duck was a diamond duck, a rare species, but occasionally observed in Peacock Alley during the season's flight. It was worn as a brooch, because, after all, it was composed of diamonds, and its owner prized it highly.

When Mrs. Johnson reported at the lost and found desk that she had lost the duck, the detective force immediately got busy. Chief Detective Smith received a description of the ornament, and he and others who were informed as to its disappearance, went about for the next three hours with their eyes on carpets and rugs. One investigator looked under the chairs and sofas along the route Mrs. Johnson remembered having taken, but none could find the lost gems.

It was not until about three hours after Mrs. Johnson reported her loss that one of the room clerks, who had to go upstairs on an errand, entered the elevator by the florist's shop on the Thirty-fourth Street side of the hotel. As room clerks sometimes do, when they ride in elevators with patrons of the hotel this one modestly cast his eyes down. As his glance fell, it lighted on something that glittered in one corner of the elevator. He picked it up. He did not realize its value when he turned it in to the lost and found department, and it was not until one of the managers came hurrying down with a substantial reward from Mrs. Johnson that the clerk knew he had found something really valuable.

Hundreds of persons used the elevator during the three hours or so that elapsed before the gems were found. Now the liftmen and every employe who gets into an elevator in the hotel, takes a careful survey of the floor of the car while going up or down.

Mrs. Johnson is very popular in the hotel, particularly with the office staff. J. Arthur Stillwell, one of the room clerks who used to know Gov. Johnson out in California, and Louis Parsons, his side partner, took a straw vote in the office yesterday, and the result was announced to be an overwhelming majority for the Bull Moose ticket. The figures given out were, Roosevelt, 20; Taft, 2; Wilson, 2.

Passerby Only Victim of Shots.

Giuseppe Scroggari, returning to his grocery at 12 Prince Street last night from a round of collections, was attacked by three men with drawn revolvers. The grocer whipped his own out, and after all four had fired and some ten shots had been exchanged, a policeman sent the three assailants flying and disarmed the grocer. The only victim of the skirmish was Salvatore Messina of 159 Chrystie Street, who was on his way home from night school. He was hit in the heel.

GUN HAD NO TERROR FOR HIM.

Officer McSweeny Simply Whipped His Man with His Fists.

After having run around a block and then up four flights of tenement stairs yesterday afternoon in pursuit of a young Italian who had been pointed out to him as a burglar, Patrolman McSweeny of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station found himself staring into the barrel of a revolver which was leveled at him from the skylight in the roof of 406 East Eighty-second Street.

"If you climb that ladder I'll shoot you dead," yelled the man whom he had been chasing.

"Shoot, I'll get you anyhow," replied McSweeny, and he promptly ascended the ladder.

The youth who had made the threat became so alarmed at this show of bravery that he took to his heels and hid behind a chimney on the roof. McSweeny went for him with his fists and deprived him of his gun. Then McSweeny led him to the street, where a crowd greeted the culprit with cries of "Thief!"

In the crowd were the two little children of Antonio Accordino of 401 East Eighty-third Street. They told McSweeny that the man he had by the collar was the same man whom they had just found rifling their flat on Eighty-third Street.

At the police station the man said he was Tony Espirito, 21 years old, a peddler, and lived at Mills Hotel No. 3. When he was searched a quantity of jewelry was found in his pockets. This was identified later by Accordino as his property, and the prisoner was charged with burglary as well as with having violated the Sullivan dangerous weapon law. When arraigned later in Harlem Court he was held for examination on Wednesday, $1,000 bail being fixed for each charge.

FOR NON-PARTISAN JUDGES.

Bar Association Advocates Separate Tickets for Judicial Elections.

ALBANY, Oct. 21.—At a meeting today of the committee of the State Bar Association on selection of candidates for judicial office a resolution was adopted expressing the committee's regret "that the plan for non-partisan nominations of Judge of the Court of Appeals was not concurred in by all of the political parties."

The resolution also reiterates the committee's conviction that "partisan politics should not influence the selection of candidates for that non-political position."

The committee also adopted a resolution advocating that the Bar Association secure a change in the law so as to bring about the nomination and election of Judges upon separate tickets.

LITTLE FALLS HEARS SOCIALIST ORATORS

Mayor Lunn and Others Permitted to Speak in Park Without Interference.

I. W. W. ORGANIZERS ACTIVE

Trial of Schenectady Men Scheduled for To-day—Sheriff Replies to Gov. Dix.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 21.—From noon until nearly 5 o'clock this afternoon all Socialist orators spoke without hindrance in the little park fronting the big knitting mills in this city. The police were present, but merely to repress disorder. One man who asked a speaker if he was not a "short-weight merchant," was led from the ground by an officer for being a disorderly person.

The speaker who was most cordially received was the Socialist Mayor of Schenectady, the Rev. Dr. George R. Lunn, who was arrested twice last week by the local police. He appeared among the first of the speakers and was greeted with cheers by the several thousand people who were in the park. The Mayor criticised the police and local authorities and was gleeful over his victory for free speech.

The crowd gradually drifted away after the Mayor had spoken, and when Charles Edward Russell, the Socialist candidate for Governor, spoke, hardly two hundred people remained to listen.

The Socialists did not blame the police personally for their arrests of the speakers; they directed their criticism against the owners of the mills in which the strike is on. All expressed sympathy with the strikers and told them to stand firm and empty the big mills. The Socialists from Schenectady whose examination is scheduled to come up to-morrow hinted that if the charges against them were dropped there would be no damage suits against the police.

The I. W. W. organizers are in the city in large numbers and are rapidly organizing the strikers. A large hall has been engaged in the foreign quarter, and the agitation will not be carried on in front of the big mills. An effort will be made to cripple every industry in the city.

The authorities to-night have not decided upon a future course. State Department of Labor men are here, and they believe that there will be no violence.

"When free speech is dead," said Mayor Lunn in the course of his remarks, "all liberty dies with it. This controversy is fundamental. It is not a fight of any one nationality or any political party, but a fight for the sacred right to speak unmolested and to have a peaceful assemblage unmolested."

Mayor Lunn then spoke of the labor troubles and urged the strikers not to resort to violence. He criticised the local officials, saying that they "were looking for a chance to appear right when they knew at the heart that they were wrong."

"We have tried to be fair with these people from Schenectady," said Mayor Shall to-day. "We offered to go before any court or tribunal the Socialists might name and to get a ruling from it on this matter. But Mayor Lunn said no. He said he had no confidence in the courts except the Supreme Court of the United States. Speaking as an official of the city, I can only say that we stand ready to do all we can to aid in reaching an understanding that will be satisfactory to all the persons involved."

The proposition of allowing Mayor Lunn and the other Socialists who were arrested here during the week to return to their homes without further prosecution was said to be favored by Mayor Shall and other city officials to-day, but District Attorney Frank Schmidt of Ilion refused to consent and declared that the trial of Mayor Lunn on the charge of violating a city ordinance should proceed to-morrow as scheduled. The Schenectady Mayor and his followers accordingly remained in the city to-night, awaiting the disposition of their cases.

Gov. Dix received a letter to-day from Sheriff James W. Moon of Herkimer Co., in reply to the Governor's message of yesterday calling upon him to see that the constitutional rights of the people peacefully to assemble and discuss public questions be not curtailed.

"None of the rights mentioned by you have been unnecessarily curtailed in Herkimer County, to my knowledge," says Sheriff Moon in his letter. "If your communication refers to what has recently occurred at the City of Little Falls, I beg to state that I was called there by the constituted authorities of that city, who said they deemed it necessary. My efforts there were directed to the suppression of riot and crime and prevention of possible bloodshed and destruction of property. It will be, as it has been, my endeavor to safeguard constitutional rights, in spirit as well as in letter, to suppress crime and enforce the law."

AS AN ENGLISHMAN SEES US.

Christie Impressed by Growth of Our Cities, but Our Cabs Puzzle Him.

H. A. H. Christie, a London lawyer, who was one of the representatives of the London Chamber of Commerce at the Congress of Chambers of Commerce in Boston, was thinking over the impressions he had formed of this country when a reporter found him at the Belmont yesterday.

"I should say that the first thing that strikes one during a trip such as we have been making," said Mr. Christie, "is the huge scale on which everything is done here. Another impression that stands out is the one made by Gary, Ind. The idea that in five or six years a modern manufacturing city of 40,000 inhabitants could spring up on a spot covered with a scrubby growth makes a wonderful appeal to the imagination. It was almost as if you turned out cities ready-made over here.

"Of course, each city I saw had its different characteristics, and no two seemed alike. I should not say that the differences between New York and other American cities were quite as marked as those between London and our provincial towns, but the differences are there. Chicago does not resemble New York, for one reason, perhaps, because it is spread over an area that has both length and width, whereas New York has only length. Boston seems the nearest like an English town of any city I saw here. Pittsburgh does not resemble London. Of course there is any quantity of smoke, but the effect of it is rather different from that of London, and a resemblance to one of our manufacturing towns, like Manchester or Birmingham, might be more readily imagined.

"Of course, as has probably been the case with every foreign delegate to the Congress, the difference between your taxicabs and ours has been very marked. There are so few, for one thing, over here, compared to what we have in London, and we are always putting new cabs into service. Then the prices are terrific. I cannot understand why they should be so much higher here than in Europe. I am told that the cars can be turned out quite as cheaply here as on the other side. So few of your people seem to use taxis, whereas, with us, they are regarded as necessities. I have been told that the higher prices here are due to the difference in the cost of labor. This must be enormous, because the cost of gasoline is much less in the United States than in England."

NO COSMETICS FOR HIPPO.

"Smiles" of the Zoo Just Wouldn't Be Painted for the Winter.

Smiles, the well-bred hippopotamus at the Central Park Zoo, took a determined position against the application of cosmetics yesterday. When Head Keeper Snyder tried to alter the big animal's complexion by applying a cream made of lampblack and neatsfoot oil he found his life was in danger. The hippo did not suspect anything unusual in the keeper's intention when Snyder entered the cage with a bucket and a whitewash brush. When Snyder dipped the brush in the bucket, however, and tried to apply the preparation the big animal lowered his head and charged. When he lunged, however, his horn went wide of the mark, for Snyder was already perched on the stone wall on top of the cage.

From this place of safety Snyder tried to convey to the animal that the emulsion contained no ingredients of a harmful nature and that its purpose was to soften the skin to prevent cracking in cold weather. But when he tried again to descend into the cage Smiles once more lowered his horn and feinted. This time Snyder called to Keeper Robert Burton, who brought a pitchfork. A few jabs of this drove the hippo into a corner, but he whirled around to the attack when Snyder jumped into the cage and came forward with the brush in his hand. This time Snyder vaulted to the wall and decided to quit trying to tamper with the animal's complexion.

"The hippo," said Snyder afterward, "is a plain but a very neat refined beast. You can't get one to stand for anything it thinks improper."

ETTOR AND CARUSO SEEN LEADING MOBS

Lawrence Police Witnesses So Testify—Giovannitti's "Wild Animals" Advice.

ASSAULTS BY THE STRIKERS

Repulsed by Use of Fire Hose in One Case—Arms Found on Arrested Rioter.

SALEM, Mass., Oct. 21.—Fred F. Flynn of the Massachusetts district police, testifying to-day at the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso, described an assault upon a young girl in the streets of Lawrence on Jan. 29 last.

"I had followed the mob from a street car riot," said Flynn, "when I saw a number of them rush upon a young girl who was carrying a lunch box. They took the box away and threw it into the air. Then they laid hands on her and tore off part of her clothing. While this was going on I saw Ettor pass by in the centre of the mob."

Flynn told of several riots on the morning of that day, disturbances which came to a climax the same afternoon in the killing of Anna Lopizzo. He described how he and another officer held at bay a mob near the Lawrence Dye Works after arresting a striker who had flourished a revolver and driven a workman from a car near the works. He identified in court a cartridge belt containing twenty-five cartridges, a loaded revolver and two knives which he had taken from the prisoner.

"After we had arrested this man," Flynn continued, "we were forced to hold a mob at bay until we could get the prisoner into the office of the works. Then the mob stormed the works, smashing the windows, and attempted to enter the office to release the prisoner. I drew my revolver and threatened to shoot the first man who entered. Meanwhile police reinforcements came, and we got our prisoner to the station in an automobile, not until the tires had been punctured, however, with the knives wielded by the strikers."

Flynn and Officer Michael Byron, who arrested Arturo Giovannitti after his indictment, both testified that the defendant admitted advising the strikers to "sleep by day and act like wild animals at night." On the night Flynn arrested Giovannitti, the defendant, Flynn testified, said to him:

"I don't want you to put any dynamite in here."

"I assured him that I had brought nothing into the house," Flynn continued, "and told him that he was arrested as accessory to murder. Then Giovannitti turned to me and asked: 'Have you got Ettor, too?' I told him he would see Ettor at the police station."

Counsel for the defendants procured an admission from Acting Chief of Police Sullivan of Lawrence that many extra police officers and private detectives were employed during the strike. After Sullivan had testified in direct examination that he had seen Ettor and Caruso leading crowds of strikers in the streets on Jan. 29, the defendant's attorneys brought out the disclosure that the Lawrence authorities issued permits to carry firearms to private detectives, the record of which had been burned.

Moulton Batchelder, a retired State police official, of Lawrence, testified regarding attacks of the strikers upon the woolen mills on Jan. 15. He said he watched the strikers attack the mill gates, and that he heard shots fired from the crowd. "I could tell that the shots came from the crowd because I could see the smoke from the revolvers," said Batchelder.

Walter Eichler, mechanical engineer of the Lower Pacific Mill in Lawrence, who testified on Friday relating to strike riots, was recalled as the first witness for the day. Eichler described in detail how strikers were driven from the mills when employes turned the hose on them. The temperature of the water thrown on the men, he said, was about 32 degrees.

Thomas Colgate, Assistant Superintendent, and F. H. Schwarz, mechanical engineer of the Lower Pacific Mill, testified principally regarding the attacks of the strikers upon the woolen mill on Jan. 15. Schwarz said that he was knocked down when strikers who broke through the gates rushed upon men handling the hose, which drove back most of the crowd. He also told of assaults upon three other mill employes, and described weapons taken from strikers who were arrested. Austin H. Dean, an electrician, employed in the Lower Pacific Mill, testified to being assaulted in the mill by strikers. All were armed with sticks, he said.

Benjamin Thaw Pays $3,000 Damages

Attorney Harvey T. Andrews, who began a suit for $10,000 damages against Benjamin Thaw, for injuries sustained by Abbie Hauck, an infant, from Thaw's automobile was party yesterday to a stipulation by which the action was withdrawn. The terms of the settlement give Andrews $1,200 for his services as attorney and $1,800 to the girl for her injuries.

"RED LIGHTS" WILL BURN.

Philadelphia Police Head Refuses to Scatter Vicious Element.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—George D. Porter, Director of Public Safety of Philadelphia, to-day brought down a storm of abuse upon his head when, for the first time since coming into office, he openly defied the ministers of the city by declaring that he would not abolish the Tenderloin. Heretofore, in reply to the demands of the ministers that the "red light" district be eradicated, Director Porter has been satisfied with answering that he was studying the matter and would give the result of his studies in good time. To-day, when asked to address a meeting of the Presbyterian ministers of the city in Witherspoon Hall, Mr. Porter threw his bomb.

"I could close every disorderly house in Philadelphia in two hours," said the Director, "but if I did the inmates would become your neighbors and mine. The policeman's club will never solve this vice question. We need the practical whole-hearted co-operation of social organizations that will keep an eye on the Tenderloin and know exactly what is going on there.

"At present we have a temporary supervision—not segregation. We are doing our best to minimize vice, but it is a long uphill struggle."

Your new clothes will cost you just twice that they should if you overlook the Hackett-Carhart sale.

And here's why, briefly:

The present Hackett-Carhart stocks—worth about $500,000—were prepared in anticipation of a record making season.

The leading textile makers and finest tailors of this country were enlisted months ago to bring this about.

Then came the receivership—and the subsequent settlement with creditors at 50c on the dollar.

Meanwhile the making of thousands of especially fine clothes was going on as though nothing had happened.

For days past, these clothes have been coming into the Hackett-Carhart stores. Here they are marked with sale prices and placed immediately in stock.

Think of this for a moment!

At the full price, they were the most in clothes that the money could buy.

Divide what they are actually worth in two and you have the sale price.

The Mind of the Child Captured

"Strange! I never thought of that before! It is so simple!" How often we hear that! We blunder along doing things the very hardest way until one day by accident, or inspiration, we discover the only right way,—the simplest and most natural way. THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is just such an inspiration. A father vitally interested in the development of the mind of his child made the discovery. He called in other educational experts to help him, and the result was the most original, the most helpful, and the most fascinating work ever produced for young or old.

The Book of Knowledge

The Children's Encyclopaedia

10,000 Illustrations. 350 Colored Plates. Complete Index.

Scientific But Simple

The 15 Great Departments of Knowledge contain all the important and essential knowledge of the world, presented in such a clear, simple and graphic manner that a child can understand it as easily as an adult. But it is the scientific treatment of subjects which gives THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE its acknowledged right to the name encyclopaedia.

Better Than Money In The Bank

President John H. Finley of the College of the City of New York, in his introduction, says:

"Suppose a boy of ten were to spend fifteen minutes a day in reading these pages, . . . he would at thirteen know more about the earth and the life on it than the wisest men knew a few generations ago."

Nature's Method the Best

This remarkable new method of THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is not that of dates and names, of grammars and dictionaries, so repellent to the mind of youth. The plan is conceived along the lines on which the mind naturally seeks information. It begins at the point of absolute interest; in its pages History becomes a succession of inspired events; Geology, Chemistry, Physics and Biology, a series of marvelous revelations of the wonders of nature; Literature, Poetry and Art make their powerful and beautiful appeal to the higher qualities of the expanding mind.

Pictures That Never Fade

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE will never be surpassed in the value of its educational pictures. The whole beautiful, wonderful world is before us in nearly 10,000 pictures which tell a story or illustrate a fact in a way that can never be forgotten.

The Simplest Scheme of Universal Knowledge is described and illustrated in the 72 page booklet mailed free. The valuable pamphlet, "THE MIND OF A CHILD," also presented. Call and examine the work.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, OCT. 22, 1912.

MR. TAFT'S APPEAL.

One is tempted to wonder who wrote the curious statement put out by President TAFT on the eve of the election; and if it be one of the staff of the Republican Literary Bureau, one wonders if the starving of the campaign fund is responsible for the employment of a writer so unskillful, weak, and banal. And still the wonder grows that Mr. TAFT—eminent jurist, accomplished diplomatist, experienced statesman, of broad views and lofty ideals—should be willing to attach his name to a production so narrow, shallow, inept, and impertinent.

The theory that the President himself is the author is one that his sincere admirers will accept only with the greatest reluctance. Yet since he has chosen to assume the authorship of the statement he must be held responsible for it. His friends may comfort themselves with the explanation that he read it carelessly and never stopped to analyze its absurdities or grasp its impudent misrepresentations; but they cannot free him from the accountability he has assumed.

The burden of the statement is that everything that has made for prosperity and progress in the last fifty years must be credited to the Republican Party, and everything that has checked progress and prosperity must be charged to the Democrats. We are asked at the outset to believe the amazing proposition that opposition to the Republican Party in 1912 is as dangerous and unpatriotic as was opposition to LINCOLN in 1860, and that "for Baltimore to supplant Chicago" this year would be as disastrous as it would have been sixty-two years ago. If we pass by this queer rhetorical venture on the part of a man who knows the momentous days of the civil war only from school books, we come upon the equally preposterous argument that all our economic advance, including the fertility of our soil and the blessings of sunshine and rain, are the indirect gift of the party which Mr. TAFT tries to lead: "The farmers are enjoying "the greatest prosperity in the experience of American agriculture." Therefore, vote for me!

The denunciation of the Democrats is as extreme as the adulation of the Republicans:

> From all parts of the country assurances are coming that Democrats intend to vote for the Republican candidates and a continuance of prosperous business conditions, and against the programmes of economic confusion and socialistic subversion of our institutions supported by the Democratic candidates and their allies. Democratic workingmen refuse to be led from the factory and good wages of 1912 back to the Democratic hard times of 1893-97. They prefer independence and money in the savings bank to loss of employment and dependence on charity.

Now, Mr. TAFT was 36 years old in 1893, and had served two years as Solicitor General of the United States under the Presidency of Mr. HARRISON. As to the events of the period he mentions as "Democratic hard times" and as to their causes and their consequences he cannot in reason plead the baby-act, as he may with reference to those of the civil war. He ought to know that the distress of 1893-97 was caused chiefly by the Sherman Silver Purchase act, which drained the Treasury of gold and pumped it full of depreciated silver. And he ought to know that National disaster and dishonor from this cause were prevented only by the splendid courage, the stern determination, and the unselfish devotion to duty of GROVER CLEVELAND. He ought to know, moreover, that the Harrison Administration, with which he was associated, cringed cowardly and helpless before the obviously approaching storm, and left to its successor not only the fatal silver legislation to which we have referred but a Treasury emptied by extravagance. The "hard times of 1893-97" were not Democratic; they were in large part the miserable bequest of Republican ignorance, incapacity, and timidity.

Mr. TAFT's statement is singularly unworthy of him. He has in his time done good things and worked for great ones. It is needless, and it is useless, for him to stoop to the lure of cheap politics.

FREE SPEECH.

The question at Little Falls essentially is the same as that recently passed upon in Brooklyn. In both there was a strike, and the denial of free speech consisted in denying the right of "free speech" within earshot of those who did not want to hear, and without the permission of those charged with maintenance of order. In neither case did the speakers represent a majority of even the strikers, and in no case did those who wanted to speak represent any considerable part of the community.

The essence of the case was the defiance of authority and the assault upon the hearing and intelligence of those who were competent judges in their own business. It was not the point that the right to speak was denied to some where others had spoken. Those who spoke there did not select the place because there was a strike in the neighborhood, and they had nothing to say about the strike. It was ruled in Brooklyn that the speakers had a right to speak, but not to speak just there. Nobody cared what they said, and those whom they wanted to persuade turned the hose on them.

Free speech does not mean that those who wish to speak shall be free to create a riot, or that they can say what they like where and when they like. If their contention is allowed, the Socialists would have a right to meet on the Mall in Central Park. They would be warned off without any reference to their being Socialists, and the same is true in principle about the proceedings at Little Falls.

GEN. DIAZ'S REBELLION.

A few weeks ago an authoritative estimate of the number of armed opponents of the Government in Mexico was 20,000, but that is a great many, even in a nation of 15,000,000 inhabitants. Every armed rebel must represent a number of non-combatants who desire the overthrow of the Government. When the estimate was made no man of high repute and great personal force had taken the field in opposition to MADERO, but since Gen. FELIX DIAZ seized the port of Vera Cruz, and the garrison there proclaimed its allegiance to him, the situation has changed. It is difficult at present, however, to predict the result. DIAZ has thus far made little headway. He has announced the appointment of Mr. FERDINAND DE LA BARRA as a member of his provisional Cabinet, but, so far as is known, Mr. DE LA BARRA is peacefully attending to his new duties as Governor of the State of Mexico at Toluca. News from the capital is obviously censored, and persistent reports from there of bloodshed in Vera Cruz are not verified in the cables from that city. But trustworthy Mexican news from any source is scarce.

The reports that both Gen. HUERTA and Gen. TREVINO, two of the foremost military leaders, are at odds with MADERO are only rumors. All the yarns relating to the men behind the Diaz uprising are questionable. Anybody could guess that PORFIRIO DIAZ may have advised his nephew's rebellion, but it is assuredly a bad guess. The ex-President is not a rich man, and he has had no hand in Mexico's political disturbances since his exile in Europe. He denies all connection with the present uprising.

It seemed a few days ago that the chances of success for the movement headed by FELIX DIAZ were good, but there is truth in at least one of the dispatches from the capital which says that dilatory methods jeopardize his cause. His policy is certainly different from his uncle's. Meanwhile, there has been no meeting between soldiers of DIAZ and those of MADERO, and there is no positive evidence that any Maderists are in the neighborhood of Vera Cruz. The arrival of a gunboat manned by Diaz sympathizers at the port of Coatzacoalcos might mean the seizure of the Tehuantepec Railway by the revolutionists; it may only mean an early supply of fresh provisions for Vera Cruz. FELIX DIAZ is not likely to embarrass foreign trade unnecessarily.

LEGISLATING UNREASON.

Mr. ROOSEVELT explains his position on the trust question in these words: "The Sherman Anti-Trust act should "be amended in such way that there "would be a definition of what was "wrong, eliminating the rule of reason "feature. I would not have left to the "guess or judgment of any man or "men the determination of what was "wrong or right, or reasonably wrong "or reasonably right." Mr. ROOSEVELT cannot be supposed to have proposed such a statute for the benefit of wealthy malefactors, and yet that would be the effect of such a statute, if it were possible to enact it. It is a common saying that men cannot frame a statute which other men cannot pick flaws in, and it is sure that the statute which Mr. ROOSEVELT proposes would make sport for the lawyers and do the trusts little harm.

A statute is the rule of the game, or like the hand of cards dealt a player. No other rules are applicable, and no other cards can be played. When a trust has a statute to obey it cannot be blamed for thinking it has done its entire duty when it has obeyed it. That is a simple matter compared with complying with a rule of reason which is not written until a jury declares it in any given case. A statute, even if perfect when written, becomes imperfect with the passage of time and alteration of conditions. Legislators have been known to enact imperfect statutes, and to amend them improperly, sometimes even with improper motives. Wealthy malefactors have been said to own Legislatures, and to have caused statutes to be passed with which they have no difficulty in complying. Mr. ROOSEVELT, perhaps, would be able to escape these customary dangers of legislation, but he would hardly succeed in an impossible task. The mere definitions which he proposes are close to impossible. "Fraud" cannot be defined for all cases, and it is no easier to define a trust, or to define the acts which it may or may not do. If the definitions were perfect in the present state of the art of making and managing trusts they would only be targets to be shot to pieces.

The administration of even a good law could not with advantage be intrusted to a commission such as Mr. ROOSEVELT describes. He proposes a purely ministerial body, without the discretion which the Inter-State Commerce Commission exercises. A bureau without guess or judgment and with power to meddle with every business, or only with every corporation's business, would either be a terror or a nullity. The probability is that it would extinguish its own activities by the antitoxins which it would develop, but at best it would be a poor substitute for the jury system, which is at once the protection of the innocent and the terror of the bad. No man can tell what the verdict of a jury will be, but every man does business under the necessity of squaring his conduct with the findings of twelve of his neighbors unknown to him. Business can be conducted in this way because the findings of juries on the whole are in accordance with the rule of reason, and with the best standards of the community from which the jury is drawn. No statute can enforce conduct in advance of the general sentiment of men of business.

The anti-trust law which Mr. ROOSEVELT would amend by eliminating the reason which has been used in applying it was a failure because it was construed with unreasonable savagery toward practices which in many cases were for the public good and were not condemned by general opinion and the universal standards of commercial probity. When the trusts wandered from those standards there was no trouble about punishing them, and there will be none. But the attempt to enact a rule of unreason carries its own condemnation on its face.

THE REAL BUILDERS OF THE CANAL

The Panama Canal is not only the biggest work of modern times, it is one of the biggest of all time. And, like other great works by man, one or two or half a dozen men will practically get all the credit for the wonderful achievement. The American public has heard about ROOSEVELT's "taking Panama" and so making the canal possible; it has heard of WALLACE and STEVENS, and more especially of GORGAS and GOETHALS. Especially is the name of the latter world famous, and no one who has ever heard of the canal, probably, but has associated Col. GOETHALS's name with it as its chief builder.

Yet the actual builders of the world's mightiest waterway, the men who actually ran the dump trains, handled pick and bar, drill and steam shovel, are unknown. Outside of a few who have delved into the records of the constructive work, very few have any definite knowledge even as to the nationality of the common laborers whose toil has almost completed the great canal.

A correspondent of The London Times who has recently visited and described for that journal the enterprise from its beginning has thought these thousands of laborers worthy of classification and identification by nationality. He found that three nations, the British, American, and Spanish, formed the great body of the working force, with a sprinkling of Chinese, one Japanese, 300 East Indians, a few Greeks, Italians, and other Europeans. Going into detail, he found the laborers classified as to their origin as follows: West Indies, 29,667; Spain, 8,722; Italy, 1,941; Colombia, 1,403. France furnished only 19, Armenia 14, Costa Rica 244, Panama 357, while 69 were unclassified. Of the West Indian Islands Barbados furnished the greatest number, 10,448; Martinique comes next with 5,542, Trinidad 1,284, while the other islands furnished only a few hundreds, Jamaica having only 47.

The project of enlisting American negroes in the work seems never seriously to have been attempted, the abundance of labor in the West Indian Islands, so much nearer the canal, giving the latter the preference. Among the most successful of the laborers, until Spain forbade their emigration, were the Spanish. Even as it is, including Latin-Americans, Spain and her former colonies took an important part in building the canal through territory itself formerly Spanish.

The laborers in all formed a mighty army, varying in size and personnel from year to year, being highest in March, 1910, when the number reached 38,676 men actually at work, out of an available force of about 50,000 on the Isthmus. Since 1906 the figures show that about one-seventh of the total force have been Americans, another seventh European laborers, and the remaining five-sevenths practically all West Indian negroes. The greater proportion of white men in the later years of the building of the canal is, of course, due to the fact that sanitary science had by that time made the Canal Zone a healthy place for Europeans or Americans to live in and work in.

Still another fact of interest which differentiates the building of the Panama Canal from all other great works of the past is that it was built by well-paid and well-fed laborers, and not, as in the case of the Pyramids of Egypt, by slaves driven by taskmasters to their daily toil.

A MEDIAEVAL PROCLAMATION.

One can understand something of the spirit in which the mountaineers of Montenegro have taken up arms from the text of the curious proclamation of the King of Montenegro, which is given in The Daily Mail of London of the 11th inst. Patriotism, religion, a touch of superstition, the eagerness of an old warrior, and something of the fancy of the poet mingle in this document which reads more like the sixteenth century than the twentieth:

> My hopes of finding a method by which old Servians might be able without bloodshed to liberate themselves from their sufferings have not met with success. That is why, although it weighs heavily on my heart to break the peace of Europe, there remains to me no other course than to handle the sword—that sword which, assuredly not without honor, Montenegrins have followed courageously to Nikshitch, Antivari and Dulcigno. Montenegrins, ours is the cause of justice. Alea jacta est, the die is cast, and GOD and Servia in good fortune will help us to extend that fortune to our brothers in misery. By the blessing of GOD, of ST. PETER of Montenegro, and of all the saints, may the dreams of my first youth, when in poems I foretold this memorable day, be realized and kindle the breasts of my people with faith to march beyond the limits of this Montenegro! Long live Montenegro! Long live the Balkan Alliance!

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Was a Hero, Though Not a Boy.

As WILLIAM RUGH, who died after an operation which supplied material for skin-grafting and so saved a girl's life, was forty-four years old, the fact that he sold papers for a living hardly justified the emphasis which has been placed on the word "newsboy" in many of the stories that have been written about him. After making due allowance, however, for misguided efforts to heighten the sentimental effect by concealing the fact that this generous act was that of a man, and not of a boy, it still remains true that what RUGH did rendered all the praise he has received no more than he deserved.

There need be no doubt on that point, for in his home town, Gary, where all the circumstances were known and he was a familiar figure on the streets, the people on Sunday made his funeral a truly remarkable demonstration. The services in church were attended by all the people the building would hold, and, after an eloquent eulogy had been pronounced, practically the whole population of the place gathered along the route of the procession to the railway station and united in a manifestation of sorrow and respect. Certainly there is no lack of appreciation for heroism and self-sacrifice in Gary, and evidently the iron on which so many of Gary's inhabitants work has not entered their hearts or their souls.

Of course RUGH did not exactly give his life to save that of a girl of whom he knew nothing except that she was in desperate need of something which he, who had so little, could give, but he knowingly risked it, for he was warned that the amputation to which he was to be subjected had its serious perils. He ignored the danger, and when pneumonia, that too common after-effect of anaesthetization, assailed him, and he was told that he was going to die, he expressed no regret for what he had done. Instead he said that he was content to give his life for another.

This is heroism of the very noblest kind, and it is no wonder that Gary was filled with admiration. The episode is one in every way notable, but in the future, if present expectations as to the possibilities of reparative medicine are realized, the taking of something of just this sort of a risk will not long be an inevitable incident to obtaining the material which alone is efficient in the curing of extensive burns.

Defending French Literature.

Like many another patriotic Frenchman, GABRIEL HANOTAUX is half grieved, half resentful, that in the minds of so many foreigners the literature of his country stands condemned for "impropriety"—for not observing the restrictions and reservations as to subject and expression which the English-speaking nations, especially, hold to be essential to decency.

In an article contributed by him to the Revue des Deux Mondes, M. HANOTAUX takes up anew this old grievance and declares that the French writers, as a class, do not deserve the criticism that has been brought upon them, partly through a failure to realize that ethnic differences do not necessarily indicate moral superiority on one side and moral inferiority on the other, and partly because the foreign critic bases his condemnation, not upon French literature, properly so called, but upon the works of comparatively few French writers, some of whom, at least, more or less consciously exploit the real or assumed horror of the foreign reader.

French fiction, he admits, "has not been marked of late by an extreme prudery," and he might have gone further and admitted that it never was, but he is perfectly right in declaring that of the enormous output of the French presses by far the larger fraction is without the slightest offense for even the sternest defender of verbal propriety. "Shall not," he asks indignantly, "our publicists, our "thinkers, our philosophers, our poets "count in the literary production of our "country? And our stage, if it some"times presents certain delicate scenes, "does it not also, taken together, offer "one of the most admirable efforts at "observation and moralization that hu"manity has yet displayed?"

With entire accuracy, M. HANOTAUX insists that those who look for noble works in French literature will find them in great numbers, and those who discover only the indecent and the "decadent" merely bring reproach upon themselves by showing the direction in which they made their search. In support of his plea for justice, he quotes many foreign writers who really knew the French people and French literature. Of course he is quite right, though his defense of his brother writers would have been stronger had he noted the unquestionable fact that few of them now exercise a wider liberty in the choice of material than do no inconsiderable number of both English and American authors, and he might have added that in France immature minds are much more carefully guarded than in either England or the United States from the reading of books and the seeing of plays not intended for them.

A Lesson for a Porter.

There was a lot of "human nature" in the story printed yesterday about L. W. HILL of the Great Northern Railway and a porter in the Union Station at Minneapolis. It seems that MR. HILL saw there an old woman struggling with a heavy valise, and, presumably because she was not such as to arouse expectation of tips, none of the porters went to her assistance. MR. HILL therefore took the valise himself and carefully put the old woman on her train. Returning from the performance of this kindly service, he proceeded to address with some sternness a porter who till then had viewed both the old woman and her helper entirely without interest. The man, unfortunately for himself, did not recognize his critic and resented the criticism, with the result that he is now looking for a new job.

The rights and the wrongs of this pretty episode depend on a good many things, and chiefly, perhaps, upon the terms on which the porters at that station do their work. In other words, does the railway company pay them to assist its patrons, or does it give them a monopoly of the porterage business there, and for that privilege demand that they shall get what they can out of tip-paying passengers and help others for nothing? In either case, the porter certainly deserved a scolding, and perhaps discharge, but the situation would be a little different if the company pays him nothing and compels him to look sharply after every one of the not too numerous fees that he can get. If that is so, of course he should still remember that he is a man as well as a porter, and that an old woman with a heavy burden should not be an object of indifference to him, but his obligation toward her would be no greater than that of any other man—Mr. HILL, for instance—and he could well tell even the highest of railway officials that he expected a good deal when he expected a porter to risk the loss of a paying patron while doing work for one who would give no more than thanks for reward.

That would not be a perfect defense, but there would be something in it. Here in New York, any habitual frequenter of either of our great railway stations has seen the porters doing many little favors for which they got nothing. They do much gratuitous directing, for one thing, and they are in general courteous and well behaved. That they are eager to carry the bundles of shabby old women may be doubted, but one can at least hope that some of them would do it.

BRONX VOTERS DISFRANCHISED.

Many Men Still in Line When Registry Board Adjourned.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few score voters in the Thirty-second Assembly District, Thirty-third Election District, the Bronx, wish to give publicity to the fact that they have been disfranchised for the coming election through the clumsiness and inefficiency of the Registration Board which sat at 1,102 Garrison Avenue. Some of the voters had stood in line for two hours Friday evening and again stood the same length of time Saturday evening without being able to get their names taken. The line ahead was not extraordinarily long—consisting of only twenty or twenty-five men—but it was too much for that board to handle at its ridiculous speed of five to six minutes to a man.

At 10 o'clock Saturday night some fifty or sixty men were still in line; many had been standing since 8 and 8:30; but the able and patriotic board announced, watch in hand, that it intended to obey the law to the minute and not to enter another name. Forty of the men inside the barber shop thereupon signed their names to a protest. Have they any legal remedy?

Library Suggestions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the many readers in some special departments of the Public Library, notably in the genealogical room, there might be a great saving of time, labor, and salary, if more of the volumes could be placed on the open shelves. High-grade officials would thus be spared, for better work, the menial labor of bearing books to and fro, and readers could much more quickly and satisfactorily select the volumes desired.

New York, Oct. 19, 1912.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My own use of the New York Public Library's periodical room has always been most unsatisfactory. For many years, and for reasons which perhaps are not the public's concern, the library has secured its British periodicals from a dealer rather than directly from publishers, and these are nearly always available to the public when their freshness is gone. Notes and Queries is almost never on time. The Dry Goods Economist is published in this city at 10 o'clock Saturday morning and it is usually Tuesday before it can be had at the library.

The library has recently received $2,500,000 from the late John S. Kennedy, and this, with the great sum from the Tilden bequest, would seem to be a vast endowment for any project. Yet the staff is lamentably underpaid; there is a woeful lack of wanted books, the library is unable to keep open all of its departments throughout the working day, and not even towels can be provided for the magnificent marble washrooms.

The Amazon Expedition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to express my sincere thanks for the flattering article which appeared in to-day's Sunday issue of THE TIMES. At the same time I ask you to rectify certain misstatements which might lead to complications.

The scientific expedition which is referred to is being prepared by the University of Pennsylvania to investigate the ethnology of the Amazon, and is under the leadership of Explorer Algot Lange.

I have promised my personal assistance and co-operation to Mr. Lange, as I feel assured that this enterprise is of great importance to Brazil, and I judge that the Government of my country will give all the help possible to further the expedition of the University of Pennsylvania.

The photographs published were taken by Mr. Lange himself when on his first voyage on the upper Amazon, and served to illustrate his notable volume describing the remotest portion of the Amazon Valley.

Affronted Shakespearean Admirer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When I go to luxuriate intellectually in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," as presented by Mr. E. H. Sothern, why am I compelled to submit to dissertations—not only printed in the programme, but delivered verbally by itinerant vendors between the acts—on the merits of chewing gum, chop suey, and cheap candies?

Sir, I would fain have you believe that I am of pacific disposition; a lover of peace and of a kindly nature—but this sort of thing induces homicidal mania. It is an exasperation to the nerves. It is disrespectful to the late William Shakespeare and unkind to myself—both of us deserve better treatment. Nay, not only is it disrespectful and unjust, but 'tis damnable incongruity, and, therefore, it is worse than either injustice or unkindness.

Six Growing Boys.

Six good citizens in the making, boys between 14 and 2 years old, are the responsibility of a mother whose husband is in an asylum, hopelessly insane. To her they are just six sturdy, growing boys, who must be fed and clothed and sent to school regularly as soon as they are old enough. She is making a home for her children where they learn to be ambitious and become eager to take their share of her burden as they grow older. She earns, too, about $4 per week. This, with the wages of the older boy, will hardly cover the expense of sufficient food.

The Charity Organization Society asks for $180 to provide for the rent and to increase the amount available for nourishing food during the coming months until the thirteen-year-old son begins to work.

Gifts may be sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street, and will be acknowledged.

The society acknowledges with thanks the following contributions received in response to previous appeals in THE NEW YORK TIMES: Mrs. Elsie C. Bogert, $5; M. S., $1; Mrs. H. [illegible] Friend, $10; [illegible] Robert Stott, [illegible]

WATCH YOUR POCKETBOOK

Parties' Cost of Living and Tariff Exhibits Contrasted.

There are two exhibits of surprising and perennial interest down at Union Square. Everybody who wears clothes and eats food and keeps house and makes things and buys and sells should see them and study them. They are near together in point of locality, but as far apart as the poles almost in the lessons they teach. One is a Democratic exhibit of the protective tariff and its influence upon the common things of life, and the other is a Republican exhibit designed for the deception of the people. There is a good deal of food for thought in each and not a little humbug in both. The "infant industries" would delight in the Republican exhibit, and the oppressed millions would find in the Democratic exhibit absolute proof that they have been crushed to earth by the Robber Tariff.

There is much, nearly everything, in the point of view. Of course there must be revenue for the support of the Government, and the more the functions of government are extended there must be, naturally and unavoidably, an increase of revenue. The question is, therefore, largely a question of revenue, and it must be handled so that the people who pay must not know exactly how it is done and where it hurts. It would never do to exact from the people by direct taxation the enormous amounts that are now taken from them by indirect taxation. Our tariff is a sacred American institution, and palsied be the hand that would seek to destroy an American institution, unless, perchance, it should be an institution like the American Constitution, for example. While we might point with pride to the methods of Andy Jackson when he threatened with annihilation that other eminent South Carolinian, John C. Calhoun, for his resistance to tariff exactions from free and sovereign States, sound Democrats would be dense, indeed, who would not view with alarm the jug-handled arrangement that has benefited only one part of the country, that is to say, until the other part began to make things that required the special protection of the Government.

Revenues Must be Had.

It is not the same, manifestly, that it was fifty years ago. There are the Carolinas with their cotton spindles and looms, and Louisiana and Colorado with their cane fields and sugar beet farms, and Alabama with its coal and iron mines and mills and furnaces, and all the South and West with their lumbering plants that must come within the average in the distribution of Government favors. It could not be expected that all these interests would consent to be neglected even if it be true that they largely constitute the States which have been voting all these years against a protective tariff for American industries. Sugar is a revenue producer; so are coal and iron; so is cotton goods, and so is lumber. Talk about it as we please, there must be money to run the Government, and as that vigorous American statesman, the Hon. Benjamin Ryan Tillman, is reported to have said on one occasion when his plainness of speech shocked the sensibilities of the mollycoddlish Senate, even if it did not affect its voting judgment, "When there is any stealing going on, we must get our share." As the Declaration of Independence would say, there are some things that are self-evident, and, though we need not explain why, we can at least regard the two rival exhibits with a curious interest.

The Republicans' Display.

Throngs of people, men and women, are going into these places and coming out all through the day and until late in the evening. Ready speakers abound who address the crowds. The walls are decorated with charts and the tables are piled up with "literature." At the Republican exhibit there is a roulette table which shows that if the voters do not get Wilson "they will have to take me," and little rooms set apart where special exhibits are given of how much it costs to live and also how much more the people pay for what they get than is necessary for the support of the Government. There are many well-painted signs on the outside of the house to show the differences in wages in the United States and in the pauper countries of the Old World and of the Far East, and after filling the minds of the visitor with "figgers" that lie at every turn they are left to work it out for themselves of how much worse they would be if they could buy what they need at what other people in less highly protected lands pay, in which case, naturally, the matter of wages would not count for very much—the value of the dollar being in exact proportion to its purchasing power. There is one row of red letters at the Republican exhibit which must have worked its way in without proper censorship, but which tells in four words what this exhibit really means when it is stripped of all its other adornments: "Watch Your Pocketbook Here!"

Democratic Figures of High Costs.

Down at the Democratic exhibit there is a disposition to "get down to brass tacks." It is shown by figures, which do not lie, that the increase in the approximate cost of the food supply of the average workman's family in the period from 1890 to 1911 was in the North Atlantic and Western divisions of States 32 per cent., in the South Atlantic and North Central divisions, 42 per cent., and in the South Central division, 56 per cent. This is true partly because the people who buy are not permitted to buy where they can buy the cheapest. Of the total value of all our manufactures in 1909—$20,672,052,000—only 16.58 per cent. was paid in wages. This statement would seem to expose the utter hollowness of the wages contention made by the Republicans. The sugar exhibit proves rather more than was intended. The purchasing power of a dollar, we are told, under free sugar is twenty-five pounds; under the present tariff it is sixteen pounds, and if this be true as to sugar it would also be true as to clothing or any of the other necessaries of the plain people. The workman is beginning to think that a dollar in wages is "not what it is cracked up to be" when it will not buy in this country more than about one-half what it would buy in other countries, and what it would buy here if so large a part of the price he pays for what he needs did not go into the pockets of the special favorites of The System.

There is a special warning, therefore, in the red letters on the sign at the Republican exhibit—"Watch Your Pocketbook Here!" It will be the voter's own fault if he allow himself to be fooled again this year.

CRIME AND POVERTY.

Long years ago men worshipped her as saint.
"O, Holy Poverty, with steadfast eyes,
We lift our souls to Thee with ceaseless
plaint,
Guide Thou our steps from sin and sad surprise."

But soon, too soon, alas! mankind grew tired
Of that pure glance, that chaste and holy smile.
Her narrow life, filled with such kindly deeds,
Awed and repelled her earth-born friends the while.

Then did St. Poverty sit long and sad,
Shedding salt tears in a deserted land,
When, flashing downward like a meteor,
Came blood-red Hate, with fatal, gleaming brand!

She was so lonely—he so violent—
They clasped fond hands and onward went their way.
But, Crime, first-born of Poverty and Hate,
Remains with us, to curse the world

TAXING GOLD MINTAGE

Prof. Laughlin Clashes with Prof. Fisher on Its Result.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the published report of Prof. Irving Fisher's proposal before the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce to fix the value of our gold coins it is difficult to catch the real meaning of the proposal; but I quote the following sentences:

> My proposal is not literally but virtually to increase the weight of the gold dollar by increasing the weight of the bullion on which it is based. * * * But this increase of weight would not be added to the coins themselves, but only to the bullion out of which they are made.

This statement is inexplicable; but the next sentence is more so:

> The proposal is to restore the ancient custom of a "seigniorage" on gold coinage. At present there is no seigniorage. Coinage is free and the weight of a gold dollar is as great as the weight of the bullion which the miner takes to the mint and for which he receives back a dollar. He now takes 25.8 grains of gold bullion to the mint to secure a 25.8-grain gold dollar. The coined dollar weighs the same as the uncoined or "bullion dollar," if I may use such a term.

Now, if the English means what it says, here is an obvious blunder. He omits all mention of fine and standard gold. The miner does not now take 25.8 grains to the mint to secure a gold dollar. He takes only 23.22 grains of gold, since there is one-tenth alloy in the standard weight of 25.8 grains. The Treasury provides the alloy free and makes no charge for manufacture.

Then Mr. Fisher adds:

> My proposal is to increase the weight of the bullion dollar; that is, to require 26 or 27 or 28 grains of gold bullion to be taken to the mint to secure a 25.8-grain gold dollar.

This statement obviously means the withdrawal of free coinage of gold, the monopoly of the supply of gold coins by the Government, and the giving of them out only in return for varying quantities of gold bullion, (varying with the level of prices, increasing as prices rise, decreasing as prices fall). That is, the mint would receive more gold in exchange for 23.22 fine gold in a dollar as gold fell in value, (i. e., in its exchange power over goods as shown by price lists).

Prof. Fisher says he is applying to gold coins the redemptive feature of the so-called gold-exchange-standard by which Filipino silver coins are kept at par with gold. Under this latter system the Filipino Government redeems silver by bills drawn on gold in New York. To him the maintenance of the silver coins at par with gold is due to the fact that the silver is contracted. That is the obsolete quantity-theory. To me, the silver bills are kept at par because they are exchangeable for gold, (whether in New York or elsewhere).

Now he proposes to secure the invariability of our gold coin in exchange for goods by making it impossible to get coins except by paying more or less gold for them. Is this workable? I hold it is not for two reason: (1) It is impracticable, and (2) even if possible, it is based on a wrong theory of the value of money.

(1) The value of gold bullion is affected by the world supply and demand, (both monetary and non-monetary). The value of 23.22 grains of pure gold in Europe would not be that of 27 or 28 grains simply because the United States Mint made that rate in exchange for a dollar. Moreover, the contraction in the supply of gold coins in the United States, in order to enhance their value, would cause dealings in gold bullion independent of coins. Further than that, the scarcity value of gold coins could be produced only if the demand for them was so imperative that exchanges of goods could not go on without them. As a fact, gold coins are not the only medium of exchange in these days; indeed they are scarcely used at all. Goods priced in the gold standard are exchanged by checks and other media of exchange. The need of gold coins is not imperative to-day. Of course, Prof. Fisher must secure co-operation in his scheme by all the important commercial States of the world to make it work, even granting its correctness. And that possibility is remote, as Bagehot early admitted in regard to bimetallism.

(2) The essential point of Prof. Fisher's plan is, if possible, to redeem 23.22 grains of pure gold (25.8 standard, in the coin) by a varying quantity of goods, represented by a varying quantity of gold. By a list of prices, it would be found whether gold had risen or fallen in its purchasing power over goods. Of course we know that a list of prices at any one time says nothing as to the causes which change prices. The causes may be either (1) those affecting the demand and supply of gold, on the one hand, or (2) those affecting methods of producing goods, on the other hand. If prices rise, that is the same thing as stating that gold has fallen relatively to goods. Changing the number of grains of pure gold which a miner must offer the mint in order to obtain a gold dollar (23.22 fine) will not stop human progress, and hence will not stop changes in the cost of producing goods, (e. g., as affected by the money wages paid for a given product,) or changes in price. Therefore, changes in the purchasing power of the gold dollar cannot be prevented by Prof. Fisher's device. If it can be ought in January by 27 grains, it may take 29 grains in March. After the rate had been found for January, then the announcement for January prices would have to be used for those of March, or later months. The operations of March, therefore, would be done on a previous price list. The system would not be synchronous. So far as the suggestion is an application of the Multiple Standard for long contracts we need not spend any time upon it. It has been explained in the textbooks.

The essence of the plan is a separation of the exchange value of our gold coin from the value of the gold bullion out of which it is made. Hence, even if it should succeed, which I do not believe, it would not change the value of gold relatively to goods, but only the temporary and artificial value of gold coins. That is, we should have one more form of fiat money in our circulation—certainly not a desirable thing to introduce. Moreover, if the Government gets the seigniorage, it must be willing to redeem at the new value. But at what number of grains of pure gold? Yet this number would be constantly varying. Also, if the coins could be had only by varying quantities of gold, there would be confusing new problems as to quotations of foreign exchange.

The plan, then, is an attempt to keep an even level of prices by so trivial a thing as changing the seigniorage of our coins. Is it not obvious that the prices of any one commodity, e. g., steel, in gold are affected by such a variety of causes, not only those touching the demand and supply of gold, but those affecting its own demand and its production, (cost of ore, wages, transportation, etc.) that it seems rather crude to suppose its price in relation to gold could be determined by a little thing like a change in the seigniorage? There is more to the problem of prices than that.

Since the proposal cannot touch the elements which enter into the relative value of gold and goods—such as the use of capital, labor, etc.—it is futile to speak of it as a remedy for the high cost of living. It is based on the wrong quantity-theory that gold in our coins can be given a fictitious currency by limiting the number of the coins. Prof. Fisher is a distinguished theorist of the mathematical School of Economics; but his theories are here far removed from the realm of facts. If his bill for an international conference on the cost of living has for its purpose to commit us to Prof. Fisher's plan, it must be regarded as a measure of doubtful wisdom. However, he no doubt wishes only a frank discussion of his proposal either at a conference or elsewhere.

When the theatrical history of 1912 comes to be written Flo Ziegfeld's contribution to it will be chiefly recalled on account of his success as a picker of feminine loveliness, some fifty-seven or more varieties of which were on exhibition at the New York Theatre last night. And if Solomon in all his glory was arrayed as some of these—well, Solomon, to say the least, must have had a rather variegated wardrobe.

There are other features of the "Follies of 1912" that deserve attention, however. And they will get it from that large congregation of New York theatregoers who look for the annual Ziegfeld show with the same sort of anticipation with which in former days they watched the billboard to learn when the circus was coming to town.

And this brings up the fact that not the least pictorially lovely effects of the present show are produced in the final act, with the scene representing the interior of a curtain tent. Here comes a brief political skit in which the G. O. P. elephant meets the Bull Moose to his decided disadvantage, and the man from Oyster Bay comes along to announce that his headgear is still in the circular inclosure. Here, too, as is quite right and proper, the ponies go round and round, only, as might be expected, they are two-legged ones, in tarlton ballet skirts, a costume which has never really been excelled for beauty, in spite of modern innovations. Miss Lillian Lorraine, the very pink and pattern of pulchritude, is, of course, the céntre of the evolutions, having made the change from a rather unattractive pantaletted affair, which one is rather mindful to forget since she has previously been most radiant in a creation representing the Twentieth Century girl. It is a wonderfully beautiful thing, this costume, with its cloak of a fiery orange shade overhanging a lemon colored skirt, and the whole effect topped off with a flaring black hat.

The scene, "The Palace of Beauty," brought a succession of lovely pictures. The audience gasped for one thing at the first figure to enter—a harlequin in a complete attire of thin black lace, (Evelyn Hart.) She was followed by a Venus, (Elise Hamilton,) whose graceful lines were admirably posed during a succession of other surprising revelations. Of these none was more alluring than the Duchess of Devonshire, (Marie Baxter,) a piquant blonde, to contrast with La Pompadour, (Marion Hale,) and Recamier, (Katheryn Smyth.)

There was a ripple of applause, too, for a particularly spirited and beautiful Carmen (Eleanor Christie,) and no end of satisfaction at the discovery that some of the portraits have libeled Joan of Arc, (Beatrice Allen,) who, it seemed, might have won an easy victory on any field of battle pleopled by the opposing sex. Then, again, there was a wonderful Pocahontas, (May Leslie,) and a Salome, (Ida Adams,) any one of whom would have taken a prize at the old school house tableaux vivants, only that wasn't the kind they used to have there.

So much having been said for the feature which gives the Ziegfeld show its chief distinction, it may be mentioned that the first act, a swiftly conducted review, contains better material and is, on the whole, better entertainment than the second. To begin with, there was one of those diversions, very much relished nowadays, in which actors in the orchestra chairs and boxes are assumed to be members of the audience, and thereupon conduct themselves in a way which would mean their immediate ejection if they really were. Which recalls the remark of a well-known vaudeville actor:

"In the old days," he said, "we actors used to hear a good deal about getting things over the footlights. But nowadays we have to walk right down and lay it in their laps."

The funniest line in the show was spoken by that very clever low comedian, Fred Watson, who, appearing in the familiar Teddy make-up, was asked who he was.

"I'm the man," said he, "who tied the can on Republican."

Mr. Watson figures in various specialties with Louis Errol. Both of them are funny men. They even succeed in being amusing in a veteran burlesque gramophone skit that, like Othello of old, had "done the state some service." It's one of those things that is so old, in fact, that it may be new to a good many people by now. Josie Sadler also assists as far as a brief rôle permits.

The real humorist, of course, is Mr. Bert Williams, and the funniest minute of "The Follies of 1912" introduces him as a driver of a broken-down hansom and the most woe-begone stage horse that ever crossed its legs against the side of a proscenium arch. Mr. Williams has some good songs. In the best of them he describes the conditions under which he could be induced to lend money to a friend.

Taylor Granville, a very clever dancer and mimic, is a valuable feature and Charles Judels brings lots of spirit to his part. There is plenty of life, too, in a dancing number by Stella Chatelaine and Louis Errol, and a touch of good satire in an ensemble, "The Broadway Glide," which shows Times Square with the entire Broadway population doing the turkey trot.

Miss Lorraine's best individual number is "Row, Row, Row," which has a nice little lilt. But she seems capable of better things.

AMUSING PLAYLETS SHOWN.

New Sketches by Bartholomae and Moffatt at Union Square.

Two novelties in the way of sketches were shown at Keith's Union Square Theatre yesterday; one was a broad satire adapted from the German by Philip Bartholomae, and the other a little Scotch comedy by Graham Moffatt, author of "Bunty Pulls the Strings."

Mr. Bartholomae's sketch is called "And They Lived Happy Ever After." Its scene is the study of a novelist who has finished the last chapter of his latest story. Pleased with his own work he reads it aloud and as he reads the various characters are visualized in a manner far more literal than the novelist intended. The characters consist of a hero, his wife, his dear old mother, the faithful servant, and the villain. All of them persist in doing exactly what the novelist says they do, and the inanimate objects in the room follow their example. Even when he reads that the light went out, it does, through a door on the side. The whole thing was amusing nonsense and was played by Conrad Catzen, Clay Clement, Jr., Helen DuBois, Fred R. Dix, Frances Shannon and James Mace.

The other sketch, by Mr. Moffatt, is entitled "The Concealed Bed." Bob Dewar, in the absence of his mother and sister Madge, gives a party in the flat and puts Norman Blair, Madge's teetotaling sweetheart, in a bed concealed in a closet off the parlor. The mother and sister come home unexpectedly and the mother, to punish Bob, locks up Blair's clothes. There are constant complications, some of them caused by the presence of a gossipy neighbor, Miss Clavers, but in the end Bob is forgiven and Blair wins the girl. The characters and the dialogue are presented in Mr. Moffatt's dry way and the piece is thoroughly funny. It was played by Helen MacDonald, Janet Gardner, Bessie MacDonald, Andrew Clyde and Stuart Black.

This change in the plans has been made owing to the continued illness of Mrs Tiffany, a sister of the bride-elect, who would have been unable to attend the wedding at Rosebank.

SHERIFF HARBURGER STOPS BOXING BOUT

Climbs On to Garden Stage When Jim Stewart Is Floored by Gunboat Smith.

CROWD HOOTS OFFICIAL DOWN

Tumultuous Scenes in Big Arena When Sheriff First Attempts to Explain His Action—Stewart Unhurt.

Declaring that the contest had reached a stage of brutality and that instead of being merely a boxing exhibition it had assumed the proportions of a prize fight, Sheriff Julius Harburger of New York County climbed from his ringside seat onto the ring extension outside the ropes at Madison Square Garden last night and ordered Referee Billy Joh to stop the bout between Jim Stewart of Brooklyn and "Gunboat" Smith of California. The action of the Sheriff came at the conclusion of the seventh round after both men had gone to their corners, Stewart still showing the effects of a hard right swing to the jaw which floored him for the count of nine a few seconds before the bell ended the round.

Referee Joh immediately conveyed the Sheriff's instructions to the two boxers, while many in the crowd, for the most part the holders of seats in the upper galleries, yelled in disapproval of the Sheriff's action. Smith and his seconds left the ring during the outburst of disapproval and Stewart remained in his corner. The shouts furnished the Sheriff with an excuse to climb through the ropes and explain his action to the crowd, but the crowd would have none of his explanations—at least, that section of the crowd in the galleries would not. They did not like the Sheriff's action and made no effort to hide their feelings.

Sheriff Harburger tried for fully two minutes to make the shouting section cease, but there was no cessation. He waved his arms in that gentle manner so customary at boxing clubs when silence is wanted, but there was no response to his signal. The crowd continued to shout.

Then the Sheriff decided on another plan, whereby he could explain his action. He put both hands in his trousers pockets and gave every indication that he could wait as long as the shouters continued their noise. There came a lull in the outburst, and the Sheriff accepted the opportunity.

"I stopped the bout," began the Sheriff, "because—"

And that was as far as he got before the noise broke out anew from several sections of the house. Many who wished to hear what the Sheriff had to say tried in vain to check their noisy brethren, but there was no checking. Mr. Harburger ceased his effort, and the crowd became subdued to a considerable extent. Then he made another start, and the crowd yelled stronger than before. This time the Sheriff went through with what he intended to say in the first place, but all of it was lost in the tumult. It was as a whisper in a cyclone. Angered at the yells of the spectators, Sheriff Harburger clenched his fists, waved them above his head, and danced from one side of the ring to the other, all the time uttering something that never reached the ears for which it was intended. His lips were snapping and he gesticulated wildly, but his efforts to talk seemed only to amuse the crowd and make them yell all the louder.

The Sheriff finally had to admit defeat, and he climbed back to his place at the ringside, while the two boys who were put on in the closing bout of the show took their places in the opposite corners. This bout was stopped by Referee Joh during the third round, and then the Sheriff got another chance, this time with better success.

As the boxers in the closing bout jumped from the ring, Announcer Joe Humphreys climbed in, and Stewart followed a few seconds later. After quiet had been restored all through the Garden, the announcer said that Stewart had been brought back into the ring to show the friends and patrons of the sport that he had suffered no injury during the bout, and also to make this plain to the Sheriff. In closing, he declared that it was only fair to Sheriff Harburger that he should be allowed to say what he wished, and he beckoned to the latter to come into the ring.

There was no hesitation on the Sheriff's part, despite the rebuff he had received only a few minutes before. The crowd remained quiet, barring an occasional jeer or catcall, and he went through with his speech.

"I have no explanation to make for my action," said Mr. Harburger, "and I owe no apology to those unfriendly to boxing for what I have done. To that class of honorable citizens who are here to-night, I want to say that I am desirous of giving you clean and honest boxing. I stopped the bout as Sheriff of New York County because it had ceased to be a boxing exhibition, and because one of the principals was not in condition to continue. Notwithstanding the fact that Stewart is here now, he was not in condition to fight, and is not in condition to fight now. He was thoroughly knocked out, and the fight was brutal. And I will stop such bouts again whenever they reach such a stage. I will not be bulldozed by the management of boxing clubs, but I will see for myself whether boxing or prize fighting is going on. This was a prizefight, and I stopped it. It was not boxing."

Sheriff Harburger has been a regular attendant at local boxing shows for the past two months, or since he received a message from Gov. Dix instructing him to see that the law was being enforced. Last night was the first time that he has taken any such action, but he has given out several statements, and has made himself decidedly prominent at the bouts. In fact, he has almost superseded the State Athletic Commission, appointed by the Legislature to control the sport, and, while taking no such steps as he did last night, he has instructed referees regarding their duties.

That his actions are not popular with boxing enthusiasts was plainly shown last night. Bouts are stopped regularly by referees, and no demonstration has ever followed such as marked the finish of last night's affair. Referee Joh was in Stewart's corner to ascertain fully the condition of the latter, and he would undoubtedly have taken action had the Sheriff not "beat him to it."

The bout was a rather easy victory for Smith. He had floored Stewart twice in the first round and again in the third, the bell saving the Brooklynite on the latter occasion. But he recovered his strength quickly and managed to stay on his feet until the seventh round, when a left hook to the jaw floored him, just before the bell. This was just before the Sheriff made his entry and stopped the bout.

Terrace Club's Tennis Championship.

In the final matches of the tennis championship of the Terrace Club of Flatbush W. B. Gates beat George H. Jackson in the singles, 6—3, 6—0, 6—4. In coming through to the final Gates beat J. McCarroll, 6—1, 7—5; E. Shumway, 6—1, 6—2; C. Taylor, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1; H. Waugh, 6—3, 6—4, 10—8, and Jackson in his half of the tournament beat R. Shearer 2—6, 6—3, 7—5; H. Treiss, 6—4, 6—love; D. Whitney, 9—7, 7—5; W. Bartlett, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. This gives Gates a leg on the President's Cup, which Jackson won last year. In the doubles tournament H. G. Treiss and H. H. Waugh beat F. Rand and E. Huerstell, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3. Rand and Huerstell also beat Betts and Whitney, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3; Peto and Smith, 7—5, 6—4. Treiss and Waugh beat Lasher and Lasher, 6—3, 6—3; Valentine and Tilton, 6—1, 8—10, 9—7; McCarroll and Gates, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5.

HASBROUCK ON THE BALLOT.

Appellate Division Sustains His Claim, Two Justices Dissenting.

ALBANY, Oct. 21.—The Appellate Division, Third Department, to-night affirmed the decision of Supreme Court Justice Chester to the effect that G. D. B. Hasbrouck of Kingston was entitled to a place on the official ballot as the Progressive Party's candidate for Supreme Court Justice in the Third Judicial District. Presiding Justice Smith and Justice Betts dissented from the prevailing opinion.

The Appellate Division was convened in extraordinary term to-day by Gov. Dix, at the request of Progressive State Chairman Hotchkiss, to hear the case. Justice C. C. Van Kirk of Washington County was designated to sit in place of Justice J. M. Kellogg, who is in Canada.

Attorneys for the Progressive Party expect to get a decision from the Court of Appeals on the question at an early date.

Mr. Hasbrouck is the Republican candidate for Supreme Court Justice from the district. When the Progressive Party leaders in the district decided not to nominate a candidate for the position, Mr. Hasbrouck's friends circulated a petition and obtained over 900 signatures for him. Progressive leaders, prominent among whom was William H. Hotchkiss, State Chairman, declared that the signers to the petition were not entitled to use the name or emblem of the Progressive Party and asked Justice Chester so to decide.

In their dissenting memoranda to-night, Justices Smith and Betts declared that the petition nominating Mr. Hasbrouck did not comply with the law requiring 1,500 signatures on such petition. The three Justices who wrote the prevailing opinion contended that this point had been waived by the Progressive Party's attorneys.

PRAISE SCHIFF AND MARSHALL

Jewish Morning Journal Says Fanatics of That Race Needed a Lesson.

In an editorial yesterday The Jewish Morning Journal announced that it would support Job E. Hedges for Governor.

"We do not agree with the two prominent, or most prominent, Jews of New York, Jacob H. Schiff and Louis Marshall, in their public announcement favoring William Sulzer for Governor," says the editorial. "It is true that Mr. Sulzer has done much toward the abrogation of the treaty with Russia, and we recognize the value of his services in this regard. But Republicans have also worked in the same direction, and it would, therefore, be an injustice to use this fulfillment of duty by one Democrat as a reason for giving New York State a Democratic administration.

"But we are completely in agreement with the two prominent Jews in their courageous announcement in favor of a Christian at a time when there is a Jewish candidate in the field. Such a lesson was very necessary for our fanatics, who think that they are still in Russia, where every one is a despot and a tyrant so far as it is possible for him to be and where independence and difference of opinion are considered criminal by the person on the other side."

GERRY APPROVES OF SULZER.

Mack and Palmer Make Fun of Barnes's Election Forecast.

A telegram from Elbridge T. Gerry in London, indorsing the candidacy of William Sulzer for Governor, was given out at Democratic State headquarters yesterday. Mr. Gerry said:

"I am very glad, indeed, to see that Mr. Sulzer has been nominated. He is a man of great ability. He has a very clean record. If he is elected, and I think he will be, he will make an excellent Governor. Besides his long record he possesses the great advantage of being young, and the Democracy always recognizes young men. It is one of the characteristics of Democracy."

Norman E. Mack, Chairman of the Democratic Campaign Executive Committee, and State Chairman George M. Palmer made fun of the figures of Republican State Chairman William Barnes, Jr., showing that both Taft and Hedges would receive a big plurality in the State.

"Mr. Barnes is enjoying a sweet dream, and it is a shame to wake him up. Let him sleep until Nov. 5," said Mr. Mack.

"Mr. Barnes is twisted in his dates," commented Chairman Palmer. "Those figures he gave out refer to 1908, not to this year."

Both Mr. Mack and Mr. Palmer predicted that William Sulzer would be elected by at least 150,000 plurality.

McCOMBS WANTS IT DECISIVE.

Victory Certain, He Tells Chicagoans, but That Is Not Sufficient.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—William F. McCombs, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, speaking at a luncheon of the Iroquois Club to-day, said:

"The general impression throughout the country is that Wilson will be the next President, but the victory must be more than a bare majority. It must be sweeping, so that there can be no doubt that the Democratic Party stands at the head of the Nation."

Mr. McCombs added: "Illinois is not debatable territory. This State is going for Wilson. I have made a careful canvass of the State, and my reports are convincing."

Mr. McCombs met Democratic leaders from twenty Western States during the day and conferred with them as to a programme for a strong finish to the campaign.

RING MEN DROP JOHNSON.

Australian Anger Over Girl's Abduction Ends $50,000 Negotiations.

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 21.—Jack Johnson will not fight in Australia. Hugh McIntosh, who had offered Johnson $50,000 for fights with Sam Langford and Sam McVey or Joe Jeannette, cabled to-day to W. W. Kelly, his representative in Chicago, to cancel all negotiations.

Mr. McIntosh explained that Johnson's part in the alleged abduction of Miss Cameron had so angered the sporting men and public of Australia that the matches were no longer desirable.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Federal investigation against Johnson moved swiftly to-day. Twenty-five subpoenas were served on the pugilist's associates, ordering them to appear before the Federal Jury tomorrow. The Government seeks to show that Johnson violated the Mann White Slave act.

Prosecution also was started against Johnson for alleged violation of the 1 o'clock saloon closing law. This case was set for hearing on Oct. 29.

When Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, representing the mother of Lucile Cameron, visited Johnson's saloon to-day, in company with United States Deputy Marshals, to serve the subpoenas the pugilist became excited and threatened the lawyer with personal injury.

"Throw that lawyer out of the place, or I will kill him," shouted Johnson to one of his bodyguards. Federal officers protected the attorney and served the pugilist's aged mother and nine employes.

Robert E. Cantwell, an attorney, today asked United States District Judge Carpenter for a writ of habeas corpus for Lucile Cameron, who is being held in the Rockford (Ill.) Jail in default of $25,000 bonds as a witness before the Federal Grand Jury.

Judge Carpenter said he would be unable to hear the petition until to-morrow. Inasmuch as the girl will then appear before the Grand Jury, Attorney Cantwell withdrew his petition. He would not say whether he had been retained by Johnson.

AID NEW SEAMEN'S HOME.

Mrs. Sage and John D. Rockefeller Agree to Contribute.

At a concert held last night at the Seamen's Friend Society, 507 West Street, which was attended by 600 sailors and firemen, the Rev. Edward M. Deems announced that Mrs. Russell Sage, John D. Rockefeller, and "A Friend" had volunteered to donate $55,000 providing the society obtained $45,000 to make a total of $100,000 required for a new building.

The news was received with cheers by the seamen present, who use the institute as a club when they are in port. Members of the crews of the Mauretania and Carpathia took part in the concert.

DISTANCE RUNS FOR STELLAR ATHLETES

Ten-Mile Run and Seven-Mile Championships to be Held in Newark.

Two American amateur championships are carded for decision this week and a big array of competitors and enthusiasts are expected to turn out at the Eastern Motodrome in Vailsburg, Newark, next Saturday afternoon when the ten-mile running and seven-mile walking titular events are decided.

While the first-named contest has been a yearly competition, the walking contest at the distance will mark the first holding of the event since 1884, when Eddie McDonald of the West Side A. C. was the winner, in 56:28. The record for the distance is 54:07 by Eugene E. Merrill of Boston, and made during the progress of a longer race in October, 1880.

The distance runners have had their eyes on the longest of pedestrian events of the year of a track nature and a fine field of "plodders" is expected to help make up the field which will take part.

While Champion Hannes Kolehmainen will be among the missing from the competitors, although he will act as starter of the race, the contest promises to be one of the greatest in the history of the race. With such topnotchers as the present title holders—Louis Scott, Harry J. Smith, Willie Kramer, J. J. McNamara, Gaston Strobino, Harry Hellawell—and distance runners of such calibre the contest should be one worth a journey to witness.

The track on which the race will be held is a circle, four and a half laps to the mile, and the equal of any cinder path in the United States for distance running, sufficient testimony to this effect having been given at the Marathon race of Sunday, when the world's record was made, all the runners attesting that they had never competed on its equal.

The preliminary work of the men has been such as to warrant a decided reduction of the record of 52:34 4-5, made by George V. Bonhag, in the championship of 1909. Scott's most recent work was the wiping out of the four-mile mark of Bonhag last Sunday, and it was generally conceded that he could have journeyed a considerable distance further at approximately the same pace. Kolehmainen, appreciating that he would have to be at the top of his form to cope with Scott, admitted yesterday that discretion would be the better part of valor, and that he would await a more favorable opportunity in which to show his capabilities over such a route.

For the walking contest there is an entry of nearly half a hundred, and it has been asserted that the half dozen judges of the fairness of the gait of the men will have their work cut out in making their adjudications. The best of the "heel-and-toe" artists who will be engaged are R. B. Gifford, the one and three mile champion; Al Voellmeke, Sam Schwartz, and Plant of the Long Island A. C.

It developed yesterday that the newly elected members of the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association, A. A. U., who have under their dominion the supervision of the competition of registered athletes of the district, will from now on enforce the rule of the union which touches on entries, which reads as follows:

"Any athlete who fails to compete after entering an event in a bona fide way, and according to the rules, shall be required to furnish a satisfactory excuse for so doing or render himself liable to censure or suspension by the local Registration Committee."

It is asserted by the members of the committee that this rule has been flirted with long enough, and that they will put a stop to men winning a heat in an event and withdrawing from the semi-final round, or final, because they fear defeat or the showing up of their form in the face of prospective defeat.

Another piece of work which has drawn forth criticism, and which it is the intention of the committee to delve into, is the billing of athletic stars at games for which they have not been entered and have no intention of competing.

When asked if he intended to run Hannes Kolehmainen a two-mile match race at a coming set of indoor games, Abel Kiviat stated that he would not race the Finn or any one else such a distance at the sports in question, and that he was entered in only the half mile.

$600 FOR A BYRON.

G. A. Smith Gets "Poems on Various Occasions" at Johnston Sale.

A fine copy in the original calf binding of the rare first edition of Lord Byron's "Poems on Various Occasions" was knocked down for $600 to George D. Smith at the sale by the Anderson Auction Company yesterday of the library of Charles C. Johnston of Chicago. This work, a small octavo, was printed at Newark, England, by S. & J. Ridge in 1807. Only about half a dozen copies are now extant, and only one other copy has been sold at public auction in this country.

Ridge, the Newark bookseller, had privately printed for Lord Byron in November, 1806, a small volume of poems entitled "Fugitive Pieces." A Southwell clergyman named Becher, who was a friend of Byron, remonstrated against the license of one of these poems, and Byron destroyed the whole impression, except the copy in Becher's hands and one which had been sent to Byron's young friend Pigot, who was then studying medicine at Edinburgh. A hundred copies, omitting the offensive verses and with some additions, under the title of "Poems on Various Occasions," were distributed in January, 1807.

Aesop and Gay's "Fables," four volumes, London, 1783, many of the plates by William Blake, binding by Riviere, went to Walter M. Hill of Chicago for $105. Mr. Smith paid $325 for an uncut set of the "Annals of Sporting and Fancy Gazette," London, 1822-28, illustrated with many colored plates by Henry Alken. He also gave $125 for C. J. Apperley's "Life of a Sportsman," London, 1842, with thirty-six colored plates by Alken. For a copy of the second edition of Robert Beverly's "History and Present State of Virginia," London, 1722, he gave $85.

An edition princeps of the works of Aristotle, Venice, 1495-98, was bought on order for $165. An unnamed bidder obtained for $51 "The Essays or Counsels" of Francis Bacon, London, 1630. Mr. Smith paid $77.50 for a copy of the Bibliophile Society's "André's Journal," published in Boston in 1903. This "Journal" was found in the latter part of 1901 by Earl Grey. It came into possession of William K. Bixby of St. Louis, who caused it to be published by the Bibliophile Society.

A first edition of Percy B. Shelley's "Rosalind and Helen," London, 1819, in full dark blue levant binding by De Sauty, went to Mr. Hill for $135. The sale continues to-day.

MILITIA AT RACE TRACK.

Sent by Gov. Marshall's Orders to Enforce Anti-Gambling Law.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—Two companies of State militia will surround the track of the Mineral Springs Jockey Club at Porter, Ind., before the hour for opening to-morrow, in compliance with orders issued to-night by Mark Thistlethwaite, Secretary to Gov. Marshall.

The call for troops followed a report from private detectives employed by the State, who said that there was more gambling at the track to-day than at any time last week. The State failed in its attempt to close the track by a restraining order, and Gov. Marshall, who is campaigning in California, wired his Secretary to use the militia if the county authorities failed to stop the meet. The corporation has failed to take out incorporation papers in this State.

Brig. Gen. Charles A. Garrard departed to-night for Porter, where to-morrow he will take charge of the troops. Company F of South Bend and Company M of Rensselaer, which have been ordered out, can reach the track in less than an hour. State officials say they anticipate no trouble as a result of sending troops to the scene, and add that it was the only course left to curb the alleged violations of law.

A message received from Gov. Marshall to-night reads:

"If the Attorney General says the law is being violated and the Sheriff will not do his duty, have the militia sent to enforce the law."

HERE'S A MODEL POLICEMAN.

Summoned by Hurry Call, He Helps Set Up the Kitchen Stove.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 21.—Police Headquarters received a hurry call from Foundry Street to-day, and Bicycle Policeman Kurth was sent to answer it. Kurth found a woman standing dejectedly before a dismantled kitchen stove, both her hands black with soot from a stovepipe she had been cleaning.

With tears in her eyes she told the officer she had taken the stove down and cleaned it, and she was unable to get it back. She pleaded with him to set it up for her, so she could get her husband's dinner ready in time.

And Kurth did.

MILITARY ATHLETIC GAMES.

Army, Navy, and National Guard to Send Men to P. O. Games.

With the best talent that can be secured from the regular army, the navy, colleges, athletic clubs, and other organizations interested in sports, the Athletic and Military Carnival of the Brooklyn Post Office Clerks and the Forty-seventh Regiment A. A., which will be held in the latter's armory on Nov. 23, should prove one of the greatest series ever decided indoors. Over 100 pieces of music will enliven the affair, which will include the Letter Carriers and the Regular Army Bands.

Uncle Sam's regulars will present several drills, and are also entered in the International Tug-of-War contest, in which they will meet their greatest rivals, the navy. In the wall-scaling event they will try and show the local militia a few pointers. A rescue race in which a volley will be fired by half the team who will then be rescued by their partners, should prove very interesting.

The athletic programme promises to be up to the standard set by the organization, with fifteen events in all. Valuable prizes and trophies will be given. Information and entry blanks can be secured from John J. Fleeson of the Brooklyn Post Office.

Bradhurst Football Team Ready.

That Bradhurst Field Club athletes are preparing for a busy season is evidenced by the announcement of the uptown organization to the effect that their football team is ready to accept challenges from any of the local elevens of an average team weight of 160 pounds. As a nucleus to what is said to be a very strong eleven Jim Duncan, the champion discus thrower, is slated for the full back position. About thirty men are training for the season's campaign, and if any line can be obtained through the successes of previous seasons the Bradhurst team will be a strong one. Many of the best known of the local athletic contingent were present Saturday night at the entertainment and reception of the club, nearly fifty of the members of which participated in the amateur theatricals which formed part of the function, and was conceded to have been of quite some merit. George Sweetman is the manager of the football team and is prepared to book challenges from suitable organizations.

Harlem Billiard Tourney Opens.

Last night marked the opening of the billiard season in Harlem, the occasion being the beginning of a three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at the Morningside Billiard Academy. The tournament is of the handicap elimination variety, and under the rules the player losing one game is out of the tournament. There are sixteen entries, and two games will be played each evening until the tournament ends. In the first game last night, A. Schlater defeated J. Frank by the score of 20 to 13 in thirty-eight innings. Both contestants were playing at the twenty point mark, and each made a high run of three. In the second contest S. Gerson attempted to make twenty points before W. Kennedy could tally sixteen, and failed, the latter winning after twenty-four innings by the score of 16 to 8. The winner's high run was five and Gerson's was two. The two games this evening will bring together E. Foys and B. Ottinger, both playing sixteen points, and L. V. Harris and J. Jaeger. The latter will play at twenty points and Harris at sixteen.

Bickert Defeats Milkman with Cue.

In the continuation of the amateur handicap three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at Keeney's Knickerbocker Billiard Academy in Brooklyn last night, Thomas Bickert defeated Edward Milkman by the score of 36 to 26 in sixty innings. The handicaps were 36 and 35, respectively. The winner made the high run of six points, and Milkman's best efforts netted him a run of four. This evening Edward McMahon, playing at thirty points, will oppose Charles Worcester, who plays twenty-eight.

Fordham Practices with N. Y. U.

The New York University and Fordham second string football men engaged in a stiff scrimmage on Ohio Field yesterday for an hour, the regulars resting after their hard game on Saturday. Assistant Coach Jim McCarthy directed the Maroon scrubs, as Coach Thorpe went to Philadelphia on business, and Coach Reilly instructed the Violet squad during the scrimmage. New York played the line, sending the backs through both tackles, but found the Fordham forwards well coached. The Maroon scrubs, on the other hand, played the open game, making use of shifts and formations so successfully as to rout the inexperienced Violet players. Carey and Conklin, the Fordham ends, were in every play, smashing the opposing interference and making long gains with the forward pass. Coleman and Hagerbloom seemed to be the only players on the New York University team able to stop the Maroon's advance with the ball. The 'Varsity elevens will scrimmage to-day.

Light Work for Lehigh Squad.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 21—Capt. Pazzetti, Lehigh's brilliant quarter back, and every one of his teammates came out of the Haverford game in good physical condition and appeared to-day on Lehigh Field for a long practice in preparation for the Ursinus game on Saturday, which is only a secondary consideration to the game with the Carlisle Indians the following Saturday. Behind closed gates Coach Keady gave the men light limbering up exercises, the ends receiving most attention. Then a long signal drill followed. The many glaring weaknesses that cropped out in the Haverford game were pointed out to the men and the proper remedy illustrated. Two changes in the line were made, McCaffrey supplanting Vela at left end and Ackerly taking Grumback's place at left guard. A light scrimmage is scheduled for to-morrow with a regular game on Wednesday.

Forsythe Wins Graduates' Golf.

The annual Fall handicap golf tournament of the Graduates Club was held at the Ardsley Club on Sunday. Frederick Forsythe won first prize with a net score of 136 and Angelo Patri won second prize with a score of 147. The following members also participated: Walter F. Baylis, 151; B. G. Broad, 154; Leroy Weed, 157; Earle Shaw, 159; Homer Green, 161; W. Chamberlain, 168; G. H. Wildman, 169; Dr. J. Dounce, 171; R. Hodgdon, 171; W. E. Pulsifer, 172. Baylis, Green, Shaw, and Weed qualified for the President's Cup.

Columbia Freshmen Basket Ball.

Columbia freshman basket ball players got under way yesterday when thirty-five candidates reported on the gymnasium floor to Ted Kiendl, the former 'Varsity Captain, who has been appointed by Head Coach Harry Fisher to look after the youngsters. Among those who were on hand were Rosencranz and Roberts, formerly of Commerce, the Public School Athletic League championship team last Winter. A schedule will be arranged for the freshmen, and they will play the freshman teams of many other colleges for the freshman championship. The 'Varsity squad will not report for two weeks, and the first game will not be played until the Thanksgiving recess.

Mr. Brush Resting Comfortably.

Friends of John T. Brush, President of the New York Baseball Club of the National League, were much disturbed yesterday over reports that Mr. Brush was dangerously ill at the Hotel Imperial as the result of an attack of pneumonia, and his recent injuries in an automobile accident. It was stated last night, however, that there was no cause for alarm. Mr. Brush is confined to his rooms at the hotel, but close friends said that he was resting very comfortably.

Harry Stevens, one of Mr. Brush's closest friends, who was said to be one of the few who could see him, said last night that Mr. Brush had enjoyed a ride of three hours in his automobile on Sunday afternoon and was resting very comfortably. There is nothing alarming in Mr. Brush's condition, Mr. Stevens declared.

Glidden Tourists at Memphis.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 21.—Charles J. Glidden's tour from Detroit to New Orleans has awakened motorists of the South, and it is expected that more than half the contestants next June will represent Southern cities. Over forty entries have been promised. To-day's run of the tourists from Rogers Springs to Memphis was the hardest day of the trip, owing to washouts occurring after heavy rains last week. The Maxwell and the 1911 winner which accompanies the tourists have made perfect runs. If there should be a rainy spell during the contest in June the Tennessee lands will be impassable. Twenty miles east and west of Grand Junction are the most treacherous roads in the whole lakes to the gulf route. When Mr. Glidden entered Memphis to-day he was escorted by motorists in cars of all makes, and after a parade through the city his party was entertained at dinner by the local trade association.

GOV. WILSON STROLLS TO FOOTBALL FIELD

Presidential Candidate Keenly Interested in the Princeton Squad's Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 21.—Princeton's football men missed their usual Monday respite this afternoon. They were on the field for almost three hours and nearly an hour of this time was devoted to a stiff scrimmage pace. It was six o'clock when Keene Fitzpatrick ordered the backfield to sprint around the field and sent the forwards to the clubhouse.

About the middle of the practice the men had a visit from Gov. Woodrow Wilson, his second appearance at the gridiron this year, and this time he really seemed to be one of the coaches.

Head Coach McClave met him at the gate with an invitation to "make himself at home." The Presidential candidate strolled over the gridiron among the players and seemed to manifest a great interest in them. He had a long conversation with "Snake" Ames, a Tiger star in the Governor's day.

Captain Pendleton was the only regular who did not participate in the scrimmage this afternoon, but he raced through a long signal drill and seemed to be in good shape. "Hobe" Blaker took his place at left halfback in the heavy work. The 'Varsity was on the defense through the early part of the scrimmage, but the score favored the regulars by two scores to none through the wideawake efforts of Bluethenthal, the stocky centre. Twice he covered scrub fumbles and crossed the goal line, once after a run of thirty yards. Though the heaviest man on the Tiger team, he raced away from the scrub backs like a sprinter and shifted the ball from arm to arm like a first class backfield man.

A long drill for the forwards in breaking through and a twenty minute scrimmage that consisted entirely in exchanges of punts completed the work. Dewitt punted for the 'Varsity and seemed to have a shade the better of Waller, who went to the scrubs for the kicking duel. The men charged up and down the field a score of times and in most instances the ends covered surely and tackled the runner without a gain.

"Sport" Armstrong joined the coaching staff and assisted the forwards during the preliminary work out. The ends, including a squad of about ten, had some light scrimmage work under the direction of Howard Henry '04 and T. G. Trenchard '97.

The line remained the same to-day as that which started the Syracuse game with the exception of Shenk, who supplanted W. Swart at left guard. Through the defensive drill the forwards showed a stability that was encouraging and gave every indication that they were standing up well under the lively scrimmage.

YALE SUBS BEAT SCRUBS.

Regulars Take Only Minor Part in Practice Afte. West Point Game.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21.—With a lively substitute eleven placed on the field Yale scored two touchdowns in a forty-minute practice against the scrubs this afternoon. It took ten minutes to register the first, Johnny Castles taking the ball over through left tackle on a five-yard advance. This score was stubbornly fought, and the 'Varsity backs were unable to make any long gains in the tallying. Markle kicked his own goal and the second string set of backs, including Camp, Baker and Pompelly, were driven into the attack at this juncture. It was Pumpelly's first scrimmaging since his injury three weeks ago, and he indicated that he has improved by his rest.

Although young Camp caught a punt and dashed back forty yards for the biggest ground gaining of the afternoon it was left for Pumpelly to shoot over for the touchdown. He went through left tackle for eight yards for the score and Markle kicked goal.

During the remaining play the third and fourth string players had filled the elevens and the game suffered to the extent that scoring was halted. All the practice was secret.

Excepting Talbot every player who was used at West Point was in uniform and was sent into the practice of quick starting that opened the matinee. The veterans were excused, however, from the signal drill and from the scrimmaging. Talbot remained on the campus to avoid missing a recitation.

Decidedly the feature of the scrimmaging was the showing of Charley White, Jr., son of the veteran referee. White slipped loose from the ruck in his specialty as scrub half back, turned end twice and worked free for a thirty and later a twenty-yard run. He looked likely to score on the regulars on both occasions, but was downed from behind. He is a former Andover player.

Nate Wheeler displayed class in running the 'Varsity most of the afternoon. Head Coach Howe had the benefit of the presence of three old Yale stars, now chief coaches of elevens of quality, "Bo" Olcott, of New York University; Henry Hobbs, of Amherst, and Morgan Bowman, of Hill School. Bowman brought out Spalding, the present Yale captain.

Hobbs's Amherst team was downed decisively by Harvard Saturday and Hobbs's advice was very timely. He said to-night in speaking of the Harvard team that it impressed him as fair, the back field was excellent, but that the line had much to learn before it was a championship aggregation. Head Coach Howe has urged a dozen former Yale players to return this week, but had heard to-night from only Adee and Bloomer that they could accept. Foster Sanford, architect of the Yale defense, has finally stated that business engagements will almost certainly prevent his coming. He is preparing to sail for Europe and will probably be unable to visit Yale this Fall. To-day's line-up:

Dartmouth Prepares for Tigers.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 21.—Dartmouth started off this week's practice with a team that showed no ill-effects from the Williams game, and with the exception of Rogers's slightly sprained ankle the team is in fine condition. A hard practice was the order this afternoon, and the coaches declare that the players have awakened to the fact that they are weak on the defense, and a great improvement was evident throughout the afternoon's work. The second team lined up against the 'Varsity for a short scrimmage, and the playing of the two elevens was encouraging, to say the least. Against Princeton the green will present her strongest team possible with the exception of Capt. Bennett. It is doubtful if he will be in condition to get into the game. The training table was started yesterday, and sixteen men were put on it.

The largest body of student rooters that has ever accompanied the team to Princeton will go this year. Five hundred men are needed to get the rates, and S. P. Tuck, who is at the head of the arrangements, expects a still larger crowd to go.

Dartmouth Interclass Games.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 21.—Featuring Dartmouth's annual interclass track meet, Capt. Howard Ball of the cross-country team won a hard-fought three-mile race from Paul Harmon. From the start the men were closely grouped, with them being Marceau, Day, and Granger. On the last lap Ball cut loose with one of his famous sprints, and for a while it looked like a runaway, but Paul Harmon came tearing along and nearly caught the leader, who finished about three yards to the good. His time was 15 minutes 4 4-5 seconds, which was exceptionally good, considering the conditions. Ed Riley, 1916, brother of the hurdler, won the half mile, and Gus Braun came out ahead in both 120 high and 120 low hurdles, his time being 16 1-5 and 18 2-5, respectively. Mark Wright, the world's champion pole vaulter, was out of condition and went but 11 feet in that event. Enright, another Olympic star, was beaten in the high jump by "Dan" Mason.

TEST HARVARD DEFENSE.

Crimson Linemen Being Prepared for Brown and Princeton Games.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—Highly encouraged over the showing made against Amherst on Saturday, Harvard began its preparation for its Brown and Princeton games to-day. The linemen who have not yet been tested on the defense were coached for half an hour, and then the regulars ran through signals for the remainder of the afternoon. Harvard was disappointed that it did not meet a better attack in the Amherst game, particularly as Brown showed such ability to carry the ball against the University of Pennsylvania. Brown will come to Cambridge next Saturday and the Harvard men will have considerable special preparation for the game.

This afternoon the scrub team worked two hours on Brown's plays, and to-morrow and Wednesday will hammer away at the 'Varsity. Brown did little with the forward pass against Pennsylvania and Harvard fears this style of attack much more than it does Brown's running plays from scrimmage. The 'Varsity line-up to-day included Trumbull at right guard and Coolidge at right end. Trumbull has been regarded as a sure 'Varsity lineman all along, but has been hurt. He played for a time against Amherst, however, and was up to expectations.

Coolidge's work at end Saturday was so brilliant that the chances are he will be first choice over O'Brien for the Brown game and perhaps for the Princeton game in which O'Brien started with Felton last year. Saturday O'Brien also played good football, so that for the first time this year Harvard's chances for having some very good ends are rosy.

The problem at end has been still further facilitated by the return of Smith and Dana, who were hurt two weeks ago, but who will be able to get into the real hard work before the end of the week.

Driscoll, the right guard displaced by Trumbull, is out again, and if he does not make a place at guard over Trumbull or Pennock will be a first-class substitute. The only injury that Harvard sustained Saturday against Amherst was to have Bradlee, the first substitute for all three backfield positions, laid off because of a hard blow received on the back. Bradlee has been working hard all Fall and the lay off will do him good.

Captain Wendell was on the field in playing clothes, but did nothing except to run through signals. Wendell is anxious to play against Brown, but his head is still bandaged. Wendell and Hardwick did the full complement of work to-day, but both will take things easy in the coming scrimmages. Wendell may do no real playing at all until a day or two before the Princeton game.

The work for the next two weeks will be mainly on the rush line, which has not had any hard fire to stand under. Brown's line looks much stronger than any Harvard has yet attacked, and the Cambridge team always has respect for the forwards turned out by Robinson, the Providence head coach.

CORNELL MEN BANGED UP.

Penn State Game Too Severe Physical Encounter for Ithacans.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 21.—The Cornell football team held no outdoor practice to-day, and the players were thankful. The squad that reported to Coach Sharpe for a blackboard talk and discussion was composed of the worst banged-up set of men seen here in a long time. Not a man came out of the Penn State game unscathed, and several were so badly hurt that they won't be able to play this week. O'Connor and Champaign, two of the strongest men, are included in this number. Both sustained injuries to their legs which will effectually put them out of practice for the week, and may bar them from the next game. Others who were badly hurt were Munns and Weidenthal, whose faces are masses of bruises and cuts. O'Hearne at right end sustained a leg injury and the balance of the team is severely bruised, though none so badly as those named. The hard grueling, however, is expected to do more good than harm, as long as none of the players are laid out for the season.

Coach Sharpe is going to devote much attention to his back field this week, and he hopes that Capt. Butler, R. B. Whyte, Underhill, and Shuler will be in shape to play, so that he can strengthen it if possible. One certain change will be at centre. Jesse Whyte, last year's centre, has been added to the training stable, while McCutcheon goes back to the second table. State went through McCutcheon frequently Saturday, but when Whyte entered the game he blocked most of the advances. He is now in good physical condition and will undoubtedly strengthen the line. McCutcheon does not develop as rapidly because he has afternoon work and cannot play football until late. Capt. Butler is expected back in the game to-morrow.

Striving to Brace Up Navy Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 21.—The coaches and members of the squad at the Naval Academy started in this afternoon with a determination to bring about the brace which the result of the recent games against Lehigh and Swarthmore has indicated to be sadly needed. The practice was short, owing to a long infantry drill, from which the football men were not exempt, but when the players arrived on the field they were given a brief talk by Head Coach Howard and other coaches and devoted the remaining daylight to a fast signal drill.

A line was formed of tremendous strength, with Walker at centre, Brown and Howe at guards, Vaughan and Redman at tackles, and Gilchrist and Overesch at ends. A notable move was made in putting Ingram, who played at centre this season and part of last, behind the line. Direct pass plays were used most of the time, but Ingram, who weighs 180 pounds, sometimes took the position of quarter back. The other backs were Nicholls, Cook, and Bates, all of whom have done well when given an opportunity this season.

Ingram has yet to show his ability in his new position, but all of the others have the making of splendid backs. Nicholls and Bates have had greater experience on the first team, and are clever runners and hard men to hold. Cook played a dashing game on the fourth class team last year, and plays one of the most determined games of any member of the squad.

To-morrow practically this same combination will be tried out in scrimmage, and the weight and strength of the forward is expected to make possible a line-smashing game against any opponents the team may have during the season.

Indians Have Hard Tasks Ahead.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Oct. 21.—With every nerve keyed to highest tension, the Carlisle Indians started in this afternoon on the most strenuous week's practice any football eleven ever approached, viewing with apprehension Saturday's contest at the National capital against Georgetown University's strong team, and on the following Monday the game against Toronto University, which will be America's first international football event. Double training will be the order throughout the week. To-day Coach Warner trimmed sails by substituting Tackle Guyon for Powell at full back, shoving Busch to tackle and placing Hill at right guard. The usual round of fundamentals, supplemented by passing the ball exercises, occupied the early period and signals were run through before a ten-minute scrimmage was held. Coach Warner worked several of his fast subs into the line-up for brief periods. The great contrast that will come in the style of play between contests forty-eight hours apart would try the spirit of the nerviest coaches and players, but the Indians rather view the outlook with pleasurable anticipation. Capt. Thorpe did not work to-day, the half back positions being played by at least half a dozen different players. For the Toronto international game especial attention was given to punting, all hands participating in the kicking. Individual coaching was given the line in behalf of the Georgetown contest.

BALL PLAYERS FINED.

Doyle, Wiltse, and Latham Charged with Sabbath Breaking.

Larry Doyle, second baseman for the Giants, said as he was leaving Harlem Court yesterday morning, where he had been fined $5 on a charge of breaking the Sabbath, that he had decided fully that he was a better second baseman than a pitcher and that he would in the future confine himself to that position. At the same time, Arlie Latham, the former coach of the Giants, who had also been fined $5, said that he now fully realized the responsibilities of an umpire. George Wiltse, summoned in connection with another baseball game, paid his fine of $5 and had nothing to say.

Doyle, Latham, and Toby Thompson were handed summonses by Detective James Hughes, attached to the Sixth Inspection District, yesterday afternoon at Lenox Oval, 144th Street and Lenox Avenue, where Larry Doyle's Stars were scheduled to play another team. At the third inning, Hughes testified to Magistrate Krotel, he bought a magazine from a man outside the grounds for 50 cents and entered the grounds. Larry Doyle was pitching and Thompson catching, while Latham was umpiring. Detective Hughes handed them each a summons and retired.

Hughes, under cross-examination by Abraham Brickstone, attorney for the baseball players, admitted that he had seen no one pay to get in, nor did he see that everybody who was inside the oval carried a magazine. Magistrate Krotel, however, decided that the men were guilty of breaking the Sabbath and fined them $5 each.

Wiltse, who had been summoned in connection with a game between the Lincoln Giants and the Old Stars, which had been played at the Olympic Oval, 135th Street and Fifth Avenue, was arraigned after Doyle had been fined, but all of the Giants waited for the disposition of his case. With Wiltse were "Al" Schacht and Richard Mahoney, who also paid fines.

George Levy of 649 Lenox Avenue, the manager of the Lenox Oval, was held in $500 bail for examination to-morrow, on a charge of selling admission to a baseball game. Mr. Levy requested the adjournment, and it was granted.

It was said by the ball players that Tesreau had pitched the first two innings for Larry Doyle's Stars and was going to return to the box, when the opposing players objected and Doyle went in to pitch.

CHANCE SCORES MURPHY.

Cubs' President Fails to Name New Manager, as Promised.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Although President Murphy of the Chicago National League Baseball Club has announced that he has decided on a new manager to supplant Frank Chance next year, he failed to name the man to-day, as had been expected. In connection with the statements of President Murphy, Manager Chance declared that "Murphy does not dare to release me."

Manager Chance said he did not believe that President Murphy had chosen a new manager, but that he might select one later because of the situation that has been created.

Chance said that it was "a dog's life to manage a team under Murphy," as the players hated to play for him. Chance said that Murphy had accused him of inability, but that the only players obtained by the Cubs had been procured without the help of the club President, "except three, and Murphy got them for nothing."

SOPHOMORES' NINE WINS.

Columbia Seniors Defeated, 6 to 5, in Interclass Series Game.

The Columbia sophomores need to win only one game in the interclass baseball series for the Eddie Collins medals to make sure of the championship, for they yesterday defeated the seniors in the next to the last game by a score of 6 to 5. The game was played on South Field before a large crowd. The seniors hit Lee hard in the first inning, and scored three runs before they retired. The sophomores, however, evened matters by getting three runs off Gretsch, and by adding three more in the second inning made sure of the game.

Spooner, the sophomores' right fielder, went back to the tennis courts in the second inning and made a one-handed catch of a hard liner that looked good for a home run. The catch shut off three runs, as there were two on base at the time. It was the most sensational piece of fielding in the series. The score:

Sophomores	3	3	0	0	0	.	.	—6	9	1

McGraw's Articles in The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Gentlemen: I have been told that it has been asserted that I did not write the articles which appeared under my signature during the world's series just past in your paper and in other papers which took your news service. I wish to refute this statement. While it was, of course, impossible for me to spare the time required for the actual manual labor of writing, I dictated each and every article, and then read and revised each before it was released to you for publication. Very truly yours,

NEW HIGHWAY BONDS PUT IN LEGAL DOUBT

INHIBITION IN ARTICLE VII.

Henry W. Taft and Frederic R. Coudert Think, However, That the Issue Would Be Legal.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 21.—A question has been raised as to the constitutionality of the proposal to issue $50,000,000 additional highway bonds, which goes before the electors at the November election. This referendum was authorized by Chapter 298, Laws of 1912, and, if passed, will authorize the State Controller to sell the bonds in such lots and at such times as the road improvement requires.

The contention of unconstitutionality is that Article VII. provides that "the aggregate debts authorized by this section shall not at any one time exceed the sum of $50,000,000," and that by voting the new issue that sum would be exceeded.

There was no State officer in Albany tonight who cared to give an opinion off hand. It is recalled that at the time the highway amendment was being considered by the Legislature it was to be so worded as to mislead the voter into the belief that only $50,000,000 could be expended, while the actual intent was that not more than $50,000,000 should be issued at any one time.

The amendment as it passed, in the belief of some of those who have carefully studied it, is that no more highway bonds can be issued, unless the Constitution is amended, for nearly fifty years to come. It is pointed out that there is no restriction on bond issues by referendum under the Constitution for other purposes than highway improvement, and that if the people should vote favorably on any other expenditure there would be no limit to the amount they might vote. But the highway bonds cannot exceed $50,000,000.

The constitutional question which has arisen over the proposal to issue $50,000,000 more State highway bonds was submitted yesterday to Henry W. Taft and Frederic R. Coudert here. In a general way they are of the opinion that the additional bond issue is legal. Mr. Taft said it was the first time the subject had been called to his attention, and, not having had an opportunity to give it even casual consideration, he disliked to give an opinion on a constitutional question. After reading the two sections relating to appropriations of money or bonds for highway improvements and the referendum to be submitted to the people at the polls, however, he decided that the two Sections (4 and 12 of Article 7) did not conflict, and a vote appropriating an additional bond issue of $50,000,000 for that specific purpose would apparently be valid. He said:

"It seems to me it was not intended by Section 12, to exclude the raising of money to build highways by the issue of bonds under the provisions of Section 4. The provision of Section 12 provides a method by which the principal of the bonds may be paid, by an assessment upon the counties and the towns in certain proportions specified.

"This feature of Section 12 is a sufficient reason for the special authorization which it provides for. But it does not seem to me that its provisions indicate that it was the intention to exclude, or limit, the power to issue bonds for any specified object under the general provisions of Section 4."

Frederic R. Coudert, who also had no previous opportunity to consider the sections of the Constitution relating to the specific purposes of highways and bond issues, gave the two sections a brief reading and concluded that Section 12 contained no prohibition against a referendum being submitted to the people for approval of a further issue of bonds.

"Under Section 12," he said, "the Legislature has no further power to authorize an issue of bonds without the approval of the people. Section 12 plainly limits the officers of the State Government to an issue of $50,000,000 of bonds. All virtue under Section 12 having been exhausted by the issue of the bonds, while there are $50,000,000 of bonds outstanding, is a dead section. But there appears to be no limitation in Section 12 to prevent the Legislature from referring to the people for approval the question of another issue of bonds for the specific purpose of highway improvements."

BRAUN'S CHARGES DERIDED.

Trans-Atlantic Trust Company Not in Politics, Says President.

Marcus Braun's charges that Hungarian influences in the Trans-Atlantic Trust Company here strove to prevent the naturalization in this country of Hungarian immigrants were derided yesterday by counsel for the banking institution and some of its Wall Street directors, and denied in detail by Julius Pirnitzer, president of the Trust Company. Braun, who is president of the Hungarian Republican Club, petitioned the Attorney General to stop the institution from doing business. He had no criticism to make of its financial standing, which is admittedly strong, but based his objections entirely on patriotic arguments, alleging that the institution had the backing of the Hungarian Government and was an influence in keeping immigrants to this country from becoming adopted citizens. The petition comes up for hearing before Deputy Attorney General Joseph A. Kellogg this morning.

President Julius Pirnitzer denied emphatically yesterday that the bank had any political or national activities or influence whatever. He said it was purely a banking institution and neither as an organization or through its individual officers had attempted or would attempt to exercise any influence over the citizenship of Hungarians or any of the other diverse nationalities who are large patrons of its East Side branches. He denied all of the allegations in Braun's petition categorically. He also stated emphatically that the Trans-Atlantic Trust Company was not the successor in any sense of the old Hungarian-American Bank. He explained that the old institution was liquidated.

Marcus Braun, who brings the petition, was a special immigration inspector for seven years. He resigned in 1910. In 1911, under the name of Morris Brown, he was picked up in a raid on the Waldorf Club, at 224 East Fourteenth Street, and at first charged with keeping and maintaining the resort. The charge was later changed to common gambling, and he was discharged the next morning for lack of evidence after spending a night in a cell.

NEWSPAPER APPEALS UP.

Supreme Court Hears Motions to Hurry Cases Contesting Publicity Law

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—In the Supreme Court of the United States James Beck, counsel for the Lewis Publishing Company, New York, publishers of The Morning Telegraph, and Robert M. Morris, counsel for The New York Journal of Commerce, submitted printed motions to-day to advance for hearing the appeals taken from the District Court of the Second District of New York in the cases involving the constitutionality and legality of the recent Federal statute imposing restrictions on daily newspapers.

The Supreme Court merely signified that the motions would be taken under advisement. The printed briefs submitted in open court to-day were filed in the office of the Clerk on Saturday and a summary of their contents was contained in a Washington dispatch to THE NEW YORK SUNDAY TIMES.

CAN'T RAISE BAGGAGE RATES.

Railroads Stopped from Further Limiting Bulk of Personal Luggage.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Regulations to restrict further the size and limit the weight of personal baggage of travelers, adopted substantially by all the railroads in the United States, was suspended today by the Inter-State Commerce Commission until April 29.

The suspended regulation provided that on any piece of baggage, the greatest dimension of which exceeded 45 inches, an additional charge for each additional inch would be made to equal ten pounds of excess weight; and that no piece of baggage, the greatest dimension of which exceeded 70 inches, would be transported in any baggage car.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The market on the Consolidated Exchange was under selling pressure virtually all day, although there were occasional periods of comparative dullness. The heaviest selling was in the closing hour, when the pressure against prices became pronounced, and the whole list gave way easily under the weight of offerings. A number of the prominent stocks, however, failed to touch as low prices as were reached on the New York Stock Exchange. This was notably the case with United States Steel, which did not sell under 77¼ against 77 on the other board. Prices on the 9:30 o'clock opening call reflected irregularity, compared with Saturday's closings. Transactions in the half hour before business started elsewhere in Wall Street totaled 5,700 shares.

HITS AT OIL BROKERS.

W. H. Gray Says They Have Reason to be Pleased with Dissolution.

Commenting on the letter of J. D. Chamberlain, Secretary of the National Petroleum Association, to Attorney General Wickersham, in which he spoke enthusiastically of the effects of the Standard Oil dissolution decree, W. H. Gray of counsel for H. C. Pierce in the Waters-Pierce Oil litigation, said yesterday that the National Petroleum Association was made up largely of brokers who had been benefited by recent increases in prices.

"These brokers," he said, "buy from the refiners and sell to the trade, principally lubricating oils. Last year there was a fight on between the Standard Oil Company and the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company, the European combination, for business, especially in Germany. Prices for refined oil were cut heavily, and the Standard Oil Company reduced the prices paid by it for crude oil, giving that as the reason.

"The differences between the two trusts were patched up, and the Standard immediately put up the price to the consumer. Gasolene has gone up from 11 cents to 17 cents a gallon, and similar increases have been made in other products. Prices have also been raised for the purchase of crude oil from the producer, but in nothing like the same proportion.

"The President of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana testified recently in the Waters-Pierce suit that he was paying 20 or 25 cents a barrel more for crude petroleum than he was eight months ago. He also admitted that prices for refined oil had been put up about 6 cents a gallon. There are forty-two gallons in a barrel. Of course, the reason given by the Standard for the increase to the consumer is that it pays more for crude. These higher prices naturally inure to the benefit of the oil brokers.

"As to the statement that the association includes a large number of independent refiners, that depends on what you mean by independent. The Pure Oil Company of Cleveland was formerly a real independent, and was in competition with the Standard in Germany, among other places. Last year the Standard made a deal with it by which it agreed to supply the requirements of the Pure Oil Company in the way of crude petroleum from its pipe lines for ten years. It also agreed to take all the Pure Oil Company's export oil for the German-American Petroleum Company for the same period. It bought all the distributing stations and other equipment of the Pure Oil Company in Germany. The result was that the stock of the Pure Oil Company trebled in value.

"Now, there were a number of small independent refineries that were affiliated with the Pure Oil Company to the extent that they drew their supplies of crude petroleum from its pipe lines. There was never enough to go around, and the supply was apportioned among them, so that they were able to run at 40 per cent. or 75 per cent. of their capacity, as the case might be. When the Pure Oil Company made its deal it took care of these small refineries, in which the stockholders were largely the same as their own.

"They get their supply of crude oil from the Standard's pipe lines now, and they get enough to run 100 per cent. of capacity. They also have a market for their export oil by merely turning it over to the German Company at New York. Their stocks also have about trebled in value. These small refineries, from which much of the Government testimony against the trust was obtained, are the ones that are members of the National Petroleum Association. Of course, they are well satisfied with the change of conditions, brought about, not by the dissolution decree, but by the Pure Oil Company's deal with the standard. They were independent a year ago and they are independent now, so far as stock ownership is concerned, but they are absolutely dependent on the Standard for their raw material and for their market."

G. T. R. R. AFTER 'CORN BELT.'

Officials of Canadian Road Admit That Negotiations Are On.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Oct. 21.—It is admitted here that negotiations are under way for the acquisition of the Chicago Great Western Railroad ("Corn Belt Route") by the Grand Trunk Railway system. Officials decline to indicate how far the negotiations have gone, or whether the Grand Trunk intends to absorb or gain control of the stock of the Middle West system. The taking over of the latter was one of the plans of the late Charles M. Hays, President of the Grand Trunk, who went down with the Titanic. When he died the plans were abandoned temporarily, but E. J. Chamberlain, his successor, has resumed negotiations. This campaign is only part of a general Canadian railway fight, it is admitted here, for connecting the great producing Northwest with the consuming and exporting East.

It was President Hays who startled the eastern railroad interests of the United States by suddenly getting control of the old Central Vermont Railway and thus putting his road in direct competition with American lines entering New England. Had he lived a few months longer it is believed here he would have obtained in the same quiet way control of the Chicago Great Western.

The negotiations have been carried on mainly in New York, owing to the placing of the Chicago Great Western stock, since the reorganization, in care of a voting trust made up of J. P. Morgan George F. Baker, and Robert Fleming. This trust will terminate on Sept. 1, 1914.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

Grains Quiet Pending War Developments—Cotton and Pork Lower.

Wheat was dull and steady awaiting developments in the Balkans. Corn was quiet. Weather conditions continue very favorable. Oats were steady with continued large distribution. Provisions were lower on the heavy movement of hogs and disappointing cash demand. Cottonseed oil showed weakness, particularly the near-by deliveries. Cotton was quiet and a shade easier. No frost was anticipated this week. The foreign market was heavy. Receipts are moderate. Spot news is contradictory. Coffee was quiet with only small price changes.

WHEAT.

The wheat market closed at unchanged prices for the day. Business was small, and, while the developments were somewhat bearish as to the movement and the demand, the pronounced uncertainty as to the effect of further warlike complications in Southeastern Europe checked selling, and there was only a little professional business during the day. Cash demand was very quiet, and no export business was reported. The foreign markets were quiet, showing fractional changes only, some a little higher, others a little lower, while the demand for cash wheat was very uninteresting. Foreign statistics were a little bearish. World's exports were 13,968,000 bushels, against 13,488,000 bushels the previous week and 10,160,000 bushels last year. The amount afloat for Europe increased 872,000 bushels. The American visible supply showed an increase of 2,251,000 bushels, which was very small, considering the enormous receipts. The present visible supply of 36,668,000 bushels compares with 61,815,000 bushels last year. Receipts since July 1 have been much in excess of last year, this excess amounting to 28,000,000 bushels, while the visible supply has increased 25,000,000 bushels less than the increase last year, indicating a total gain in the distribution, either domestic or export, of 53,000,000 bushels. During the afternoon trading was very small. Interior receipts for the day were enormous, amounting to 3,115,000 bushels, against 1,427,000 bushels last year. Interior shipments of 1,365,000 bushels were nearly double last year's interior shipments. Exports for the day were 1,342,000 bushels, against 413,000 bushels last year. Cash wheat was inactive. No. 2 red was quoted at $1.05½, f. o. b.; No. 1 Northern, 99c; No. 2 hard, $1.01¾; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.01.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN was steady. New-crop deliveries showed very slight changes for the day. October corn was lower and cash corn was reported quiet. Western receipts continue much smaller than last year but the visible supply decreased only 409,000 bushels, against a decrease last year of 550,000 bushels, when the receipts were much larger than at present. Weather conditions were fine for curing the new corn. World's exports were 5,532,000 bushels, against 1,639,000 bushels a year ago. The amount afloat for Europe is 31,323,000 bushels, against 3,961,000 bushels last year. Cash corn was quiet, with No. 2 quoted at 73c, elevator, and export corn at 59½c, f. o. b., December to March loading.

OATS.—Trading was also slow in oats, with the market fractionally lower. Heavy receipts were reported, the total amounting to 1,339,000 bushels, against 649,000 bushels last year, while the interior shipments were only about half the receipts. The visible supply showed a decrease for the last week of 283,000 bushels, notwithstanding the enormous movement of last week, and the present total of 9,129,000 bushels compares with 21,768,000 bushels last year. Cash oats were quiet, with No. 3 white, 39c; No. 4 white, 37½c, and white clipped, 37@40c.

PROVISIONS.

The market was quiet and lower. The near-by deliveries of lard were quite weak, and there was also distinct pressure on the October delivery of ribs. Cash demand was reported slow. Hogs were generally lower through the West, with the receipts amounting to about 83,000 at all points.

COTTONSEED OIL.

A slump in the October delivery had sympathetic influence on other months. The undertone was unsettled, and despite the fact that there were substantial buying orders uncovered on the small recessions, sentiment remained rather bearish. There were tenders for about 1,000 barrels in circulation, which induced more or less selling of the near positions. Support in these options was lacking. Part of the buying in other months was credited to Western interests, although it was intimated in some quarters that certain refiners were actively covering shorts. Hedge pressure was in evidence. Crude was quite steady, quoted at 4.80 in the Southeast, 4.70 to 4.80 in Texas, and at 4.80 to 4.93 in the Valley. Mills were said to be indisposed to sell freely at prevailing levels. The lower range of quotations in the lard market and generally favorable cotton conditions tended to restrict the professional element from operating on the long side, particularly as there was not a great deal of encouragement received from the generality of advices pertaining to the inquiry from trade sources.

COTTON.

An absence of excitement characterized yesterday's session. The area over which values fluctuated was very limited. Initial declines of from 7 to 11 points inspired confidence among the bear forces, but these losses were not enlarged upon, there being only inconsequential net changes disclosed and a somewhat steadier undertone at the conclusion of the day. Little transpired, however, to promote bullish enthusiasm, and it was noticeable that in some quarters a quietus is being placed upon frost apprehension, the tendency being to base views for higher levels on the consumption prospects, the technical position, and the fact that the market has at least partly discounted a moderately large crop.

The overnight forecast calls for frost in northern Texas and Oklahoma, but the temperatures which were noted in the corn belt did not create the impression that the weather would be severe. There were scattered rains in the Eastern States, with the outlook for more moisture to-day, but unless the rainfall is heavy, it is not believed that much dissatisfaction will be expressed. The long range prediction from Washington attracted attention inasmuch as the coldest weather of the season is expected to make its appearance in the Far Northwest at the end of this week, suggesting that by the beginning of next week a frost may really overspread important cotton producing regions. Not much alarm was occasioned by this possibility, however, as it is realized that there will be only limited areas exposed to cold weather at that time, but, of course, if the freeze is extensive and decided its effect will not be ignored.

Early declines were attributed to a disappointing set of quotations from Liverpool. The foreign market suffered from sheer offerings of actual cotton, while the Balkan situation is still mentioned as a factor. The spot sales at Liverpool were 10,000 bales. Correspondence from the other side is indicative of a mixed sentiment, inclined somewhat to the bear side as a result of the maturing weather which the American South has experienced. Foreign buying was discerned in our market during the day, but it seemed as though considerable of this trade, and of other business, which transpired represented spreading operations between the various markets and on price differences.

Spot concerns were active intermittently on both sides of the list. Part of the selling was a resumption of the placing of hedges, while the recessions induced inquiry from trade sources. Spot advices proved stimulating for a time, as there were statements that offerings from first hands were subsiding, and that a betterment had occurred in the demand, but the accounts were not without irregularity and several were ambiguous. Official quotations from Southern spot centres were unchanged to ⅛c lower. New York spot cotton was unchanged; middlings, 10.90c. The movement is of good proportions with yesterday's port receipts estimated at 80,000 against 72,000 last year, and to-day's receipts figured at about 100,000 bales, comparing with 110,000 a year ago.

COFFEE.

Price changes were narrow, but the undertone was steady. The opening was 1 to 4 points above the final of Saturday, and at the close there was considerable switching which gave a show of firmness, and final prices were 1 to 3 points net higher. Total sales were 47,250 bags. Havre advanced ¼f. to ⅝f; Hamburg was ¼ to ½ pfennig higher; Rio was weak at 75 reis decline, while Santos was 50 to 100 reis lower. Receipts at Brazilian points were again moderate, and so far this season Rio and Santos have received 5,475,000 bags, compared with 6,599,000 bags last year and 6,328,000 bags two years ago.

Spot coffee unchanged, with Rio 7 15⅛c.

Total warehouse deliveries in the United States for the week were 107,871 bags, against 101,785 last week and 117,097 last year. Of the former amount New York had 70,713 bags. Contract prices:

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS:

Sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at his office in the Capitol at Albany, N. Y., until twelve o'clock noon of Tuesday, November 19, 1912, at which place and hour they will be publicly opened and read, for the construction of barge canal terminals, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 746 of the Laws of 1911, and of the acts supplementary thereto, as follows:

TERMINAL CONTRACT NO. 11.

For constructing a harbor and dockwall on the south side of the Mohawk River just east of the highway bridge at Ilion. Contract plans sheets 1 and 2.

Plans may be seen and detailed specifications, engineer's estimate of quantities, proposal blanks, form of contract and bonds required, and other information for proposers may be had at the office of the Superintendent of Public Works at Albany, N. Y.; at the office of the Assistant Superintendent of Public Works for the Middle Division at Syracuse, N. Y.; at the office of the Assistant Superintendent of Public Works for the Western Division at Rochester, N. Y., and at the canal office, Spaulding's Exchange, Buffalo, N. Y.

Copies of detailed plans or drawings may be obtained from the State Engineer and Surveyor at Albany, N. Y., upon payment to him of the cost of producing them.

Monthly estimates will be paid of ninety per centum (90 per cent.) of the work done at the contract price. Every proposal for said work must be accompanied by a money deposit in the form of a draft or certified check upon some good banking institution in either the City of Albany or the City of New York, issued by a National or State bank or trust company in good credit within the State and payable at sight to the Superintendent of Public Works for five per centum (5 per cent.) of the amount of the proposal.

The person whose proposal shall be accepted will be required to execute a contract and furnish bonds within ten days from the date of notice of award delivered to him or them in person or mailed to the address given in the proposal.

Upon execution of the contract and appproval of bonds, the certified check or draft will be returned to the proposer unless the same shall have been presented for collection prior to such time, in which case the amount of the deposit will be refunded by the Superintendent of Public Works.

The deposits of bidders other than the one to whom the award of contract shall be made will be returned immediately after the award has been made.

The amount of bond required for faithful performance will be ten per centum (10 per cent.) of the amount of the estimated cost of the work according to the contract price, and an additional bond, known as the labor bond, in the sum of ten per centum (10 per cent.) of the amount of the estimated cost of the work according to the contract price, will be required as security that the contractor will pay in full at least once in each month all laborers employed by him upon the work specified to be done in the contract.

In the event that more than one surety company is offered as surety on said bonds, coinsurance only will be accepted.

Each proposal must be addressed to the Superintendent of Public Works, Albany, N. Y., and must be endorsed on the envelope with the name of the construction for which the proposal is made.

Award, if made, will be made to the person or persons whose proposal shall be lowest in cost to the State for doing the work, and which shall comply with all provisions required to render it formal. Before any award shall be made the lowest bidder will be required to satisfy the Superintendent of Public Works of his ability to provide suitable equipment and materials for the proper performance of the work.

The right is reserved to reject all proposals and readvertise and award the contract in the regular manner if, in the judgment of the undersigned, the interests of the State will be enhanced thereby.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Heavy Selling Forces Sharp Break in Stocks—Aftermath of European Selling.

The stock market, which during the morning and the early hours of yesterday afternoon was heavy and hesitant, broke sharply in the final hour of trading. Support for a time checked the break but the heavy flow of stocks continued and the quotations which were being recorded when trading ceased for the day were very little better than the lowest of the session. The sharpness of the decline is indicated by the fact that the average loss in fifty of the principal issues amounted to more than a full point. Practically all of the selling seemed to be for domestic account, though rumors from abroad of disquieting import played their part in creating the atmosphere which made the selling so effective in depressing prices. It is probable that the bear pressure which was put upon the market was greater than any which it had lately encountered, but the fact that the selling caused so pronounced a break called for an explanation independent of the possible division of the selling between the short and long accounts.

Whatever the proportion between actual liquidation and short commitments the fact remained that prices yielded yesterday in a way which was in sharp contrast with the sturdy resistance which they had previously shown in the face of heavy selling from abroad. Many explanations were offered for the weakness, but doubtless the underlying cause of the sharp reaction was that the recent heavy selling from abroad had weakened the market position to a greater extent than had been apparent from the first effect of this selling upon prices. The market, in other words, had been left so full of stocks that it was not in a position to withstand readily any further heavy pressure irrespective of the source of the selling.

In view of the fact that the election was but two weeks off it was not surprising that some should have described the break as due to an election scare even though those who thus defined the movement were at a loss to explain in what way a scare could arise from a political situation about the results of which there has been no serious difference of opinion in the financial district for many weeks. Others put the break down to foreign advices, and it is true that much was made on the Stock Exchange of unpleasant rumors regarding the European situation, although the messages which bankers received from abroad during the day gave no great support to the rumors which circulated in Stock Exchange quarters. The Paris market seemed still to be under considerable pressure, and there alone among the European markets discount rates remained above the bank rate, but the tenor of the actual advices from that market did not appear to justify the reports which circulated here regarding the position at that centre. Indeed, when all the external factors of the day, including the somewhat greater firmness of the money market and a rise in foreign exchange rates were taken into consideration, there was hardly sufficient basis found for any such weakness as that which the market showed during the afternoon. This very fact affords additional basis for the assumption that the break which occurred represented in fact the belated appearance of a movement which could readily have been explained had it occurred at the height of the foreign liquidation which was recently under way. Our market seems to have at first withstood that selling only to yield now to its natural influence upon our market position.

Automobiles in the Northwest.

Additional evidence of the effect of automobile competition on railway earnings is furnished by the remarks of President Elliott in connection with the Northern Pacific's decrease in passenger revenue. This company's passenger business was nearly $2,000,000 less last year than the year before. Mr. Elliott says that this was due to several causes. General conditions were such that people felt poor, and were much more careful about expenditures than during the last three years. The St. Paul's new transcontinental train and the Great Northern and Union Pacific trains between Portland, Tacoma, and Seattle took away a share of the business which went to the Northern Pacific in previous years. "There is little doubt also," says Mr. Elliott, "but that the growing use of the automobile has had its effect on the volume of passenger business. The latest figures for registration of automobiles shows there are, not counting commercial vehicles, 827,284 automobiles in the United States, or about one for every 215 people, and in the States served by this company one automobile for about every 90 people. This results in considerable decrease in the short travel on the railroad, and also has had the effect of reducing the volume of pleasure travel, temporarily at least, because people of moderate means cannot own automobiles and also make trips to the mountains, parks, and lakes."

Some Big Losses.

Most stocks closed at their lowest figure for the day, or near it. Steel, which opened unchanged at 79⅝, sold down 2⅝, to 77, where it closed. In Reading the loss was 3¾. Canadian Pacific, which had been making a valiant attempt to get back its ground lost last week on the foreign selling, dropped back to 263½, a net loss of 4 points. Amalgamated Copper's increased dividend was apparently forgotten, and that issue lost 3 points, while Smelters receded 2¼. Inter-Met. preferred declined to 263½, but recovered a half point on the last sales. The sudden change in sentiment was particularly hard on some of the small specialties which had been advanced rather easily in recent weeks. Before the break set in there was a sale of 100 shares of National Enameling and Stamping at 22. A few minutes afterward 400 shares sold at 21⅝, a loss of 1⅜ between the two transactions. California Petroleum lost 2½, and Corn Products declined 1¾, to 19¾. American Can sold down to 43⅜, a loss of 1⅝.

Wells Fargo Off Further.

There was a sale of Wells Fargo stock at 125 yesterday, which was recorded as representing a loss of 8 points from the previous transaction. As a matter of fact, the last previous sale of this issue was made at 129, though it was not recorded on the tape at the time.

A Bad Twenty Minutes.

At the opening yesterday the stock market showed a tendency to sell off, but prices held well and trading soon relapsed into dullness that threatened a very small total for the day. The number of shares sold in the second hour was less than one-quarter of the number changing hands from 10 to 11, and the third hour was almost as quiet. In the afternoon prices began to shade off, but a number of issues had gains over Saturday's closing, and at 2:30 the market had every appearance of proceeding to an orderly and uninteresting close. Within a few minutes the traders made a determined attack upon prices, and with the aid of a rumor to the effect than an important Paris bank was in trouble they met with little resistance in bringing about a recession. The activity in the final hour was almost as great as that for the four hours which had preceded it. The last twenty minutes of the session witnessed a general break in prices as the result of heavy selling in all parts of the room. There were 69,000 shares of Reading dealt in from 2 to 3, as against 60,000 in the four hours from 10 to 2. In Steel 60,800 shares were sold in the final hour, as against 46,700 in the first four hours of the session. Amalgamated Copper's total for the last hour was 17,600, as compared with 16,000 shares done up to that time, while in Union Pacific the figures were 22,100 and 16,000, respectively.

Opposed to U. S. Motors Plan.

Minority security holders of the United States Motors Company, who must pay $24 a share to participate in the reorganization, will oppose ratification of the plan. The receivers of the company are to report to the court next Monday, and the minority interests talked yesterday of starting legal action before that time to prevent the plan from becoming operative. One method suggested was the application for a referee to take testimony concerning the business of the company and of its assets. The minority thinks the new capital needed should have been raised through a mortgage bond issue.

Curb Has Troubles.

The Curb Association is losing a substantial income through the indifference of the promoters of a number of stocks which have come into being recently to the advantage of a place in the Curb's official list. One of the principles on which the Curb organization was effected was that the responsible outside brokers should combine to prevent the washing back and forth of worthless stocks for the purpose of maintaining an alleged "Curb price" which was useful in marketing bad securities to a gullible public. A censorship was established, which gave the privilege of quotation on the Curb sheets a standing which it never had before, and the listing fee charged added appreciably to the association's funds. Most of the newly organized industrial and mining stocks are listed by their sponsors, but occasionally a new issue comes out whose promoters do not think listing worth while. For instance, the shares of the newly incorporated Tobacco Products Company are not listed, and yet have been at times recently the most active issues outside. As far as the official Curb sheets show, there might never have been a transaction in the stock. There are a few of the Standard Oil issues, too, which are active on the Curb though not listed, but the real market for these stocks is over the counter.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Heavy Trading in Unlisted Tobacco Products' Shares Overshadows Regular Curb Market.

Transactions in the shares of the newly launched Tobacco Products Company overshadowed the business in the rest of the Curb issues yesterday, although the new stock is not regularly listed. Estimates put the total business in the preferred stock at 11,000 shares.

The movement was on the downward scale, the price sagging from 108½ to 106⅝. United Cigar Stores of America sold 8,000 shares between 108 and 108⅞. The close was at the low price, a full point below the opening. There was a rise of 1 point in Emerson-Brantingham preferred, which closed at 101. United States Motors common sold 3,000 between 1¾ and 2⅝, closing at 1⅞, five-eighths below the opening. The preferred sold off from 5 to 4¼ and closed at 4½. The mining list was sluggish, but inclined to heaviness.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Prices Drop in London Under Continental Selling—Weakness on Paris Bourse.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 22.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"Day-to-day loans and weekly fixtures were unaltered yesterday, although in some instances 3¼ per cent., occasionally more, was paid for advances till to-day. There was a better inquiry for two and three months' bills, consequently quotations weakened slightly.

"The Bank expected to receive about £600,000 out of this week's arrivals of bar gold.

"A further decline of 3¼ per cent. occurred in the Paris Cheque, but the Berlin Exchange moved in our favor.

"The stock markets opened in a hesitating manner for a while. Gilt-edged securities showed strength at the outset, and American railroad securities opened rather above parity. Rio Tinto and South African shares were offered in response to a less confident tone on the Paris Bourse on Saturday. Mexican railway stocks developed weakness, and prices in the home railways market trended downward.

"In the afternoon renewed liquidation on French account tended to impart a dull tone to all markets, and as Wall Street showed no disposition to support prices, and, in fact, offered Canadian Pacific and United States Steel shares with some freedom, there was practically no recovery in any department at the close, although, as a rule, the movements were of no great importance.

"Consols remained firm throughout, partly owing to purchases for sinking fund purposes and partly to the absence of any foreign demand for bar gold.

"At the mining end of the House, the tone was weak at the close, especially as regards the principal copper and South African shares.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Prices were weaker on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 89f 57½c for the account.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—Trading was quiet on the Boerse to-day.

Splendid franchise situation.

NOTED ALIENIST HELD FOR FRAUD ATTEMPT

Dr. L. S. Manson Accused of Instigating $75,000 False Damage Suit.

Paralytic Confesses That Physician Induced Him to Sue the New Haven Road.

Dr. Louis Samuel Manson, one of the best known alienists in this city, with offices at 616 Madison Avenue, was arraigned before Judge Swann in General Sessions yesterday on a charge of attempted grand larceny in the first degree and released on $3,000 bail to plead to the indictment to-day.

The specific charge against Dr. Manson is that he conspired and attempted to defraud the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad out of $75,000. The charge against him grew out of the investigation made into the case of Robert J. Jamieson of 58 East Eighty-sixth Street, who is a paralytic and pleaded guilty to perjury before Justice Blanchard in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court last week.

Jamieson formerly worked as a carpenter for the Canadian Pacific, and three years ago he was stationed in Western Canada. While there he became ill suddenly and awoke the next day to discover that he was suffering from paralysis in one of its worst forms. He then came to this city with his sister, Mary Jamieson, and they lived in the East Eighty-sixth Street house. A solicitor for the Equitable Life Assurance Society named Louis Morgan met Jamieson and induced his sister and himself to take out a life insurance policy. Morgan posed as Jamieson, and after passing the examinations took out a life insurance policy for $3,000, made payable to Mary Jamieson. He also worked the same scheme with several accident insurance companies.

Sues for $75,000 Damages.

About this time, according to the complaint, Dr. Manson appeared on the scene and there was a wreck on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad near Middletown, Conn. This was on Aug. 27, 1911. Jamieson then filed notice of a suit for $75,000 damages against the railroad, alleging that his paralytic condition was a result of the wreck. Dr. Manson was called, and Jamieson was also placed under the care of Dr. Benjamin M. Levine at 1,472 Madison Avenue. Dr. Levine reported that his condition was not due to any injury he had received, but could be laid to other causes. Dr. Manson then had Jamieson go to a private ward in St. Mark's Hospital.

Jamieson alleges that Dr. Manson then told him to stay in the room and get into bed whenever an investigator or detective came from either the insurance companies or the railroad. Dr. Pearce Bailey of 452 West Fifty-third Street called upon Jamieson on Oct. 31, 1911, and after a long examination reported that the man's paralysis was of long standing. In order to make sure that Dr. Bailey's report was accurate, the railroad sent Dr. Wyeth Ray also to examine Jamieson. Dr. Manson at first refused to allow Dr. Ray to examine the man, but later permission was granted, and a Wasserman test was made. As a result of this test it was found that Jamieson's paralysis was due to disordered blood rather than to injuries received in the wreck.

Jamieson Accused of Perjury.

After this report had been made a charge of perjury was made against Jamieson, his sister, and Morgan, by the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Miss Jamieson was arrested shortly after, but Morgan and Jamieson had fled from the city a few days before the charge was made. Jamieson was arrested in Canada and brought to this city, but no trace has been found of Morgan as yet.

Both Miss Jamieson and her brother confessed to the fraud, but only Jamieson pleaded guilty. His sister is at present confined in a private hospital, but has made a complete confession and has promised Assistant District Attorney Weller that she will plead guilty. They both say that Dr. Manson induced them to bring the suit against the railroad, and Joseph Levy, a lawyer, of 309 Broadway, and a brother-in-law of Jamieson's, says that he brought suit against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at the request of Dr. Manson.

Immediately upon learning of his indictment Dr. Manson called up his attorney, Harry Unger, and after a short consultation with him telephoned to Mr. Weller and said he would surrender himself in the Criminal Court Building. Shortly after noon he did so, and was formally placed under arrest by Detectives Thomas and Flood of the District Attorney's office. He was bailed out later in the day by Abraham I. Tamor of 1,802 Clinton Avenue, the Bronx.

Dr. Manson lives at 516 West 163d Street and is one of the best-known alienists in the city. He was one of the witnesses called by Capt. Peter Hains, who was convicted in Queens County of the murder of William E. Annis. Dr. Manson has taken a very prominent part in several other criminal trials in the last three years.

YALE FACES DEFICIT.

Budget Calls for $1,550,000, to Meet Which Funds Must Be Increased.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 21.—"In spite of the large gifts which Yale has recently received, the University stands face to face with a deficit unless a considerable increase in its productive funds is secured during the year."

This was the statement given out to-night after the October meeting of the Yale Corporation to-day. The meeting was largely taken up with a discussion of the University budget for this year, which calls for an expenditure of $1,550,000.

Announcement was made that the preliminary university registration showed increases in the entering classes in most departments. This is especially marked in the college and in the law school.

The Corporation approved the appointments of Prof. Henri Bergson, of Paris, Prof. Hugo de Vries, of the University of Amsterdam, and of Prof. Sir William Ramsay, formerly of University College, London, as Woodward lecturers for this year.

NO SUPREME COURT ACTION.

Decision Day Passes Without Expected Opinions in Big Corporation Cases.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—For the first time in many years the Supreme Court to-day let the initial decision day, after the Summer recess, pass without announcing a single opinion. Decisions were expected in the "hard coal case," the "Union Pacific merger case," or the "State rate cases."

The court advanced for early consideration cases involving the constitutionality of the white slave act, the conviction of Charles Heike, former Secretary of the American Sugar Refining Company, charged with sugar customs fraud; the validity of the indictment of United Shoe Machinery officials, and the title to valuable oil lands claimed by transcontinental railroads under the land grant acts. All were set for hearing on Jan. 6.

The appraisal of the estate of Thomas T. Barr, ex-President of the Nassau National Bank, who died on April 22, shows the estate be valued at $442,660.09 after all debts have been paid. The report was filed yesterday with Surrogate Ketcham in Brooklyn by State Transfer Tax Appraiser Wentz. At the time of his death Mr. Barr owned no real estate, the fortune consisting entirely of gilt-edged securities. The estate is divided by the will of Mr. Barr in four equal shares among his children, Thomas M. Barr, William T. Barr, Caroline Dalzell Barr, and Emilie Stuart Howe.

NO HOPE FOR 59TH ST. LINE.

Stockholders Voice Weak Protest Against Foreclosure Sale.

About half a hundred stockholders of the Central Park, North and East River Railroad met together in the offices of Williams, Nicholas & Moran, at 25 Broad Street, yesterday afternoon to decide whether or not there was any object in continuing a fight to save their property from sale at foreclosure. Most of the shareholders appeared discouraged, and a resolution calling upon their committee to levy an assessment not to exceed $1 a share for the purpose of getting an adjournment of the sale was carried by a weak-voiced majority. The sale is scheduled to take place on Oct 31, and it is believed that there will be no opposition to it.

Anson B. Moran, of Williams, Nicholas & Moran; Henry N. Curtis, of George H. Prentiss & Co., and George F. Morgan are acting as a committee for the holders of 1,800,000 shares of the stock, and Mr. Moran acted as chairman of yesterday's meeting. He was energetically opposed to allowing the Central Park line to be sold at foreclosure, saying that the company had been subjected to "brutal injustice," and that he thought it was time to discover whether there was one law for the Central Park and another for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Some of the other stockholders were inclined to think that inasmuch as they had been duped for several years it was hardly worth while making a struggle now.

The Central Park, North and East River owns an electric line across Fifty-ninth Street and a horse car belt line on both sides of Manhattan to South Ferry. The property was mortgaged in 1872 for an issue of $1,200,000 of 7 per cent. thirty-year bonds and leased to the Metropolitan twenty years later. That company agreed to pay off the bonds at maturity, and to pay the stockholders 9 per cent. on their shares. Instead of this, the Metropolitan bought up the bonds in 1902 and used them as collateral back of a new loan, so that they are still a lien against the property. When the Metropolitan went into a receivership five years ago it was discovered that it had not paid franchise and other taxes on the Central Park Road, and the directors took the road back burdened with an additional charge of $800,000. The directors operated it last year at a deficit of nearly $5,000. The Metropolitan sold most of the horses and equipment of the line, and it now owns no power house. The Fifty-ninth street line is being operated at a good profit, but the belt line runs at a loss, which consumes the electric road's surplus. The management had recently tried out storage battery cars, and it is hoped that the stockholders' committee will find a way to make the system pay. It was said yesterday that the New York Railways does not want to have to take over the line for the reason that it would be compelled to grant free transfers.

HEARINGS ON ESTIMATES.

Fire Department and Board of Education Explain Increases.

Hearings on the estimates for the forthcoming year of the Fire Department and the Board of Education were held yesterday in the City Hall. Fire Commissioner Joseph Johnson appeared before Borough President McAneny and Deputy Controller Mathewson to explain why he needed $11,299,157.40 for 1913 instead of the $8,537,865.55 which was sufficient this year.

Of the increase, $2,364,341 was accounted for by salary increases and $1,622,516 by additions to the force. There are thirty-four new fire houses already contracted for, and of the $700,000 raised by the sale of corporate stock for the erection and equipment of these buildings all will be spent in the next seven weeks. The Commissioner declared that his department had made unprecedented progress in the mater of improvements and that he needed 1,005 more firemen, of whom 669 would be needed for the new houses.

When the grant of $266,962 for the Fire Prevention Bureau was taken up Joseph O. Hammitt, secretary of the Citizens' Union, protested on the ground that the money spent on the Bureau at the present time was wasted. He instanced the method pursued by the Bureau to ascertain the age of a building. Instead of looking up the records the city already possessed, he said, the inspectors took the word of the janitor or some tenant and made a rough estimate.

A committee of firemen attended the hearing to ask that the pay of all firemen below the grade of deputy foremen be raised $200 a year. This would make the lowest pay $1,200 instead of $1,000, as at present.

President Mitchel, of the Board of Alderman, presided at a hearing in the reception room of the Mayor's office on the estimates of the Board of Education. President Winthrop, Patrick F. McGowan, John Martin and other commissioners attended and explained the request for $38,316,650 for next year in place of $33,849,819 that sufficed this year.

President Mitchel appeared willing to grant such increases as were proportionate to the rise in the number of pupils. The item of $63,000 for athletic apparatus, however, was reduced materially. Only $4,000 was recommended for the Manhattan schools instead of the $26,000 asked for. The grant of $5,720 for phonographs also was cut out, although it was explained that these machines had been used with good effect in Chicago and other schools, and that many teachers in this city had provided them at their own expense.

PENSIONS TO OLD EMPLOYES.

Alex. Smith Carpet Co. Will Also Give Half Wages to the Injured.

The Alexander Smith Carpet Company of Yonkers has determined upon a plan under which old employes will be retired on pensions and employes who are injured will receive half pay while absent from work, besides receiving medical care free. The retirements will be made at the discretion of the company's officials.

The first retirements were made several weeks ago. Bridget Casey, who had been employed as a spinner for more than forty years, died shortly after being put on the pension list.

During the last two years the carpet company, which employs more than 6,000 men and women, has paid bonuses of $500 and $1,000 to employes who had been in the factory ten to twenty years. More than $150,000 has been paid out in this way. Mrs. William F. Cochran, mother of Alexander Smith Cochran, owner of the mills, left handsome sums to the older employes in her will.

WANT PARK KEPT CLEAR.

Protest Against Proposed Crotona Fire Alarm Station.

Strong protest was made yesterday before the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen by a number of Bronx property owners against the erection in Crotona Park of a fire alarm telegraph building. The Rev. William Milton Hess of Trinity Congregational Church spoke against such a use of the park, and declared it was no wonder the young men and boys of the city "went to the bad" when they were not allowed in many instances good surroundings for their growing needs.

The committee also considered the proposed site for a farm for the Brooklyn Disciplinary Training School for Boys. It had been suggested that a site should be bought at Melville at $325 an acre. Commissioner of Accounts Rice opposed this on the ground that equally good sites could be secured at $50 an acre less. Charles O'Malley of the Controller's office said the appraised value was $350 an acre. President Francis X. Carmody of the Board of Managers of the Training School appeared in support of the site on the ground that the price was reasonable and the place desirable.

Holds Tonopah Company Insolvent.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 21.—Holding that the Tonopah Liberty Mining Company, incorporated in this State for $2,000,000, is insolvent, Chancellor Walker this afternoon ordered the company to show cause here a week from to-morrow why a receiver should not be appointed. Richard A. Taussig and others made the application. The property is in Nevada.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

Even the Manila Cigar Is Growing in Popularity—Big Internal Revenue Increase.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Manila cigars are making headway in the American market. The imports this past year exceed 70,000,000, which is over twice as many as were imported last year, when there was a slump owing to the oversanguine expectations of importers the year before, when the duty was taken off.

The importations in 1910 were in excess of 87,000,000, but the average American smoker did not take to the Philippine tobacco and the shape of the Manila cigar, and last year the importations fell off to 27,000,000. Gradually, however, Americans have come to like the Manila product, and the demand now seems to be increasing.

The latest reports of the Bureau of Insular Affairs shows that cigar manufacture in the Philippines is increasing rapidly. Since 1906, when the output manufactured was 169,000,000, the manufacture has gone up to 254,000,000. All reports from the Philippines indicate increasing prosperity.

The total amount of internal revenue collected in the year ended June 30, 1912, was $10,592,084, as compared with a total collection during the fiscal year 1911 of $9,603,065, an increase of $989,018, equal to 10.3 per cent., of which $400,851 is due to receipts from new series and $528,167 is due to increases in the output from manufactories of taxable articles and to a general improvement in business conditions throughout the islands.

The increase in the amount of the percentage tax paid by merchants and manufacturers indicated an increase of nearly $20,000,000 in the internal trade of the islands, exclusive of liquor and tobacco.

The Philippine Collector of Customs reports an increase of $625,676 in the amount of import duties, due mainly to the larger amount of rice imported, owing to the short crop produced in the islands. The total customs revenue accruing to the Insular Treasury was $8,908,123. In addition, the amount of $230,723 was collected at Jolo and Seamboyanga and paid into the Treasury of Moro Province.

CLOTHING TRADING BETTER.

Call for Overcoats Shows Improvement—Spring Business Good.

A brief touch of Autumn weather improved Fall duplicate business in the clothing market this week, and substantially increased buying was looked for in the next few days. Repeat orders were confined for a good part to staple lines, but with the approach of continued cool weather there were indications that the demand from now on would be well diversified. With favorable climatic conditions it is said that the season as a whole will probably show better results than those of last year, despite the comparatively light initial business booked.

The present demand for suits is not any too great, but the call for overcoats has shown appreciable improvement of late. In this chinchillas have played a good part. Spring business is coming in well, though hindered somewhat by the retarded movement of Fall lines in retail circles.

While, barring staple worsteds, it is possible to obtain practically all kinds of heavyweight stock goods at concessions, the men's wear market continues in a generally strong position. Heavy overcoatings are still being bought in good quantity, and Spring merchandise is well taken care of.

TEXTILE WORKERS GROWING.

Membership Increases by 4,000 and 51 New Locals Are Formed in Year.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—The convention of the United Textile Workers, American Federation of Labor, began here to-day, and to-night Mrs. Sara A. Conboy of Boston, Miss Josephine Gifford of Willimantic, Conn.; Miss Cora Adams of Mayfield, Penn., and Miss May Langan of Scranton, Penn., were tendered a complimentary reception and dinner by the Boston Women's Trade Union League.

Secretary Hibbert reported that fifty-one locals have been formed during the past twelve months; that the total increase in membership has been slightly more than 4,000; that $25,000 was paid in strike benefits during the term, and that the death benefits paid aggregated $1,200. The cotton, woolen, silk, flax, and jute branches of the industry are all strongly represented in the union, he stated.

President Golden in his address made no direct reference to the situation in Lawrence, but promised a special report on that subject to-morrow. He resented the activities of the weavers and the loom fixers' unions, saying:

"I would be derelict in my duty did I not refer to the attempts made from time to time to block the efforts of our organizers by agents of the so-called National Cloth Weavers' Union and the National Loom Fixers' Union, both renegade organizations. Agents of these have left no stone unturned in their efforts to prevent our organizers from carrying on their work."

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Giant Bottles of Wine Pay as Many Small Ones—Twine Duty Cut.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday threw out a protest by Z. L. White & Co. against the exaction of the same duty on two cases of champagne, one containing one double magnum and the other two double magnums, as though the packages contained not less than one dozen bottles or jugs. The Government contended that a provision in Paragraph 307 of the act of 1909 rendered it mandatory to levy duty on each package as if it actually contained twelve bottles.

The importers alleged that the paragraph referred only to still wines. Judge Somerville found that the paragraph covered both still and sparkling wines.

The board sustained the Waterbury Company on hemp twine, taxed at 10 cents a pound under Paragraph 340 of the present law, which the concern asked to be entered at 2 cents a pound as cordage made of hemp, tarred or untarred. Judge Cooper decided the case.

Judge Sharretts declined to grant a rate of 45 per cent. on hatpins with colored-glass tops imported by the Hewlet-Robin Company and Phong, Fat & Co., and affirmed the Collector's assessment of 60 per cent. under the Tariff act of 1897.

TOPICS IN BUSINESS CIRCLES.

When Is a Door Not a Door?

That riddle of our childhood, "When is a door not a door?" is now being asked in wholesale clothing circles in a revised and less humorous way. In fact, in its new dress, it has lost a great deal of whatever humor it may have originally possessed. "When is an order not an order?" they ask now. And the answer is, "When it is canceled." It can be seen that there is little humor to the new version; at least, from a wholesaler's point of view. With the many (unfortunately) retailers who in this way are said to dodge their business obligations for reasons legitimate or otherwise, it may strike a humorous chord. Not long ago a local wholesaler of considerable prominence told that it was nothing for a member of this trade to find that his cancellations and returns mounted up together to approximately 25 per cent. of his gross business. To the trade generally the ultimate result is already food for serious thought. The evil is increasing all the time. Little or no unified action is being taken. "When will Gulliver awake?" he asked.

"Swapping Merchandise."

It was nothing strange or amiss in the time that poets call the days of yore to hear of a horse being "swapped," sometimes with a little "to boot." In these more modern times the same condition prevails under another guise. Now pianos, automobiles, vacuum cleaners and what not may be traded in for something new with no questions asked. But who would not, if he shared the experience of a local wholesaler of cotton dress fabrics and received a letter somewhat like the following, feel that matters were being carried a little too far.

> Gentlemen:
> We recently wrote the A— company regarding their No. 1,737 zephyr, and found that they had none in stock. They, too, told us, however, that you did. Now, will you exchange six pieces of these goods for some fancy voiles we bought from you some time ago and have not been able to dispose of? In view of our previous business relations we feel that it is all right to ask you to do this. Please answer by return mail.

Was it done?

EXPECT SHOE TRADE RUSH.

Stocks in Nearby Retailers' Hands Believed to be Low.

While the spot demand in the local shoe market was reported to have shown some improvement in the week just passed, it was not up to the usual mark for this time of the year. This fact was made all the more noticeable by the excellent business done earlier in the Fall and the improved business turned in from the road for Spring. The discount question keeps many buyers inactive at this time of the month, but a continued run of seasonable weather, in the opinion of some of the prominent men in the trade, will start a general rush before the month is over. Stocks in the hands of retailers in the nearby territories are believed to be low, and a brisk consuming demand will stimulate business in this market regardless.

A number of hide prices were advanced in the Middle West during the week, and this market was firmer in sympathy. While leather prices did not show many advances, there were few, if any, signs of weakness. Shoe, belting, bag and upholstery leathers were generally firmly held.

SAYS SECRET FUND PAID FOR DYNAMITE

Government Offers Testimony to Show That Payments to McNamara Were Disguised.

AMOUNT SAID TO BE $20,000

Hagerty Called to Testify Regarding Use of Acid to Destroy Property.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 21.—Reading from the financial account books of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers for the period when John J. McNamara, the Secretary-Treasurer, was conducting a "campaign of explosions" about the country, Miss Mary C. Dye, former bookkeeper for McNamara, testified to-day that one record of money expended was kept for the union's officials and Executive Board members, while a different record was kept for the public and for members of the union generally.

A regular system of juggling the accounts, the Government charges, was maintained to conceal the payments for the expenses of dynamiting.

Miss Dye's testimony was that a dual system of recording expenditures was in force prior to 1909, or until the Executive Board decided to allow McNamara $1,000 a month without requiring any accounting, which continued until after The Los Angeles Times Building was blown up. It was out of this $1,000 a month, the Government charges, that McNamara paid Ortie E. McManigal and James B. McNamara for the Pacific Coast explosion and for thirty-five others.

The defendants named by witnesses as having been members of the Executive Board, who were cognizant of the use to which the money was put, were Frank M. Ryan, President of the union; John T. Butler of Buffalo, First Vice President; Eugene A. Clancy of San Francisco, Henry W. Legleitner of Denver, Frank C. Webb of New York, Michael J. Young of Boston, and Herbert S. Hockin, the present Secretary. They are among the forty-five men now on trial charged with aiding and abetting the illegal transportation of explosives.

Miss Dye testified that in books available to the officials the full amounts paid to McNamara, Hockin, Webb, and others were given, but that in the records published in the union magazine less than half the amounts were charged to the individuals, while the difference was charged to "emergency fund by order of the Executive Board." The witness said that for the fiscal year ending in 1909 $3,698 was paid to Webb, while $1,572 was recorded in McNamara's report to the union; $4,970 was paid to Hockin, while $2,043 was reported to the union, and $2,537 was paid to J. J. McNamara, while $1,987 was reported to the union as having been paid to him—the difference in each case having been charged to the emergency fund.

Altogether the Government alleges that $20,000 was represented in differences and was used for dynamiting purposes.

The witness said that prior to the monthly allowances to McNamara, funds were charged up as donations to various unions or as advances to various officials, without any later showing as to the disposition of the money.

A dozen foremen of structural iron and steel erection jobs in connection with which explosions occurred may be called to testify to-morrow. They are to be questioned about the details of explosions which McManigal confessed that he caused.

George Hagerty, Phillipsburg, N. J., an ironworker, identified many letters between himself and J. J. McNamara. In one of the letters a reference to "putting the bridge at Phillipsburg into the river," the Government charges, was made by Hagerty as a result of a labor dispute. Hagerty in 1906 was business agent of a local union at Easton, Penn. The prosecution asserts that acid was employed to destroy property before dynamite was used, and the testimony of Hagerty, who is not a defendant, was taken as showing an earlier motive for illegal inter-State shipment of explosives.

Herman S. Schwab, assistant cashier of a bank at Peoria, Ill., identified the signature of Edward Smythe on letters written in 1910, when two explosions occurred in Peoria, and when one explosion occurred in East Peoria. Smythe was an official of the local ironworkers' union. The letters were directed to J. J. McNamara as Secretary of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. Ortie E. McManigal confessed that he blew up the Peoria jobs after Smythe pointed them out.

SUES FOR $20,000 BOND.

Casualty Company Seeks to Recover for ex-Manager's Shortage.

A suit arising out of the bonding of a former manager of the home office of the Casualty Company of America by the National Surety Company was filed yesterday in the Supreme Court. It is set forth in the papers that William A. Rogers left a shortage of $20,000 when he suddenly gave up the managership of the Casualty Company last May and that the National Surety Company had bonded him on his employment. The action was brought to recover the $20,000 from it.

On June 4, it is alleged, the Casualty Company sent to the National Surety Company a statement and proof of its loss. From that time to the present, it is complained, the National Surety Company has sought in every way to delay the payment on the bond and to seek excuses for not meeting its alleged obligation.

It was learned yesterday from James Connelly, the present home manager, that no criminal charges had been pressed against Rogers.

"He is now away," said Mr. Connelly, "Where I do not know. As I understand it, Mr. Rogers's friends say that no betting or gambling caused the shortage. It is contended for Rogers in addition that enough premiums and debts due the firm were out to make up the $20,000 deficit."

CHAMBERS ESTATE $917,222.

Accounting Shows an Income of $127,923 from Property.

The principal item in the estate of Josephine B. Chambers, according to the accounting of the Equitable Trust Company, which will be presented to Surrogate Cohalan for approval to-day, was a holding of 1,208 shares of the Singer Manufacturing Company, valued at $579,840. The total amount of the estate was $789,298.60, which has grown by the receipt of $127,923.89 income during the accounting period to $917,222.54.

The next largest item in the estate was a one-third interest in the estate of Robert Chambers, estimated at $49,665. The large estate was remarkable for the small amount of jewelry it contained. This was appraised at $1,633. For the safe keeping of this jewelry the trust company bought a strong box, for which it paid, the accounting shows, but $1.90.

The estate paid an inheritance tax of $25,091 to State Controller Sohmer.

Halt Higher Freight on Footwear.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Freight charges on boots and shoes from Boston, Mass., to Atlanta, Ga., and other destinations in the South, which showed an increase over existing rates of about 10 per cent., were suspended to-day by the Inter-State Commerce Commission until April 29, pending an investigation.

SHOE COMPANY ATTACKED.

Two Reports Submitted to the Canadian Government.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Oct. 21.—The Government to-day received the report of the commission which has been investigating charges that the United Shoe Machinery Company of Canada, an offshoot of the United Shoe Machinery Company having headquarters in Boston, was a combine and was acting in restraint of trade in Canada. The fact that a minority finding was also made led to a report that the majority had found against the company. The report will be made public later in the week.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—Officials of the United Shoe Machinery Company refuse to comment on reports of action in Canada adverse to their company. They say that if a decision has been rendered they do not know its purport.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

American pianos meet strenuous competition in all over-sea markets from European—particularly German—manufacturers, who make a large number of low-priced pianos especially for the export trade. They have developed their markets in South American countries to such an extent that in most cases their instruments far outnumber those of any other nationality.

According to a telegram from Shanghai received in Germany, C. D. Jameson has submitted a scheme to the Chinese Government in Peking for extensive river dikes and dam works for the Provinces of Kiangsu and Anhui, which have in recent years suffered constantly from floods. The scheme would take six years to carry out, and would cost some $17,000,000. Mr. Jameson is directing the relief works in the region named.

Recent Japanese imports of pig iron from India (the new Tata iron furnaces) have been very large, and to a certain extent have driven the English article from the market. The Mitsui Bussan Kaisha has been a large buyer, both for its own account and also for the Government foundry at Wakamatsu. Although the quality of the Indian iron is very much inferior to that of the English, or even of the Chinese formerly imported from the Tayeb Ping concern, importers have the advantage of 10s ($2.43) a ton freightage.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Chantilly, fine Calais shadow effects, and various related types of light laces are meeting widespread approval among the better-class retailers and manufacturers. This is particularly true of narrow lace flouncings, which are used to form flounced skirts and tunic draperies in evening gowns.

While the activity in the suiting end of the dress goods market is not all that could be asked just now, some houses report the receipt of a goodly number of orders.

The demand for sweater coats continues strong, especially for the newer Norfolk and blazer types.

While in the opinion of a prominent knit goods man the boom talk heard in that market springs largely from overoptimistic press reports, he says that an improved condition cannot be denied. Buyers are taking goods more liberally than has been the case for the last two or three years, but they are still watching carefully the direction every dollar takes.

PERMITS FOR PISTOLS MAY LEAD TO PRISON

Lawyer Discovers Magistrates Have No Authority to Allow Any One to Go Armed.

THE CITY'S COUNSEL AGREES

Only Police Commissioner Can Issue Permits—Those with Other Permits Liable to Punishment.

One of the best-known lawyers in this city said yesterday that City Magistrates had no power to issue permits to carry firearms, and that any person with such a weapon in his possession was liable to punishment under the Sullivan law unless he had a permit to carry it from the Police Commissioner. Corporation Counsel Watson said:

"I looked into the matter about a year ago and came to the same conclusion at that time."

It was said yesterday that thousands of persons in this city were carrying pistols under authority from City Magistrates. Any one of them, it was said, could be arrested and imprisoned just as if he had no permit at all. The lawyer who gave the opinion said to a reporter of THE TIMES:

"The shooting of Col. Roosevelt by Schrank has forcibly brought home to all of us the danger of granting to all kinds of persons permits to carry dangerous weapons. A great many permits have been issued by the City Magistrates who have no legal right to do so.

"Firearms in the possession of any person who has no permit from the Police Commissioner is a serious offense. My opinion on the subject is good law, and it ought to be published in order to restrain the City Magistrates from continuing an illegal practice, and also to safeguard those persons who are illegally carrying firearms."

The carefully prepared opinion of this lawyer, which was concurred in by Corporation Counsel Watson, says:

Section 1897 of the Penal law, as amended by Chapter 195 of the laws of 1911, (commonly called the Sullivan law,) makes it a misdemeanor for any person over the age of sixteen years to have in his possession a firearm of a size which may be concealed upon the person, without a written license therefor, issued by a Police Magistrate, a Justice of the Peace, or in such manner as may be prescribed by local ordinance. The New York City Charter, however, requires that a permit to carry a pistol shall be issued by the Police Commissioner, fixes the fee at $2.50 for each permit, and provides that the proceeds thereof shall be paid into the Police Pension Fund, (Section 353, subd. 7.)

It would seem that the provision of the Penal law referred to with reference to the issuance of a pistol-carrying license does not repeal by implication the express provision of the New York City Charter requiring the issuance of such licenses or permits by the Police Commissioner. The general rule is that a statute which is applicable to a particular locality is not repealed by implication by a later statute in general terms, unless the intention of the Legislature to repeal or alter the local law is manifest.

It will be seen that the Penal law provision relates primarily to the offense of carrying concealed weapons, unless licensed, while the purpose of the Charter provision, without affecting the substantive offense, is to secure to the Police Pension Fund a source of revenue, by prescribing a license fee, to be collected for all such permits, by the Police Commissioner. In this way the matter becomes one of mere local regulation and administration, involving no repugnance to the purpose of the Penal law, which seeks to prescribe a uniform code of crime and punishment throughout the State. Not only, it may be said, does the Penal law not expressly repeal the section of the Charter above referred to, but in the general repealing clause of the Penal law, (Section 2501,) the repealing effect of the statute is limited to acts and parts of acts inconsistent with its provisions, "so far as they impose no punishment for crime."

But even though there were no Charter provision, the proper view would still be that all pistol-carrying permits must be issued by the Police Commissioner, for so it is provided by local ordinance, (New York Code of Ordinances, Section 432.) We have seen that the general provisions of the penal law, as recently amended, contemplate the issuance of pistol permits by Police Magistrates, Justices of the Peace, or in such manner as may be prescribed by ordinance. This would not confer concurrent authority upon Police Magistrates and upon any other officials who might be given power by ordinance, if the ordinance should provide the exclusive local authority for the issuance of such permits.

In the City of New York, as already stated, this power has been vested exclusively in the Police Commissioner, (Section 432.) It is true that a late ordinance amendment purports to increase the fee from $2.50 to $10 per permit. It would seem, therefore, that the Charter provision fixing the fee at $2.50 must control, and that the Police Commissioner may only charge $2.50, and not $10, for such permits. But in no event may such a permit in the City of New York be issued by other than the Police Commissioner. The City Magistrates are without jurisdiction.

It was suggested by this lawyer that, as it would probably take a court opinion to convince the City Magistrates that they had no right to issue permits to carry firearms, a test case should be brought at once in order to safeguard those persons who are illegally carrying weapons with the idea that they have the right to do so.

WILE ON EDUCATION BOARD.

School Children's Health to be New Member's Chief Care.

Dr. Ira S. Wile of 230 West Ninety-seventh Street was appointed by Mayor Gaynor a member of the Board of Education yesterday to succeed Richard B. Aldcrofft, who resigned. In doing so the Mayor laid on the new member the responsibility of looking after the health of the school pupils, and suggested that it might be as well to set up a special committee on the subject. Here is his letter:

City of New York,
Office of the Mayor.
Oct. 21, 1912.

Dear Dr. Wile—I am appointing you a member of the Board of Education. My object in doing so is to have you enter systematically into the work of examining into the health of the children in the public schools and taking scientific means of prevention and cure. Among other things the eyes, ears, and teeth of the children should be carefully looked into. It is almost impossible to have a healthy body without good teeth. But I shall not go into particulars. Your past experience in dealing with the defects and diseases of children will enable you to think of everything that should be done. I should think it would be well if there were a standing committee for this purpose in the Board of Education, but I submit that to better judgments. Sincerely yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

Dr. Ira S. Wile, 230 West Ninety-seventh Street, New York City.

Dr. Wile was born in 1877 and is a graduate of the University of Rochester and of the Medical Faculty of the University of Pennsylvana. He is an editor of the Medical Review of Reviews, and of the Department of Surgical Sociology in the American Journal of Surgery. He has taken an active interest in sociological work, being a member of the New York School Lunch Committee, New York Milk Committee, New York Food Committee and Food Committee of the National Consumers' League. He is Chairman of the Committee on Curriculum of the Public Education Association and belongs to a large number of medical societies. He is physician to the Children's Department of the Vanderbilt Clinic and an attending physician to the Sanitarium for Hebrew Children. He has contributed largely to medical literature.

Mr. Aldcrofft, whom Dr. Wile succeeds, is a lawyer at 165 Broadway and became a member of the board on Dec. 24, 1903.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 21.—The western depression has resolved itself into a narrow trough, extending from Texas to Lake Superior, and there were showers and thunderstorms over the districts immediately to the westward of this area, and scattered rains and snows in Colorado. Rains also continued in the South Atlantic States, and have again set in on the North Pacific Coast, where there has been another decided fall in pressure.

It is generally warmer east of the Mississippi River and in the West Gulf States, with quite high temperatures over the interior districts, while in the West temperatures are low, but with a rising tendency west of the Rocky Mountains.

There will be scattered rains Tuesday in the lake region, the Ohio Valley, and the South, extending Tuesday night or Wednesday into New England and the Middle Atlantic States, and continuing in the South Atlantic States.

Over the remainder of the country the weather will be fair generally Tuesday. It will be warmer Tuesday in the Atlantic States and colder in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys and the lake region. It will be warmer Tuesday in the Northwest, and warmer Wednesday between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains.

Winds along the New England Coast will be light to moderate variable, becoming southeast and south; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate southeast and south; South Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast.

Steamships departing Tuesday for European ports will have moderate, variable winds, with fair weather, to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND WEDNESDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Tuesday; warmer in east and south portion. Wednesday rain and colder; moderate southeast to south winds, becoming northwest Wednesday.

The fire was confined to the fur establishment of M. H. Moore, which adjoins the former firm on the second floor of the building.

EDUCATION NOTES.

At the meeting of the Board of Education to-morrow it is possible that seven elementary school teachers and one high school teacher will be retired.

The special committee which for some time has had under investigation the methods employed by the Board of Examiners with regard to granting, or withholding, "superior merit" and other matters, will hold a meeting on Oct. 31. This will be the first meeting it has held in several months. It is expected that its report will soon be made to the Board of Education.

The Committee on Care of Buildings has granted permission to the Social Centre to allow the Democratic and Republican Parties to use Public School 63, Third Street, east of First Avenue, for political meetings on Oct. 24 and 28. Permission has also been given to the Social Centre to allow the Socialists to hold a political meeting there. The Socialists, by the way, feel aggrieved because they were not permitted to use this school recently, and have alleged unfair discrimination on the part of the Committee on Care of Buildings. The refusal, however, was due to a misunderstanding. Public School 63 was not one of the schools named by the committee for the use of political meetings. The committee, it was said yesterday, wishes to be impartial in its treatment of all the political parties.

City Superintendent Maxwell will submit to the Board of Education at its meeting to-morrow abstracts of the reports of Principals for September, 1912.

A leave of absence, from Sept. 9, 1912, to Feb. 1, 1913, has been requested for May E. Graffan, a teacher in Public School 36, Castle Hill, Unionport.

The Board of Superintendents has asked permission to withdraw the transfer of Elementary School Principals Herman Platt, James B. T. Demarest, and Frederick A. Berghane.

The Board of Superintendents has recommended the transfer of Elma Downing, model teacher, from the Jamaica Training School to the Brooklyn Training School. It has nominated Marie E. Wagner as a model teacher in the latter school.

Local School Board of District No. 36 has requested that the teachers in Public School 85, Evergreen Avenue and Eldert Street, Brooklyn, be permitted to erect a stained glass window in the school building in memory of the late Miss Alice H. Story.

The Board of Retirement has recommended the retirement of Alice B. Dudek, a teacher in De Witt Clinton High School.

The Parents' Association of Public School 177, Market and Monroe Streets, has asked permission to occupy the school yard on the afternoon of Oct. 29 for a fair, an admission fee to be charged and the proceeds to be devoted to the benefit of the school.

As the commission has experienced considerable difficulty in securing eligibles for this position, qualified persons are urged to enter this examination. Competitors will be examined in the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated:

Practical questions (covering installation, repair, and operation of boilers and steam engines and pumps)	40
Experience in handling steam engines and boilers and pumps	20
Experience and qualifications as plumber.	40

Applicants must have had experience as plumbers and must have reached their twentieth but not their fiftieth birthday on the date of the examination. They are required to be in good health, must execute their applications in their own handwriting, and be able to speak the English language.

Another examination, also to-morrow, will be to fill five vacancies in the position of dentist at $1,500 a year each in the Indian Service at Large, and vacancies as they may occur requiring similar qualifications. The Office of Indian Affairs states that in addition to the salary mentioned the incumbents in these positions will be allowed actual and necessary traveling expenses, subsistence, and incidentals while on duty in the field. These employes will have no fixed place of abode, but will be required to travel from school to school as the needs of the service require. Competitors will be examined in the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated:

Letter writing (the subject matter on a topic relative to the practice of dentistry)	5
Anatomy and physiology (general questions on these branches, also with special reference to the teeth, mouth, and head)	10
Chemistry, materia medica, and therapeutics (the preparations, properties, and reactions of chemicals, crude drugs, and their preparations, their action and application, with those of other therapeutic agencies)	15

Operative and prosthetic dentistry (the detailed technics of general and special operative and laboratory work)	25

Orthodontia (local and constitutional irregularities in growth and development of the teeth, and their correction)	15

Graduation from a regularly incorporated dental college and at least two years' experience in the practice of dentistry subsequent to graduation from such college is a prerequisite for consideration for this position. Applicants must be in good health and must have reached their twenty-fifth but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination.

STIRS UP MINISTERS FOR WASTING TIME

'PLAY AT MAKING CHRISTIANS'

This, He Declares, Is What Work Amounts To—Calls Church Officials Godless and Assails Newspapers.

The Rev. De Mark A. Matthews of Seattle, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, addressed the Monday meeting of the ministers of that denomination in the Presbyterian Building in Fifth Avenue, yesterday and stirred up plenty of comment and incidentally some resentment. A few of the remarks he made which his hearers noted particularly follow:

"The great curse resting on Presbyterian ministers to-day is that of time waste. Ministers seem to have no sense of responsibility for the value of their own time.

"There are more Presbyterian churches in America standing still, marking time, going to pieces because of dead elderships in them, than from any other cause.

"The Presbyterian Church is merely playing at the task of making America Christian. It is merely toying with it's part of the responsibility.

"The church ought to be organized as is the public school, with lower and higher grades.

"Any man who will rely upon the daily newspapers for trustworthy information as to public affairs, and especially public morals, ought to be examined by a commission in lunacy."

Moderator Matthews, in a larger sense than any of his predecessors, is a general overseer of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, with its 1,400,000 members and many more adherents. Witnin the last few years the general administrative work of this church has extended. The Moderator is now on his rounds, conferring with the officers of the Presbyterian churches in New York, rounding up conditions, and seeing how his co-religionists in these parts can be made to do better work.

Dr. Matthews is pastor of a Seattle church, larger in membership than any other in the Presbyterian body in the world. It is wonderfully organized for work, and was built up from almost nothing at all by its present pastor. So his description of his own remarkable work interested New York ministers greatly.

"The minister should select his own elders," he declared, "and discharge them if they prove poor selections, just as a President selects and dispenses with members of his Cabinet. Young men ought to be used more than they are.

"The pulpit is the great oracle for disseminating truth. It is not half enough used. Ministers don't stand together. They are afraid of their own shadows, many of them. You can't convert the world by shouting platitudes at it. It is the minister's business to go out and get the facts, and then to thunder them forth from his pulpit, hitting whom they will."

Dr. Matthews paid his respects to the Trustees of Presbyterian Churches and charged most of them with being godless. He said many church officials were studying almost everything except the Bible, and interested in pretty much everything except religion.

He said he worked sixteen to eighteen hours every day, 365 days in the year, and he expected his assistant ministers to work as he did. If they didn't they knew what to expect. He said his session made up the budgets, and he "hired and fired" his help. Cold shivers went over the Monday ministers' meeting when this remark came out.

The Moderator is attending business meetings of boards, and speaking before synods. He will speak at Princeton University while in the East.

QUICK TRIAL FOR McKENNA.

No Delay in Getting a Jury for Man Charged with Killing Little Girl.

Joseph J. McKenna of 1,077 Ogden Avenue, the Bronx, was put on trial before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions yesterday charged with murdering Sigrid Eckstrom, the six-year-old girl who was found strangled in the cellar of the tenement in which she lived on June 6 of this year.

A jury was selected to try McKenna in one hour and forty minutes and four witnesses were heard before court adjourned for the day. Just before Coroners' Physician John Riegelman, the first witness, was called, Emanuel Klem, counsel for the defendant, asked that the case be declared a mistrial because the Bronx was made a separate county by the Legislature on April 19. Assistant District Attorney Nott opposed the motion, saying that the bill would not be passed upon by the voters until the coming election. Judge Rosalsky held that under no circumstances could the Bronx be considered a separate county until next January.

Albert Rauch, the janitor of 1,077 Ogden Avenue, the house in which the murdered girl lived, told of discovering her body. He said that he had gone to the cellar to see if everything was in good order and had found the body wedged between the wall and the furnace.

Dr. Joseph Schlacht of 1,046 Ogden Avenue testified that he had reached the conclusion that death was due to strangulation. During his testimony the defendant seemed very restless and mopped his forehead with his handkerchief several times. Dr. Shaffer of Fordham Hospital corroborated Dr. Schlacht's testimony. The case was then adjourned until to-day.

TESTIFIES AGAINST MOTHER.

Young Woman Principal Witness in Father's Separation Suit.

The principal witness for the plaintiff in the separation suit of Willet B. Baker against his wife, Mrs. Bridget Baker, which came to trial yesterday in the Supreme Court before Justice Gavegan, was the defendant's daughter, a young married woman, Mrs. Isabel Korbel.

Baker, who is the armorer of the Seventy-first Regiment, lives with his daughter and his son-in-law at 339 West 138th Street. He is seeking separation from his wife on the ground of general neglect and intoxication. In support of his contention. Mrs. Korbel, who is only 21 years old, testified yesterday regarding the alleged misdeeds of her mother. According to her, she was compelled, from the time she was eight years old, to care for the house, furnish the meals and prepare them. In fifteen years, Mrs. Korbel declared, her mother provided her with only four garments. The rest of her clothes, she told the court yesterday, were bought with her own earnings.

Mrs. Korbel said that her mother had a habit of going out evenings and returning as late as 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning. When her husband demanded the reason, she refused to answer, her daughter said, but asserted her independence and right to do what she desired.

M. J. Walsh, attorney for Mrs. Baker, explained that in defense of these charges he would attempt to prove that a conspiracy existed between the daughter and the father to rid themselves of Mrs. Baker. The case will be continued to-day.

Mrs. Russell Left $30,244 Here.

The lawyers for the estate of Mrs. Louisa Anna Russell, wife of the late Samuel Hammond Russell, of Boston, Mass., filed a belated appraisal in the Surrogates' Court yesterday, which showed that her New York property, valued at $30,244, was to be divided between her two daughters, Lady Edith Russell Playfair, wife of Sir Lyon Playfair, K. C. B., of London, and Mrs. Alice Fitzgerald of Inglefield, England. Mrs. Russell lived in Boston and her property outside of this State was not accounted for in the report filed here.

DID NOT REGISTER BABY.

Hotel Clerk Finds It Crying and Gives a Warning to Parents.

When a man registered at the Breslin Saturday night "H. Waldeman and wife, Philadelphia," the room clerk did not notice that the party contained another, so that when the elevator boy reported at 10.30 that a baby was crying on one of the upper floors of the hotel there was some difficulty in finding where it was.

The elevator boy said he heard it on the top floor, and he heard it as he went down until he reached the bottom, and there, until he opened the elevator door, it sounded just as loud as anywhere. So Mahoney, the bellboy captain, went up with him to locate the sound. The room clerk, meanwhile, looked over the register, and could not find any baby registered on it. After gliding up and down, gradually eliminating the floors above and below, the elevator stopped at the eighth floor, and Mahoney's ears finally landed him before the door of No. 839.

He had to go downstairs to get the master key, and then it was found that 839 was the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Waldeman. The Captain took the key up and opened the door, and inside he naturally found a baby. He took it downstairs, and as Miss Murphy, who presides over the newsstand, was the only woman about then, handed it to her. Miss Murphy's efforts were unavailing, and the child bawled on. Ryan, the room clerk, took it, but the baby gave one look at him, and redoubled its efforts.

Knowing C. L. Gray of St. Louis, was a family man, the clerk sent the baby over to him to soothe, but Mr. Gray could not accomplish anything. Just then four young women, who belonged to the group of telephone supervisors that were here attending a conference, entered the hotel, and the baby was sent over to them. They had just succeeded in changing its cries into laughter and cooing, when Mr. and Mrs. Waldeman entered the hotel and claimed their child.

"People," said the ruminating room clerk, "ought always to register a baby on the hotel book when they enter. Here there would be no charge, and if parents want to go out in the evening, we are glad to provide a nurse. Of course, it is the law that everybody stopping in a hotel shall be registered, and then, besides, think what a risk parents run in case of any sort of real danger if nobody knows they have left an infant in their room."

KNOX NOT QUITTING.

Denies Inspiring Report That He Will Do So on Taft's Term Ending.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Secretary of State Knox, who, with Mrs. Knox, reached Washington to-day from his mission to Japan to attend the funeral of the late Emperor, declined to be interviewed on his Japanese experiences or on any questions coming within his province. He took occasion, however, to say this about the statement printed in a Pittsburgh newspaper that he would retire from the Cabinet on March 4 next, whether President Taft was re-elected or not:

"I neither authorized nor knew of any such statement being contemplated by any one, and am not at present addressing my mind to that subject."

It has been the gossip in Washington for nearly a year that Mr. Knox was tired of public life and would end his political career with the expiration of President Taft's term. This gossip has been modified recently on account of the possibility that Mr. Knox might become Acting President of the United States in the event of the failure of the Electoral College or the House and Senate to elect a President and Vice President. Under the Federal act of Presidential succession the Secretary of State, in such a contingency, would become Acting President until a new election could be held and the successful candidates installed in office, and it was believed that Mr. Knox would feel in duty bound to assume the responsibility.

Mr. Knox will leave Washington tomorrow morning for New York, and on Wednesday will proceed to Beverly, where he will join President Taft on a motor trip to Portsmouth, N. H. He admitted that he would talk to the President about politics.

It is understood that Mr. Knox will make one, probably several, political speeches before the end of the campaign. There has been an insistent demand by Buckeye Republicans for his presence in Ohio, and the Pennsylvania Republican leaders expect him to speak in that State.

WENT DOWN WITH HIS SHIP.

DETROIT, Oct., 21.—One man lost his life, and ten other members of the crew of the Sand Steamer Pine Lake narrowly escaped death to-day when their vessel went to the bottom in less than a minute after a collision with the steamer Fleetwood off Peche Island in the Detroit river.

The man who lost his life was Aleck Kalvey, whose home was near London, Ont. It is thought he was trapped in the wreckage of the pilot house. He was at the wheel at the time of the collision.

J. H. Ferguson, of Harbor Beach, captain of the Pine Lake, seeing that a collision was unavoidable cried to his men to jump. The crew, however, with the exception of Kalvey, remained on top of the cabin which did not sink below water for several minutes. The captain jumped into the river and was rescued half an hour later. He said that the collision was the result of "crossed signals."

The Pine Lake was owned by C. H. Little & Co., of Detroit. The Fleetwood is owned by the Tonawanda Iron & Steel Co., of North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Taft's Niece with Woman Workers.

Mrs. Nelson Henry, Chairman of the Woman's Advisory Board of the National Republican Committee, with headquarters at the Waldorf, has added to its members Miss Catherine Anderson of Cincinnati, a niece of President Taft, and Mrs. Eckstein, sister of William Barnes, Jr. Neither of the women have taken active part in a politcal campaign before. Miss Anderson, on her way from Boston to New York yesterday, went through the train with Republican literature, distributing it and leaving it in the seats.

BERKSHIRE BURNS; PASSENGERS SAFE

Taken from Ill-Fated Steamer to Shore Yesterday Afternoon —Seminole Helped.

PERILOUS TRIP IN HIGH SEA

Explosion Decided Captain to Risk It —Pouring Water Into Blazing Hold of Liner.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The fire on the steamer Berkshire, ablaze in Lookout Cove, N. C., since Sunday morning, was apparently under control late to-night, according to a dispatch to the revenue cutter service. The commander of the Seminole reported that he was running short of coal, but would be able to keep all fire streams going for some time longer. Arrangements are being made to get coal to the cutter early to-morrow.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 21.—It was deemed expedient this afternoon to remove all the Berkshire's passengers to the Seminole. The immediate cause for the hasty removal was an explosion a little before noon.

The fire immediately began to gain on the fighters, and Capt. Carden asked for the transfer, fearing further explosions and the complete wrecking of the Berkshire.

A heavy rain and high sea have prevailed throughout the day. The greatest difficulties were experienced in transferring the twenty-one passengers to the Seminole, and it would have been almost impossible without loss of life but for the assistance of the life savers with their surfboats.

The Seminole is standing by, almost alongside the Berkshire, to-night. Besides the pumps of the Berkshire, those of the revenue cutter are pouring five streams into the seething hold.

Late this afternoon the sea subsided somewhat and the Berkshire's passengers were landed on the beach, with the aid of the life savers.

The cargo of the Berkshire is mainly composed of compressed cotton. Once a fire gets a good foothold in such a cargo, it is difficult to subdue it without clearing the hold. This was possible only in part, owing to the headway the fire had gained.

BEAUFORT, N. C., Oct. 21.—Late tonight the fire on the steamship Berkshire was still uncontrolled, and the revenue cutter Seminole was running short of coal. As it was impossible to get coal to the cutter before to-morrow or the next day, the result will be serious unless additional assistance arrives soon.

The Berkshire is anchored within a few hundred yards of shore in Lookout Cove, and if she should sink she would be in about three and a half fathoms of water, and could probably be raised easily.

ATTACKED ON WALKING TOUR.

Six Men, Charged with Assault Upon Mrs. Mullane, Now in Jail.

IRONTON, Mo., Oct. 21.—Six of fourteen young men alleged to have been implicated in an attack on Mrs. Lillian Mullane of Richmond, Va., the 19-year-old bride, near Des Arc, on Saturday, are in jail here. Five of them have been identified by Mrs. Mullane.

Mrs. Mullane, who is being cared for by the women of Annapolis, near here, to-day had so far recovered as to expect to be able to testify against the youths at their preliminary hearing here on Wednesday.

"There have been no threats of lynching," declared Sheriff John Marshall today.

The prisoners, who have been identified are Charles Tarris, Charles Dunn, Elmer Lloyd, Ira Robinson, and Charles Middleton. Arthur Warncke, the sixth man to be arrested, has not been identified by Mrs. Mullane.

With her husband, T. H. Mullane, who was accompanying her on a walking tour, Mrs. Mullane was followed by the men, whose attention was attracted when the couple stopped by the roadside to rest. When the men attacked them, Mullane ran and made his way six miles to Des Arc, where he notified the authorities.

THINKS 'KIMMEL' ABNORMAL.

Surgeon Who Relieved Brain Pressure Says Claimant Was Insane.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 21.—Dr. Loren Wilder of Chicago, who performed an operation last April on the skull of the man held by a life insurance company of New York to be George A. Kimmel, testified in the Circuit Court to-day that the man known to him as the Kimmel claimant was insane when he operated on him, and that he did not believe he ever would be normal mentally.

Dr. Wilder told the jury that he removed a bone which had penetrated the brain for one-eighth of an inch. He said that such an injury had been known to change the color of the victim's eyes. The claimant's eyes are of a different color than Kimmel's were when he disappeared.

Harvester Suit Hearing To-morrow.

A hearing in the Government suit against the International Harvester Company of America is to be held in the Federal Building to-morrow. Subpoenas were issued for Charles Steele of J. P. Morgan & Co., but he is too ill to appear; Leslie D. Ward, who died in London on July 13, 1910, and George W. Hebard, who died on Nov. 17 last. The witnesses who are likely to be examined are E. M. F. Miller, R. Wilson, W. C. Law, John Daly, and Archer Brown.

SENFF ART WORKS COSTLY.

Sugar Merchant's Paintings Appraised at $822,300.

An appraisal of the estate of Charles H. Senff, the sugar merchant, who died at his home, The Beeches, at Whitestone, L. I., on Aug. 28, 1911, has just been completed by Philip Frank, the Transfer Tax Appraiser of Queens. He finds the estate to be worth $11,666,744. This does not include $630,000 which, it is alleged, Effingham Lawrence owes the estate. This is now in litigation. According to the appraisal, the real estate is worth $459,000; the cash in hand at the date of Mr. Senff's death was $202.991; personal chattels and household goods and works of art, $844,230; bonds held at the time of death, $4,869,195, and stocks, $3,300,-357.

George Durand Ruel appraised the art collection at $822,300. The paintings include works by Ziem, Josef Israels, Chavannes, Millet, and Daubigney. "The Burgomaster," by Franz Hals, is appraised at $150,000; Velasquez's portrait of Gen. Spanola at $75,000; Corot landscapes are valued at $45,000, $15,000, $20,-000, $15,000, $3,000, $30,000, and $5,000, respectively, and the "Woman Reading" at $5,000. A Van Der Neer is valued at $10,000, a Luini at $12,000, a landscape by Hobemma at $20,000, a coast scene by Farner at $25,000, a landscape by Claude Lorraine at $10,000, Rousseau's "Road in the Woods" at $10,000, and his "Gypsy Camp" at $7,500, a landscape by Daubigney is valued at $15,000, and Delacroix's "Othello" at $12,000. Rubens's "One Wise Man" is valued at $10,000 and his portrait of the "Second Wise Man" at $10,000. Holbein's portrait of an old man is valued at $15,000; Franz Hals's portrait of himself is valued at $10,000, and Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Girl" at $50,000, and P. de Hoogh's "Interim" at $60,000.

WILL LEARN FOOD SECRETS.

Novel Exhibits for Visitors to Exposition Opening To-morrow.

Forty of the leading women's clubs and philanthropic organizations are interested in the Domestic Science and Pure Food Exposition which will open at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory to-morrow evening and continue until Nov. 2. A Domestic Science Congress will be open during the exposition with Mrs. Winifred Harper Cooley presiding. Cooking lessons will be given from the stage each morning. There also will be elaborate demonstrations of what not to cook.

A booth devoted to specimens of diseased meat found by Government Inspectors in their slaughter house work will be one of the interesting points in the exposition. This will be but one of many of the Federal exhibits, for Roscoe E. Doolittle, Dr. Wiley's successor as head of the Bureau of Chemistry, has directed a full display of the work in food and drugs.

The general exhibits will include a display of adulterated foods, illustrating how chemicals are employed to cheapen the cost of production, how they impair the nutritive quality of foods, and permit the utilization of factory refuse in the manufacture of materials for the table. Specimens of cloth dyed fast and bright with coloring matter extracted from foods will be shown, and a chair firmly welded together with ordinary furniture glue extracted from ice cream will be in the exhibit.

FREE NURSE OF BLAME.

Mrs. Haight's Relatives Forgive Girl Who Caused Her Death.

After having remained unconscious for twenty-four hours, Florence Harris, the nurse who caused the death of Mrs. Alice Haight on Sunday, when she mistook oxalic acid for epsom salts, regained her senses early yesterday morning. Questioners found her mind a blank concerning the mistake. "Emotional amnesia" was her condition, according to the statement from Dr. R. Oliver Phillips, chief consulting physician of the Homeopathic and Maternity Hospital where Mrs. Haight was a patient.

Coroner Iles said the hospital authorities as well as Mr. Haight and the dead woman's relatives had absolved the young nurse from all blame, and that expressions of praise and sympathy for her were all he had heard from any quarter. The Coroner said, however, that he would push to the limit his inquiry into the presence of the poison so close to the salts which it so clearly resembled. The cooks at the hospital all protested that they used other cleaning substances and the presence of the poison remained an uncleared mystery.

"Why, only the other day," said Dr. Phillips, "one of the doctors stained his hands and wanted to clean them with oxalic acid. He asked for some and was told that the hospital never kept it around. We simply cannot understand how it got in."

G. B. Schley Gives $3,000 to School.

Special to The New York Times.

BERNARDSVILLE, N. J., Oct. 21.—Grant B. Schley of the New York brokerage firm of Moore & Schley, one of the wealthy residents of Far Hills, suggested a few days ago that the Board of Education add a few extras to the new $16,000 school now building. After doing a little figuring the members told Mr. Schley that they would like to follow his suggestion, but that it would cost $3,000 more than the board had available. Mr. Schley drew a check for the sum named and mailed it to the Board of Education.

OVATION FOR DR. BRUNORI.

Bronx Italians Cheer Accused Extortioner, Released on Bail.

Indicted for attempted extortion and released on a $5,000 bail bond, Dr. Nicola Brunori, a tall, handsome Italian physician, returned last evening from the Criminal Courts Building to his home at 385 Morris Avenue, the Bronx.

For this accused man there was no neighborhood avoidance, no averted faces. He was met at the 149th Street Subway exit by all of Little Italy. A thousand neighbors shouted their confidence and waved American and Italian flags, and while women tossed their babies in the air a group of the most muscular men charged on the doctor and raised him to their shoulders. He was carried the three blocks to Morris Avenue and then to his home, the main figure in a triumphal procession.

Once inside, he sought the peace of his household, but the neighborhood would have none of it. They swarmed under his windows and cheered until again and again he had to come to the window and speak to them.

"Dear friends and countrymen, you see in me an innocent man," the doctor would say, while the women all exclaimed how fine a man he was and the men all told how many charity patients he had helped.

Across the street Vito Pitarro hid behind the counter of his drug store. It was Pitarro who accused the doctor and two veterinaries of having tried to frighten him into paying money to the "Iron Hand." It was he who caused their arrest last Thursday evening, and so ugly were the threats last evening from the crowd in the street that he locked his doors and sent to the Tremont Street Station for guards.

The police patroled his place all the evening, afraid Little Italy would decide the psychological moment had arrived to blow Pitarro and his shop into eternity.

Despite the outburst of local confidence in the doctor, the police say they have the "goods" on him, and let it go at that.

TITANIC MEMORIAL BENEFIT.

Mrs. Hammond Arranges for a Performance in Century Theatre.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Secretary of the Woman's Titanic Memorial Fund Committee, announced yesterday that a benefit performance was being arranged for Friday afternoon Dec. 6 to obtain money for the memorial which will be built in Washington. The memorial is to be a tribute from the women of America to the men who went down with the Titanic in order that women and children might be saved.

Mrs. Hammond came to this city from her home in Gloucester, Mass., to arrange for the performance with Daniel Frohman, President of the Actors' Fund of America, and Charles Burnham, President of the Association of Theatre Managers. George C. Tyler of the Century Theatre gave the use of the Century Theatre for the performance. Many prominent actors and actresses, it was said, had already agreed to appear.

The decision to give a benefit performance is a change from the original plan of the Women's Memorial Fund Committee as announced last May. It had been hoped to get the necessary $100,000 by asking each woman in the country to subscribe $1. It was announced yesterday that only $30,000 was collected in this way. Mrs. William Howard Taft gave the first dollar.

POLICEMAN BADLY STABBED.

Former Prisoner Assaults Him While He Is Out with His Family.

Policeman Charles Potter of the Union Market Station was attacked and seriously injured while he was returning with his wife and three children to his home, at 182 East End Avenue, last night, by a man whom he had arrested for disorderly conduct in a moving-picture theatre several weeks ago.

The policeman and his family were at Eighty-eighth Street and East End Avenue when the man stepped in front of them and called Potter a vile name. Potter struck at him, but broke his arm at the first blow. His assailant closed in on him, drew a knife, and slashed the policeman on the face and body.

Mrs. Potter and her eldest son, Wilbur, tried to help the policeman, who, helpless with his broken arm, was stabbed again and again till several men interfered. The man with the knife then freed himself and ran away.

During the fight Mrs. Potter drew her husband's revolver from his pocket and concealed it under her dress, explaining afterward that she did not wish to see any one killed.

OSTERHAUS PRAISES CITY.

Fleet Commander Sends Formal Thanks for Hospitality.

Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, wrote yesterday to the Mayor from the Brooklyn Navy Yard to express gratitude for the reception of the fleet in this city.

"It was grand in every way," he said. "It was on a scale that could be realized only in a community so large in its generosity and hospitality as New York. To all of us it was an epoch in our lives, and to the navy as a whole it was an evidence of interest and pride in the same, that will have a beneficial effect on the whole country."

In conclusion, the Admiral thanked in particular the Citizens' Committee which "did so much to make each and every feature of the reception a success and a pleasure."
